Cornish names are derived from the ancient Celtic language of Cornwall. Many can be traced to their original roots, and their meanings can be explained in English:

Trengove, from "tre an gof"	tre	=	homestead (of)
	an	=	the
	gof	=	smith
Polmear, from "pol mur"	mur	=	great
	pol	=	pool
Pendarvis, from "pen derow"	pen	=	end (or headland)
	derow	=	(of) oak trees

The Cornish also have many surnames that fit patterns typical of other languages:

(1) Patronymic names

Probert, from "map Robert"	map	=	son of	(cf. "mac" in the Scottish version of Celtic)
Powell, from "map Howell"
Prowse, from "map Rowse"

(2) Place names

Boscawen, from "bos scawen"	bos = dwelling, scawen = (by elder trees)
Curnow, from "kernow"	"Land of the Kern", Cornishman, Cornwall
Rosvear, from "ros vur"	ros = heath, mur --> vur = great

(3) Occupational names

Angove, from "an gof"	the smith (see above)
Dyer, from "tyer"	thatcher

(4) Common objects, animals, etc.

Baragwanath, from "bara gwanath"	bara = bread, gwanath = of wheat
Hobby, from "hobba"	hobba = riding horse

Sources and Associations for Cornish Family Historians

One of the most powerful tools for any family historian is "networking" ... staying in touch with others who have similar interests. The single best forum for family historians interested in Cornwall and the Cornish is the organization with thousands of members worldwide:

Cornwall Family History Society
5 Victoria Square
Truro, Cornwall TR1 2RS
UNITED KINGDOM

CFHS has an excellent quarterly Journal, a library, and simple procedures for helping overseas members access the Society's resources.

There are other document repositories and libraries in Cornwall that are valuable sources of information:

Cornish Local Studies Library
Redruth, Cornwall TR15 2QE
UNITED KINGDOM

Cornwall County Record Office
County Hall
Truro, Cornwall TR1 3AY
UNITED KINGDOM

The Cornish American Connection
Murdoch House
Cross Street
Redruth, Cornwall TR15 2BU

Royal Institute of Cornwall
Courtney Library
River Street
Truro, Cornwall TR1 2SJ

There are also organizations that offer the opportunity for "networking" here in the USA:

Cornish American Heritage Society
c/o Bill Curnow
3438 Pennyroyal Road
Port Charlotte, FL 33953

Cornish Heritage Society East
c/o Mrs. Virginia Richmond
439 Brookside Avenue
Oakhurst, NJ 07755

Note: The Cornish American Heritage Society has published an excellent resource, A Directory of Some Cornish Resources in North America and Cornwall. A few copies may still be available at a price of $7 (postage included); contact Mrs. Jean Jolliffe, 2405 North Brookfield Road, Brookfield, WI 53045.

Last, but most assuredly not least, are the formidable resources of the LDS Family History Centers and of the helpful, knowledgeable volunteers who staff those Centers.

ORIGINS OF THE NAME TAY ` TOY ` TOYE

The most common variations of the family name of Toy is Tay-Toy-Toye. The author has found frequent use of all three variations within one progenitor and his immediate descendants. A prime example of this is the descendents of William Toy circa 1620 of Boston Massachusetts who frequently used both spellings of Tay and Toy; then again in the descendents of John Toy of Cornplanter Twp. Venango County Penna who with his descendents changed their name to Toye. The name is of multi-national origin with its roots extending back to the Bible which, according to various chapters within the Bible, begin with King Toi (Tau-Taw) during the period of King David.

Since the biblical period of time the name has gone through many ethnic variations of spelling as descendents emigrated from country to country, nation to nation and continent to continent. Occasionally we find throughout the world and even here in America some who have retained the biblical spelling even to this day. Throughout the three volumes you will see evidence of the three major spellings of Tay-Toy-Toye within the descendents of one progenitor.

Early Colonial records of New Jersey, Delaware and Pennsylvania (probably in error) indicate that the descendants of George and Christina Toy of the Swedish Colony of New Jersey may have used four different spellings. These are Toy, Tay, Toye and Taw. As a matter of fact, the Colonial records of New Jersey in numerous and various documents types such as wills, deeds, marriage records, death records, etc carry the name of Gertrude Toy, daughter of James Toy, as Gertray Taw, and as Gertraude Tay.

Names have historically served as a fingerprint of life, some-times giving a basic clue to the owner's personality and ethnic origin. A knowledge of naming practices in the country of origin is of major importance in helping us to trace our respective family line back to a village or place, an occupation, or it may frequently give us insight as to what our ancester's profession may have been or even his physical attributes or what he may have looked like.

The study of Onomastics is the study of tracing such names back to the medieval villages and manors of the person's origin, how or where the name began and the subsequent evolution of its various spellings. Surnames evolved from four general sources:

1). A person's occupation, trade or profession. Miller, Baker, etc.

2). where he lived or the place of origin. For example the name of Wallace, a derivitive of Wallen or Walsh, originally indicated the person was from the country of Wales.

3). The name of the father.
For example: Williamson

4). A personal characteristic or in some instances, perhaps, a dominant physical feature. The name Bowser (Bausser) in French means the 'Fair One.' Toy(e) in Ireland means the 'Sturdy One.' and in Wales, it may mean the 'King's Armorer.'

The name of Tay-Toy-Toye is a comparatively rare and uncommon surname. There are probably less than sixteen thousand individuals in the entire world who have this combination of names. The name and or its common variations can be associated and found among such ethnic groups as the Irish, English, Welsh, French, Scandinavian, Syrian and Asian peoples. As an example; the family name of Toy in Ireland, as described in the book 'British Family Names' appears to be derived from variant spellings such as Tighe, Tooey, Tuohy, Touhig and O'Toye.

These names were previously derived from early Dutch names of Tahey and Tooy. In Belgium, the family name is derived from Tye-Thy-Thye and are directly related to the root name of Teigh (pronounced Toy). Many of the Virginia, Delaware, New Jersey, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Kentucky Toy descendants can be traced all the way back to the 12th century and are generally of Welsh origin..

Accounts of these Welsh Toy families can be traced through the following books:

1). Dwnn, Heraldic Visitation of Wales, i, 137

2). Wood's Athenae Oxon 1500-1714

3). Nash's Hist. and Antiq. of Worcestershire, ii. 381, 382

4). Chamber's Biographical Illustrations of Worcestershire, 1820 p. 136

5). Hunter's Chorus Vatum in Brit. Mus. Addit. MS 24489. f. 183

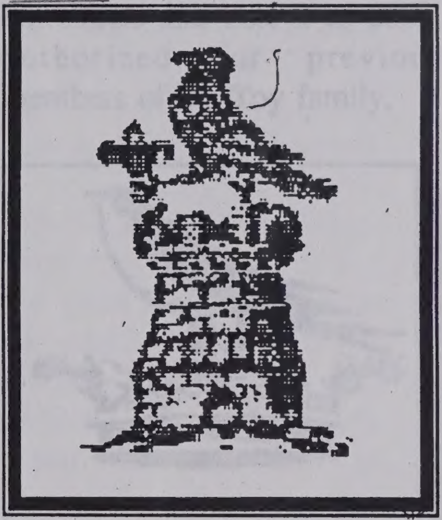
According to the Athenae Cantabrigenaeus p. 1063, Robert Toy who died 10 Feb 1556 and his wife Elizabeth came originally from Wales. Prior to the year 1540 he had set up a printing press at the sign of the Bell in Saint Paul's Churchyard, London England. Another reference gives Wyman Toy, circa 1250 as probably his progenitor and appears to be the first reference to any Toy in Wales.

From Robert Toy's press was issued a 'Prymar of Salisbury Use' in 1541. 'Three Godly Sermons' by Wm Peryn in 1546 and many other Biblical translations in addition to Chaucer's Works published in 1555.

Robert's son Humphrey Toy was born in London about 1540 and was made free of the Stationer's Company by his father's copy on 11 March 1557. He died in Bristol on 10 Oct 1577 and she had a handsome monument erected (his wife Margery) in his honor and memory; in addition she carried on the business until her death.

Arbor's Transcript of the Stationer's Register confuses the above Humphrey with another Humphrey Toy, a merchant tailor in 1583 who was most probably his son.

Another Humphrey Toy possibly the son of this second Humphrey was made free of the Stationer's Company on 5 June 1637 and, is most likely the Humphrey Toy who arrived in the Virginia Colony around 1640.



Sir John Toy Family Crest

*Note: The above family crest is listed in Fairbairn's Crests of the families of Great Britain and Ireland by Laurence Butters, Seal Engraver in ordinary to the Queen for Scotland. Most likely it is that of Sir John Toy (See the vignette on the Meyrick family).

John Toy, an author of prominence and son of John Toy of Worcester, was born in that city in ~~161~~ 1616. John Jr died on 28 Dec of 1663. He matriculated from Pembroke College, Oxford on 23 May 1628 with an M.A. on 2 July 1634.. His wife Martha survived him and died on 10 April 1677. After filling the office of chaplain to the bishop of Hereford, he became Headmaster of the free school of Worcester from whence he transferred to the King's School in 1643. On 22 Oct 1641 he was presented to the Vicarage of Stoke Prior, Worcestershire. This John Toy is apparently the son of Sir John Toy, esq. who's biog appears elsewhere in this volume.

Although there are many Colonial sources of information which appear to link Humphrey Toy and John Toy of Virginia Colony to George Toy of the Swedish Colony of New Jersey, the author cannot provide conclusive evidence showing such a direct linkage. There are numerous comments and notes which appear in authoritive journals of Williams and Mary and other leading magazines which tend to imply that this is so.

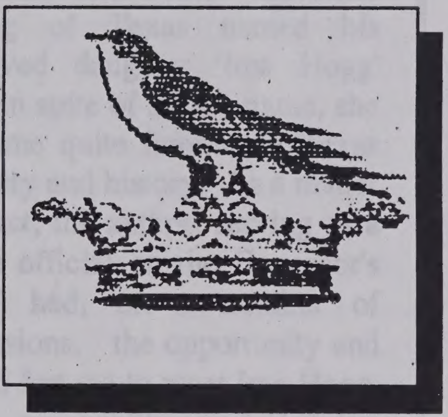
As we travel along the pathway of serendipity into the book 'Family Names and their Story' that the names of Day and Toye were early French names derived from a French town named Dovay France.

Frequently the French exchanged the letters 'D' and 'T' in the spelling of a word. We can also find a book in England which traces the name of Toy-Toye to the French Hugenots who escaped from France to England in the early days of the great persecution. Colonial records indicate that 'Pierre de Toy' a French Hugenot escaped from France and arrived in the Virginia Colony of Jamestown aboard de Sailly Fout on 31 July 1700 along with 270 other passengers.

The author occasionally has correspondence with Eric and Wendy Toye of England. Wendy is the world famous choreographer, actress and ballet dancer in Mid Summer Night Dream and whose biography appears in many books of biographical reference. Her brother Eric Samuel Toye, husband of the well known Ballet Artist Doris Sonne, has informed me that their ancesters are indeed French Hugenots who fled France during the above persecution.

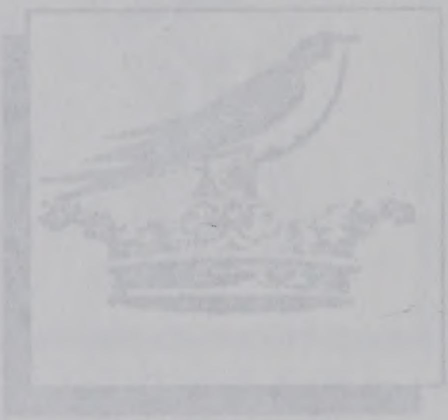
Samuel Toye, their grand father, purveyor of Laces and Silk to the Queen, was part owner of the Toye Group of Gold Mines at Cripple Creek Colorado around 1900. The author has in his possession copies of letters written by the other owners of the Toye Group Mines and forwarded to Samuel Toye indicating shipments of trunks of gold to the above referenced grandfather. See descendents of Guillaume Henri Toye.

Note: The Mural Crown below is # 14 on Plate 128 of Fairbairn's and lists it as being authorized for previous members of the Toy family.



Syrian books give the name a spelling of Toi retained from its biblical spelling and their later conquest of Israel.

Professor Crawford Howell Toy (see the profile on Toys related to President George Washington and Gen. Robert E Lee) of Harvard University in the early 1800's gained world renown for his biblical translations and teachings. His sister had a son, Crawford Toy Johnson, who is the founder of Coca Cola Bottling Company United, Inc.



Crawford Toy Johnson III is the present CEO of the above company. See the profile on the Crawford Toy Johnson Family elsewhere in Vol One.

Another nephew of Prof Toy was a brakeman on the train that the famous Casey Jones ran into on that ill fated trip about which the song 'Casey Jones' was written. For those who are not familiar with the old historical ballad, it began thus:

Casey Jones was the rounders name
On a six-eight wheeler he came to fame.
Mounted to the cabin with the orders in his hand.
Said, this is my trip to the promised land.

Many dialectal spelling variations exist from country to country in conformance with the various language root spellings used. The Roman spelling was Toius. Credence to this spelling is given by the inscription written on a handsome historical marker erected at the All Saints Church, London England. The following words were written in Latin,

"Humfridus Toius Londinesis, Jacet in Hoc Tumulo, Qui Obitt 16 Oct. 1577." This inscription was written in honor of the famous author and publisher Humphrey Toy.

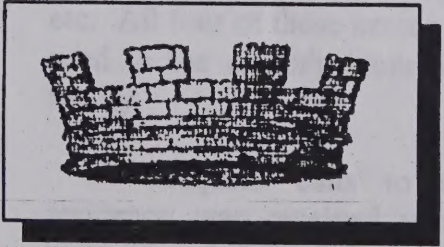
Language changes, carelessness and a high degree of illiteracy during and preceding the colonial epoch are contributing factors to spelling variations compounded by the most unfortunate situation that occurred when the person did not even know how to spell his or her own name.

Such conditions became the basic ingredients responsible for the many ways possible for names to be written. In many instances, the town clerk, immigration officer, census taker and/or the minister or parson would spell the name phonetically in the way it sounded as spoken by the person giving the name to him.

Such confusion in the spelling of names was also frequently compounded by the 'perceived accent' as used by the individual. Occasionally a person would choose to regionalize the name so that it would not be thought of as foreign or, perhaps, be associated with a specific ethnic group.

A bit of humor or an unfortunate circumstance may frequently creep into the choice of names. Jean E. Laird in an article titled 'Whats in a Name'? has a beautiful illustration of how some given names are chosen. She writes: "There is recorded the name of a child whose father died before her birth. The mother had framed the death certificate and had it hanging on the living room wall. Two words on it, although the mother didn't know their meaning, sounded beautiful to her and also looked attractive on the certificate. Thus, when the little girl was born, she was named in honor of her father by giving her the name of 'Angina Pectoris Smith.'

William Brewster, who arrived on the Mayflower, named his children: Love, Wrestling, Patience and Fear. Governor Hogg of Texas named his beloved daughter 'Ima Hogg' and in spite of such a name, she became quite famous in Texas society and history. As a matter of fact, the author, serving as a state official on the Governor's staff had, on a number of occasions, the opportunity and good fortune to meet Ima Hogg. Her personality and bearing radiated with personality, business acumen and social prominence; a lovely person indeed.



Note: The above Toy family crest was found in Fairbairn's Crests on Plate 128 # 18

A nephew of the author was named 'Storm' principally because on the night of his birth a violent storm was raging which denied the family doctor an opportunity to make his presence available at the child's birth. Usually the loving parent(s) who bestow such unusual names have no realization of the enormous handicap and embarrassment which will be experienced throughout their lives because the parents have placed upon their offspring such an encumbrance. This brings to mind the popular folk song "A Guy Named Sue." A well known movie actress (Cher Bono) has named her daughter 'Chastity.' Can you imagine the burden this poor child must carry throughout her lifetime.

A few of the given names from "An Account of the Origin of Surnames" according to The Crescent Family Record have the following meaning:

Abigail ~ My Father's Joy
Anna ~ Graceful Lady
Blanche ~ White
Christine ~ Famine
David ~ Blessed
Deborah ~ A Bee
Elizabeth ~ Consecrated to God; Queen
Florence ~ Flourishing or Blooming Hannah ~ Graceful
Helen ~ Light Radiant
Harold ~ Champion; General of an Army.
Herman ~ Warrior
Irene ~ Peaceful
Joseph ~ Son of God
Margaret ~ A Pearl
Mary ~ Star of the East; Rebellion; Bitter
Rachel ~ An Ewe; Lamb
Raymond ~ Ray of Light, pure
Rebecca ~ An Enchanting Beauty
Sarah ~ A Princess
Stephen ~ A Crown
Stella ~ Star; Pure
Theodore ~ Gift of God
Timothy ~ Fearing of God
Virginia ~ Virgin

The derivation of names is too long to list here and in other books they may have different meanings. There appears to be no known race or ethnic group free of the name Toy. The three volumes contain several hundred colored or negro individuals with the name of Toy. Probably acquired during the period of slavery.

An excellent example of the above colored clan of Toys is in the documentation of Massachusett's history where a negro, Private Jack Toy, during the American Revolutionary War enlisted on 18 August 1777 serving three months and twenty four days near Stillwater and later serving at Bunker Hill.

Thus we can honestly say that people with the name of Tay-Toy-Toye come in all races, colors and ethnic groups including a number of apparently pure bred Reservation Indians who carry the name. As a matter of fact, the first Indian who played major league baseball is James Madison Toy Id= 7609 and he is also the first Indian to be inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame. A Vignette on James Madison Toy appears in Vol 3.

The name appears frequently among individuals of Asian descent. In major Chinese dialects Toy means tortoise. 'Ming Toy', a name frequently used among those in the San Francisco Bay area, means 'Bright Tortoise.' 'Chan Toy' usually means 'Old Tortoise,' and so on.

In more recent generations the Chinese have frequently used Americanized first names. During the author's tenure at NASA in Houston Texas, there were several dozen Chinese families named Toy. Mostly business people with children having the names of Harold, Tim, Steve, Dwight, etc. All four of these names are used in the author's immediate family.

Frequent calls to our residence was received which were intended for one of the above individuals, however, after the exchange of name greetings, the conversation hopelessly bogged down when the person on one end of the line was speaking Chinese and the other was in English.

The number of Chinese surnames is not large, perhaps, a thousand or more and it follows that hundreds of persons named Chow or Ling or Won or Toy may have no family relationship. They share the name purely by chance at the time they became an immigrant to the USA.

The name Toy also occurs among the Japanese in America. During World War II, the Japanese Americans, especially in California, were persecuted unmercifully without cause and many of them ended up in concentration camps. It is no wonder then that to avoid concentration camps some of them shortened their names to 'Toy.' A few examples of such names which may have been shortened are Toyota, Toysuma, Toyama, etc.

Toyo in some Japanese dialects means plentiful. Yama means mountain. Moto means origin and 'O' means little. Shima means island and Fuji means wisteria. To many Japanese Toyoto would mean Plentiful Ricefield. Many of the Chinese and Japanese Americans with the name of Toy have received a significant degree of international recognition especially in the disciplines of science; technology and medicine. Frequently their biographies appear in distinguished books of biographical note such as Who's Who, American Men and Women of Physical and Biological Science and others. The author having the honor of his own biography placed in many of these books is well aware of the extreme difficulty and recognition that goes with obtaining this achievement.

The family name of Tay-Toy-Toye evolved over the centuries from spellings such as Tuve, Tovey, Towey, Toui, Tau, and Toi, a name brought to England from biblical times by Tovi, The Proud, a follower of CNUT. see (Dithemic Derivation of Names, London England) a dictionary of British surnames.)

People with the name of Tue who migrated to the British Isles from Norway accepted the English spelling of Toy and Toye. The Irish name of O'Toy was derived from Touhy, O'Touhy, Touhey and Tighe meaning descendent of the sturdy man, grandson of Tuath, meaning Rustic Lord.

The Toy Coat of Arms as appears in this book bears a dragon with a spear and axe to signify that he was the King's Armorer. Toy in Ireland means Lord or Master and the book "Old Galway" speaks of three Toy brothers who ruthlessly ruled the County of Galway Ireland with an iron fist.

The Toy families of Armstrong Co Penna bear a strong admixture of English, Irish, German and Swedish ancestry. They also have Quaker blood coursing through their veins. William Penn did indeed make a pilgrimmage to Germany to recruit potential Quakers for his Colony, Cavalier Yeoman Pioneer Toys.

In early Colonial records the term of Cavalier, Yeoman and Pioneer appears in association with certain people of that era. Some are referred to in these documents as Cavalier, others as Yeoman and more frequently as Pioneers. For example there is the Book titled "Blue Stem Prairie Pioneers" which provides biographical references on Toy families who settled in the Blue Stem region of Kansas. In Colonial Virginia the 'Land Grant Books' refer to some individuals in it as Yeoman, a term generally meaning a wealthy plantation owner. In early New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia books of deeds and other historical records, the term Cavalier Yeoman Pioneer is associated with a very few of its more prominent citizens.

In the Colonial records of Massachusetts another term is frequently used, specifically, the term of "Freeman" is applied to certain individuals. A Freeman was an individual recognized by the church and other governing bodies as an individual given the status of special recognition within the Church and having the right to vote. This was a title of extreme prestige. William Toy was granted Freeman status in Boston in the year of 1630, just eight years after the Mayflower epic. He was a wealthy dairyman there, paid a large part of the Deacon's salary and had the honored right to sit in the Deacons Box.

Few can claim recognition as Cavalier Yeoman Pioneers of America. A disproportionate number of these early pioneer Toys are listed within this category. The name Toy appears in a number of Colonial documents even prior to the landing of the Mayflower and the early Pilgrims. In fact, the Pilgrims were late bloomers in Colonial America, perhaps, as much as ten years after the first attempts to colonize America. Bridgit Toy and her daughter appear in a will dated 1611, about ten years before the Mayflower arrived.

There is no question that some of these early Toy families can seriously lay claim to the title of "Nation Builders" and the early Colonial documents are heavily laced with the term of Cavalier Yeoman Pioneer appearing before their name. The New England Genealogy Book of the Holcomb Family which contains numerous family members by the name of Toy proudly defines their clan as "Nation builders."

When major historical events occurred, positive and authentic documents can be found to verify that a Toy or descendents of a Toy were indeed there. A few of the examples will be listed here and many others are documented throughout the three volumes of the Toy Genealogy. Like the ficticious World War II hero with the slogan "Kilroy was here" so too Toys seem to be ubiquitous and appear to 'have been there.'

a). At Jamestown with the founding of the "Virginia Company" see Bridget Toy and her daughter Elizabeth Wynn, circa 1611. Also see the data about Humphrey, Robert, and John Toy, all of whom, were listed as Yeoman Cavalier plantation owners of the Virginia Colony prior to 1700.

It appears to be more than coincidence that the names Robert, Humphrey and John are the names of some of the early 1540 to 1630 Toy families of England so well documented elsewhere in this book.

b). Dr Calvert Rogers Toy who married Fielding Lewis Douthat cousin of the Fielding Lewis Douthat who was the husband of Elizabeth Washington, sister of President George Washington. The children of Dr Calvert Rogers Toy are also descendents of the direct ancesters of President George Washington thereby making them 'blood relatives' of President Washington.

c). Prof. Crawford Howell Toy, a world famous biblical author and Professor of Hebrew languages at Harvard University. His biography can be found in almost all notable books of biographical reference.

d). Crawford Toy Johnson, a first cousin of Crawford Howell Toy, is the founder of Coca Cola Bottling Company United, Inc. His grandson Crawford Toy Johnson III is the present President and CEO of the company.

e). Sam Toy, present CEO and Manager of Ford Motor Co, LTD, England

f). Grandson of Lucy Toy Johnson was the brakeman on the famous ill-fated "Casey

h). Sgt Frederick E Toy was awarded the Medal of Honor. He was the First Sgt of Company G, 7th Cavalry at Wounded Knee Creek, South Dakota on 29 Dec 1890.

i). Harvey M Toy, Fmr Chairman of California Highway Commission, an international financier and President of the San Francisco Hotel Association (circa 1930).

j). Norman E Toy Financial Accountant responsible for the Rockefellow Trust Fund. Norman's mother Ruby Shuler Toy is a Senior Account Executive for Merrill Lynch of Orlando Florida. This family line can be found among the Oil City Penna Toys.

k). Charles Samuel Toy, member of the American Expeditionary Forces and recipient of the Distinguished Service Cross was killed 23 October 1918 at Marchville France.

l). William Toy of Boston (circa 1640) had four distinguished sons as officers in the King Phillip French and Indian War.

m). Samuel Toy during the American Revolution was issued a "Letter of Marque" by the Federal Government; for his Privateer vessels which attacked the British Merchantmen.

n). Harry S Toy, LLB, Justice of the Supreme Court, Lamsing Mich, also served as a Captain in the AEF France and was on battle front duty 15 Dec 1917.

The list is much too long to continue here, however, just name the field of endeavor or prominent event and you will most likely find a Toy there. Indeed Toys, like the legendary Kilroy were 'there.' Some of the best preserved artifacts citing such a rich heritage can be found within the Archives of the states of Massachusetts, New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia.

The descendents of Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy of Harford County Maryland are of truly legendary proportions with accomplishments in almost every major field of endeavor. His descendents have married into almost every prominent family in America. We are talking about marrying into families such as the Washingtons, Stanhopes, the Lees, Bordens, Rusts, Howells, Ensigns and others too many to mention.

The Billerica area of Boston, Mass abounds with recorded artifacts concerning the descendents of William Toy and his brothers who settled there around the year of 1630, having first settled in New Amsterdam (Long Island) New York. In the early Massachusetts Colonial records the Boston area was known as 'Ye Toy Mountain.' His son John gave his life in battle during the King Phillip's War.

Another son, Lieutenant Nathaniel Toy of King Phillip's War married Bathsheba Wyman, daughter of John Wyman and Sarah Nutt. In John Savage's book 'First Settlers of New England' he mentions that Nathaniel's grandson Major Sam Toy of the American Revolution was also a distinguished soldier of the Revolution.

(Encyclopedia of Biography p-345).

Yet another son Jeremiah Toy, born 19 May 1657, married Mercy Woodward, mother of his six children. He was a soldier, farmer and member of the city council of Billerica, Boston Mass.

Humphrey Ann and Elizabeth Toy, Kingston Parish, Gloster Co Virginia, married the illustrious Whiting brothers of Virginia. Records indicate that many of the early colonial Toy men were sea captains and wealthy plantation owners.

The author has traced most all of the Armstrong County Penna Toys back to a single progenitor, George Andrew and Christina Toy. Prior to 1660 George was a sea captain with the Ketch Hopewell.

Provincial court records indicate that George left the Barbadoes on 12 Nov 1669 with a cargo of rum and negroes for Great Egg Harbor, New Jersey. George Toy is listed in the church records of the Swedish Colony of New Jersey as both George Taw (Swedish spelling) and as George Toy.

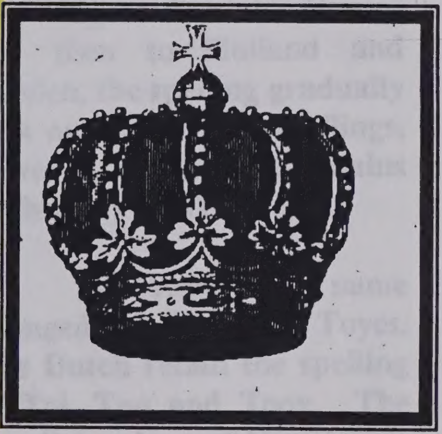
The history of the Steelman family tells about Christina's children as being Elias (Id-32), James (Id-34), Susanna Toy Steelman (Id-33) and Christina Toy (Id-69). It is uncertain how many other children George and Christina may have had. Their son Capt James Toy of the Sloop Lark is the direct line of descent to the Armstrong County Penna Toys.

In the NJ will of Margaret Toy it is mentioned James' three children as James, Margaret and Elias. Son James (Id-46) , also a sea captain, married Mary Borden and they had issue of eight children. (Post Rev doc V-XXXVI p-232)

Their son Richard, a Revolutionary War hero, (Id-70) and his wife Rebecca Willard are the parents of William Toy (Id-77) of Washington County Penna, the progenitor of most all the Armstrong Co Penna Toys.

Richard, a NJ Militiaman, was killed in the Revolutionary War defending his father's plantation. William was given, by his grandfather's will, the portion of the plantation which would have gone to his father Richard, had he survived.

KING TOI of HAMATH



Biblical King

Descendent of Ham

In biblical times the name of Toy was spelled Toi or Tou or Toah in various references and the Bible. In later years, those who were captured by Syria used the spelling of Toi and Taw. The Latin or Roman spelling was Toius.

We learn from the scriptures (-2Sa 8:9-12:1 Ch 18-9-11) that King Toi (pronounced Toy) upon learning that King David had defeated their mutual enemy Hadadezer, the King of Zobah; Toi immediately sent his son Joram (Hadoram) to congratulate King David.

Toi was King of Hamath, then an independent kingdom (2Sa8:3,9,10: 1 Ch 18: 3,9,10) however, during King Soloman's reign, the kingdom of Hamath appears to have been under Israel's control, evidenced by the building of storage cities in the region by Soloman After Soloman's death Hamath gained it's independence, except for a brief period in the 9th century B. C. E. when Jereboam II temporarily brought it again under Israelite control (2Ki 14: 28).

In the 8th century B. C. E. Hamath and her neighbor's including the ten-tribe kingdoms of Israel were over run by the Assyrians in their sweep to world domination. Assyria's policy was to exchange and relocate her captives, and so, people of Hamath were brought in to replace inhabitants of Samaria and other nearby countries. It thus follows that people with the name of Toi became established in Syria and other nearby countries.

Hammath (Ham'math) was the 'father' of the House of Rechab and an ancester of certain Kenites. The name also refers to a fortified city of Naphtali which means place of a hot spring. The sulfurous spring gave Hamath it's name. The city of Hamath was the capital of a small Cananite kingdom in Syria during the early history of Israel.

The agricultural region surrounding it took the same name. During the Greek and Roman times the name of the city was Epiphanes, so named by Antiochus IV. Today it is ama, a shortened form of it's original name.

Although Hamath was thought to be of Hittite origin, it was likely founded by the Haathites, relatives of the Hittites, a post Flood family. Heth and Hamath, forefathers of these two family lines were the 2nd and 11th sons of Canaan, the son of Ham (Ge 10: 6, 15-18: Ch 1: 8, 13-16: the Hittites).

Sources on King Toi are "Antiquities of the Jews" by Flavius Josephus Porter.: Coates Bible: 2 Sam 8:9-10 King Toi: son Joram 1 Chr. 8:9-10 King Toi: son Hadadzezer. Book VII. (7) Ch V (5) Pgh-4 speakes of Toi. Period- between 1070-1051 BC. The family name can be found by it's root spelling in Biblical lands during the 10th century before the coming of Jesus.. The name had the mark of Nobility during the reign of King David and beyond to Canaan and the son's of Ham. From Syria, people by the name of Toi fled into Southern France and from there to the Netherlands and hence on to England, Ireland and presently to America.

Beginning with those who migrated into France and then to Holland and Sweden, the spelling gradually took on local ethnic spellings, however, for others it remains to this day as Toi.

In France the name changed to Toy and Toyes. The Dutch retain the spelling of Toi, Tou and Tooy. The Swedish colony of New Jersey carries spellings of Toi, Taw and Toy for its members. This is understandable because the Swedish Colony was a rich admixture of Swedish, Dutch and British Quakers. The descendents of George and Christina Toy were of Quaker origin, many of whom belonged to the Quaker church of that period.

An interesting poem taken from the Norfolk Reformer dated 17 Nov 1870 tells how the nuptials were tied in the olden day. A magistrate was permitted to perform the ceremony, provided there was a clergyman within 18 miles of either party to be married.

The following two verses were sung by the bride and bridegroom. The bridegroom sings two lines of his verse before the bride starts her part. The verse is dated 1809.

BRIDEGROOM

Firm united let us be,
In the bonds of unity;
Hymen waits to join our hands,
In his joyful nuptial bands;
Nought on earth
is worth delay;
Love and duty leads the way;
Then through life
we'll travel on,
Hand and hand,
till life is done.

BRIDE

Yes, we'll firm united be,
in the bonds of unity;
Hymen shall no longer wait,
To conduct us
through the gate;
Nature's voice
we must obey;
Love and duty leads the way;

Hand and hand
we'll walk through life;
You my husband,
I your wife.

The name `Raymond' is of French origin and is derived from two French words `rai' meaning a beam of light and the word `monde' meaning `world.' The Latin word `raimundus' is its exact equivalent thus meaning `a world of light.'

An unusual given name appears in the New York City poor records dated 1724 in the accounts of the Church Wardens. `Francyntie Toy, a poor traveler which came here with a Pass by the way of Merriland & had been taken by the Pyrats: came to us by order of the Mayor for an alms: as he toald us: gave him 6 shillings' end quote.

Since this was during the period of the Revolutionary War, the Pass referred to was a Colonial authorization to travel. The author has not been able to connect this Toy to any direct family line.

The family name Toy is patronymical in origin according to Harrison's "Surnames of the United Kingdom." and means `descendent of Tuath' ~~ Toy ~ Toye -- Scandinavian meaning `National Spear' thus armorer for the king. a warrior.

Bun - Gaillimh (Old Galway) was in the Province of Connau Ireland and in the year of 1227 Connaught was partitioned between Rich de Burg and the King with the "Three Tuaths" or Toys receiving one of the five contreds into which it was divided. The book `Old Galway' tells that these three Toy brothers circa 1227 ruled old Galway with an iron fist, ruthlessly and were indeed true warriors.

The author and also, of course, the public library has volumes on the origin and meaning of names which obviously is too lengthy to include here. Let it suffice to say that the name `Toy' is a proud and noble one.

estimates to be extremely low and he has already spent in excess of $80,000 over the past twelve years. This does not include the ten years of manhours needed to research, manage and assembly the data. Nor does it include printing cost of the book itself. A hardbound version, except for those graciously bound by the LDS Library at Salt Lake City, of this three volume set is still several years away.

The author, in his twelve years of research on the book, has met several friends or acquaintances doing similar research that have spent in excess of $100,000 on their book and still going strong with no end in sight. A true genealogy book requires enormous dedication, perserverance, financial resources and a boundless energetic drive. Usually, such books, will be accomplished in several volumes and require from ten to thirty years to complete.

An excellent example is the Virginia Rust Family Genealogy started by ancesters of the billionaire Rust Family of Texas. This book includes some of the descendents of the Thomas Dallam Toy family. According to the foreword in recent volumes of this book which the author located in the Texas State Library, it required a staff of thirty five people for thirty years to complete the four volumes.

Obviously one does not undertake such a project with financial remuneration as the driving motivation. Literally it is impossible to realize a financial gain, however, other rewards give much deeper satisfaction seldom experienced by less dedicated individuals. In the beginning, this author had no inkling as to the treasure trove of historical data behind the family name of Toy.

Ever increasing pride in the family name was experienced as each new source of data began to unfold. We cannot express the new found pride and respect gained by the increased knowledge about our ancesters. We believe anyone who examines the three volumes will be immeasureably touched with the same deep sense of pride and, indeed, will acquire a strong feeling of family association with them.

It is not easy to know where 'Family Folklore' will end and the genealogical research begin. Family Folklore as described by the Smithsonian Institution's `Family Folklore Project' is not quite the same thing as either genealogy or family history. According to them, it is a constantly evolving record of a family's daily life, social events and traditions.

Folklore touches on family surname, its origin and its meaning. What changes did it undergo and what are the stories about the changes. What are the traditional first names or middle ones that weave in and out over the many generations. To illustrate, it is quite common in many family lines to give the children a middle name which is the maiden name of the mother. You will find this practice in families who have a deep pride in their mother's heritage which is brought into the family line.

Four examples of giving the mother's maiden name as the children's middle name are:

a). The descendents of Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy and Frances Dallam of Harford County Maryland. Examples here are children named Richard Dallam Toy, Thomas Dallam Toy, Walter Dallam Toy, etc.

b). The second example of the mother's maiden name used is that of John Bordon

c). A third example is the Crawford 'Toy' Johnson family, founder of the Coca Cola Bottling Company United Inc.

d). A fourth interesting example is that of Jane Washington Toy because of her descendency and family relationship to that of President George Washington.

Folklore also deals with the part that politics, religion, marriage, school, occupation and recreation played. Usually the associated relatives have many famous and infamous characters in present and past generations. Some of them lend a significant touch of glamour and nostalgia to a book's composition. In retrospect, the author has not chosen to dwell on the negative qualities of relatives and ancesters as some genealogists occassionally do.

We all make mistakes throughout our lifetime that are best forgotten and left in the past. Environmental fluctuations leading to periods of high stress tend to mold or flaw the character of individuals who, when given different circumstances in their lives, probably would become a different character, perhaps, for better or maybe for worse.

Wars, plagues and depressions have played a significant role in any family lineage. The men of Toy families have valiantly fought in every major conflict or war of the last four hundred years. some have even won the Distinguished Service Cross and others (Frederick Toy) the Medal of Honor for the heroic loss of their life in the heat of battle.

Some of the Toys arrived in the Colonies because of the Irish Potatoe famine and others from religious persecution in France, Germany, England or Ireland. It makes one's heart swell with pride to know something of our heroic ancestors who challenged the perils of sea and the uncertainty of a life in a vast wilderness, in a truly strange land, rather than submit to oppression.

The book illuminates a significant number of Toy families who were among the very first to arrive in the colonies, even predating, by ten years or more, the arrival of the Pilgrim Fathers. It can definitely be said of the Toys that their contributions were that of pioneers, heroes, and nation builders.

It has been said that history has its sources, like the ancient Nile, hidden in the mysterious and impenetrable reaches of the unexplored and the unknown. The painter can trail his art forms backward to the crude sketches left on the rocks of the Aborigines, beyond that, perhaps, to the unknown. The genealogist must begin at the boundaries of mythology and continue to the tangibles of our present era. He must spend long painstaking hours in dingy courthouse basements and musty library record rooms.

More importantly, he must have the support of hundreds or thousands of family members who may have tidbits or even volumes of information locked up in the memorabilia of bygone days. Without such contributios the book would be of no consequence or of little value.

The author has received overwhelming support from several thousand individuals who have provided family data and have shown a keen interest in the book's completion. To all of you, please accept my deep sense of gratitude.

In recording the present as well as the past the author of such a book must mail letters of inquiry or for a response to one wherein he seeks additional information and corrections for revisions of revisions prior to any serious attempt to publish. Usually about three soft bound versions will be printed before an attempt at a final hard bound version, perhaps, ongoing for a period of ten to thirty years.

The soft bound versions are vitally essential for the peer group of relatives to examine, critique or provide corrections needed for the next version. Much enjoyment can be had and knowledge gained from such preliminary versions. Those who purchase such softbound versions should feel pride that they are making very important contributions to the final product.

The three volumes have been under constant revision after revision since it began in 1982. There is now light at the end of the tunnel where it may be possible to publish a hard bound final version in the year of 1996. The version now being printed is the last major revision that will be printed within the foreseeable future.

Far from complete is the story of the Tay-Toy-Toye family. There are breaks in the narrative which cannot be covered; records have been lost and even stolen, memory has failed and half revealed facts or conflicting data sources have barred the way. I will let you be the judge of its value as a historical and informative family record. The author plans to continue refining the product as long as father time will permit . From there, it is hoped that someone else will pick up the task.

The present three volume set is like an unfinished symphony, very beautiful, unfortunately missing an ending. During one of the extended data gathering trips, our home was vandalized and the computer stolen. Much more valuable than the uninsured computer taken was the loss of the data disks destroyed by the thieves.

The disks contained countless pieces of family data and records gathered over a number of years, irretrievably lost. Some of the lost data had been collected by phone calls or interviews with aging people in their homes who have long since passed away; their secrets taken with them. Many painstaking hours of work have been used in an attempt to reconstruct the lost data.

The author has made many broken or delayed promises to deliver early versions of the book because of the above factors. A target date would be given and many an embarrassing letter would follow trying to explain the delay. Those days are gratefully in the past now. Such early requests for copies of a manuscript versions of the book were needed nourishment to give the will power to continue with the project. Without your encouragement, there is no question as to whether the book would continue. Also without the support and forbearance of my dear wife Irene who lent her expertise to the project, it never could have come about.

In summary, I lovingly acknowledge her support and dedicate the book to her.

The Cornish Toys from Cornwall England

The Toy Roots in Cornwall England

There are large clusters of Toys in various counties of various states of the USA. There also appears to be similar clusters of Toys in England, Ireland and Wales. One of these clusters is located in a large sector of the British Isles called Cornwall. We have a history of some of these Cornwall Toy families both when they lived in Cornwall and later when they lived in early America. Apparently the Cornwall area is rich in culture, tradition, history and deeply steeped in superstitions.

A book was written called "The Story of the Toys" by Mary H Dodge. (Her picture appears under the vignette on the Connecticutt Toys) The book has been out of print for many years now. The author hired a rare book company to locate him a copy and, unfortunately, had to pay a collector's price for it. It is the story of Mary H Dodge's mother and father's family and covers a period of about one hundred years. It is unfortunate that the book is written in the second person and was cut short by the sudden illness and death of her mother Jane Osler Toy.

Two things make the book very interesting. The first is her vivid discription of Cornwall England and the second is how she portrays the life of her father Reverend Joseph Toy, a munitions manufacturer, of Simsbury Connecticutt.

The following account of life in Cornwall England is a composite description based upon Mary H Dodges account; second from the "History of the Dingle Family," third a book on Cornwall written by Tregellas, and from other sources and accounts from various familys who have lived there or have visited the area. All the above sources refer to it with reverence, a great nostalgia and a deep longing to go back to their roots.

The long coastline of Cornwall, the most southern and western county of England, has been, like Italy, compared in shape to a Wellington boot. The iron heel of the boot is the mass of serpentine rock which forms the southern point of the Lizard, and the foot that part which lies between Mounts Bay and Land's End. The instep is at St Ives Bay, and the body of the boot constitutes the main portion of the country. The highest part toward the eastern end forming the Bodmin Moors.

Along the northern coast, the mural cliffs, against which the Atlantic rollers forever break, are in marked contrast to the tamer and more sylvan scenery of the south and west shores; while across the low lying lands between St Ives and Mounts Bay the sea often threatens to meet during the spring tides. The climate of Cornwall, owing to its situation, is so remarkable as to deserve appreciation. The month of January at Penzance is as warm as at Florence or Madrid, and July is as cool as at St Petersburg. The Cornwall people claim that it is the mildest climate in the world.

According to Mary Dodge, the people are "ardent and vivacious, self-reliant and versatile." She tells us that it is no uncommon thing for a Cornish man to build his own house, make his own shoes, be both fisherman and miner, and possibly, small shopkeeper. Where ever the Cornish miner emigrates, he is pretty sure to take the lead in enterprise and danger. As a body of men they are industrious, intelligent, sober and orderly, neither soured by hard work nor depressed by harsher privations.

The poet Taylor, in 1649, writes:

"Cornwall is the compleate and repleate 'Home of Abundance,' for high, churlish hills and affable, courteous people. The country hath its share of huge stones, mighty rocks, noble free gentlemen, bountiful housekeepers, strong and stout men, handsome and beautiful women." end quote."

From time immemorial Cornwall has had a leading part in the mineral industries of England. Mines of tin, copper, lead, and zinc abound. They have been the chief source of revenue to the country. They gave abundant employment to the laboring class.

Men, women and even the children were freely employed in various ways about the mines. Since 1870 the mining industry has declined. The mines have been less productive and the great discoveries of ore in this and outher counties have greatly reduced prices and scattered the Cornish miners over the world.

A recent syndicated news article written by Wm Ecenbarger (Univ Press Syndicate) Jan 1992 tells about the present popularity of Walking Tour Trips to Cornwall England. The Wayfarers is one of several Walking Tour Companies, located at: 172 Bellevue Ave, Newport R.I. 02840 Phone: 401/849-5087.These companies takes them to quaint, rustic old English villages such as Ruan Lenihorne, Truro, Philleigh, Trewortha, Gerrans, Veryan, Portloe, Portscatho, Mevagissey and Bohortha.

Cornwall is well suited for walking because it offers a varied topography and also because of its isolation. It is the tail of England, at the southwest tip, aloof and detached; a rocky claw thrusting out into the Atlantic. Americans who want to see one pretty village after another usually go walking in the Cotswold. There is very little to do in this part of Cornwall except walk and sail.

The Cornish have a long history of superstition and magic spells. Along the estuaries and little coves that follow the coastline you can hear not only of the shipwrecks but also of smuggling, pirates and contrived shipwrecks. While the natural elements caused thousands of shipwrecks, the Cornish, appear to have a hand in more than a few of these early disasters.

The locals would set beacons on cliffs over the rocks and feast on the leavings of the dying vessels. Of course, that is a part of their history and the Cornish people today are friendly and eager to talk of the past. Many curious old customs linger in Cornwall, among them the ceremony of 'cutting the neck' or thelast few ears of corn at harvest time. The lighting of bonfires on the hills at St John's Eve, and the 'furry' or Flora dance at Helston, on the eighth of May.

Note* The home of Robert and Ann Hoskings Toy in the village of Roskear, Camborne England. It is a very long, low stonehome typical of the sturdy construction of British farmhouses. Notice the small windows and over-hanging thatch roof. This is the home in which Rev Joseph Toy was reared in.

Among the peculiar dishes of the Cornish cuisine, prominent is the pasty, the almost universal dinner of the working class. It is a savory compound of meat and potatoes, inclosed in a crescent shaped crust; but one must be a Cornishman to appreciate this dish thoroughly. The variety of pies is truly marvelous and it is often said that the devil himself would be put in a pie if he were caught in Cornwall.

In the little hamlet of Roskear, an outlaying village of Camborne is where our Joseph Toy of Simsbury, Connecticut was born. It is said that his father's long low stone cottage, with small windows and overhanging roof may still stand there. Joseph was the youngest of eight sons, born in April 1808, of Robert and Ann Hosking Toy. They are John, Robert, Nicholas, William, James, Joseph and two sisters; Mary Ann Sims and Nancy Granville.

Robert and Ann were God-fearing people who trained their children to a life of industry and integrity, and very early leading them into the ways of piety and obedience. Robert died when Joseph was quite young, somewhere around 1815. Joseph was raised by his older brother John in a home filled with sunshine and love according to Mary H Dodge.

John, a man of much energy and ability, became the Captain of the West Seaton mine. John's wife, Ann Davey was born at Nans Nuke Illogan, Cornwall. Her children spoke of her with reverence as a grand Christian, a splendid character and beautiful. Her mother's maiden name was Andrews and was born in the Parish of Newlyn East.

All of the family were blessed with deep rich voices which made them naturals for the boy choir of the Wesleyan Church of Camborne. They would go forth in the frosty air of the Christmas morning to sing carols under the windows of their friends, and eagerly thrown from the windows in response to their greetings.

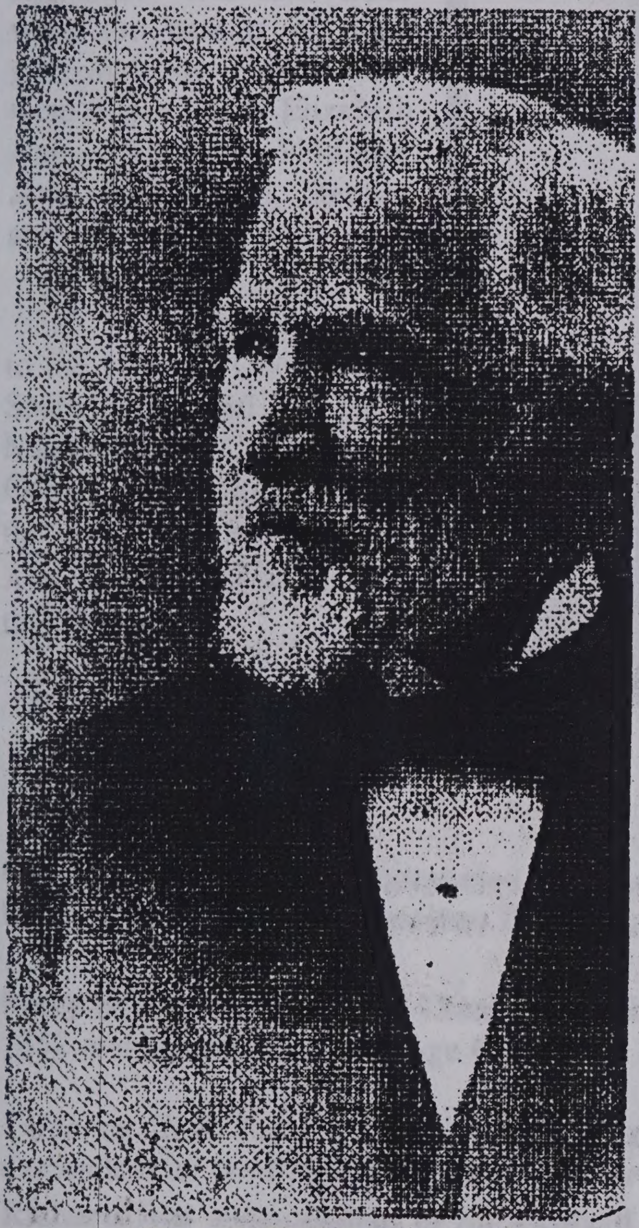
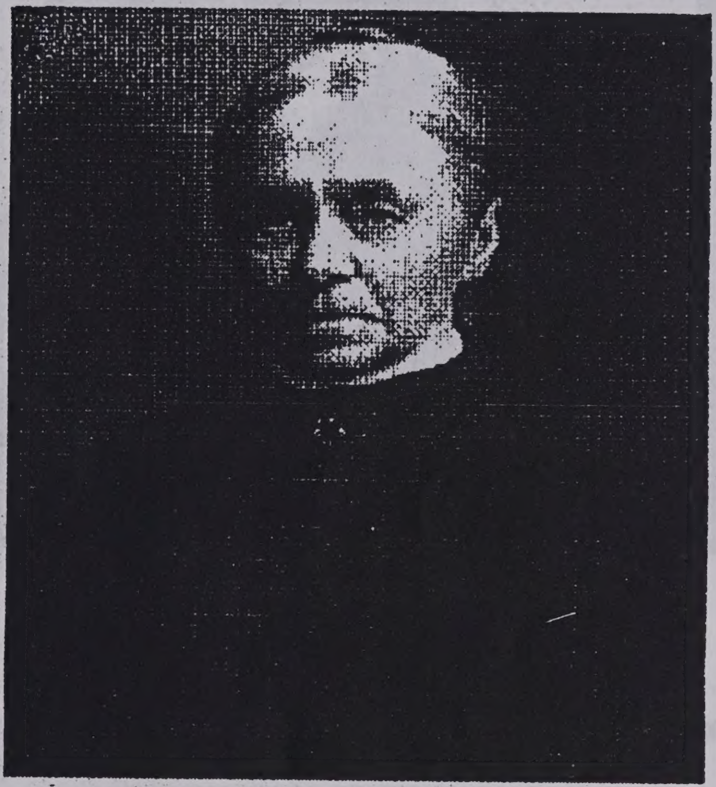
Joseph Toy became the Rev Joseph Toy, Superintendent of the Sunday School and qualified himself as teacher obtaining a situation in one of the Lancastrian schools of Camborne England.



The Reverend Joseph Toy

He was a good English teacher, a fine reader, carefully exact in spelling and pronunciation, well read in history, a good mathematician fairly proficient in algebra and geometry with considerable knowledge of Latin, Greek and French.

Joseph met and married in 1833 Miss Jane Osler, a young lady of refinement and culture who was born 01 August 1802, and who also was the proprietor of a millinery establishment in Camborne.



Mary Webster Toy-Dodge
(da of Jos & Jane Toy)

Jane was the daughter of Benjamin and Jane Osler of Falmouth. Ben Osler's claim to fame was that he was the son of Edward Osler and Jane Drew, sister of the world famous Cornish meta-physician.

In April 1797, according to the Falmouth church record, Edward Osler was remarried to Jane Sawle, the daughter of Stephen Sawle of Falmouth, an officer in the British navy. and afterward the Captain of the ship Hanover. Benjamin and Jane Osler were the parents of eight girls and two boys. They were Susan, Mary Elizabeth Ann, Amelia, Phillippa, Jane, Julia, Sarah, Stephen and Benjamin.

He later moved out to the Cape of Good Hope, South Africa and became a Magistrate in Charge of a Colony of settlers. In 1852 the discovery of gold in Australia created a rush to that Colony.

Benjamin Osler

Camborne Toys were accompanied by some of the Sims and Oslers. These Camborne Toys became settlers of the American Colonies, Canada, South Africa and Australia.

Mary Seymour, daughter of Chester and Sabra Thankful Ensign Seymour, was born on 26 Mar 1852 and married Capt George G. B. Toy, born Mar. 08, 1852.

George G. B Toy is the son of Rev. Joseph Toy of Simsbury Conn. Mary Seymour is a descendant of the Colonist Richard Seymour who settled in Hartford Connecticutt in 1630. Richard was a descendent of Sir Edward Seymour, Knight Baron and and brother of Lady Jane Seymour, third wife of King Henry VIII.

Capt George G. B. Toy died 25 Mar 1881 of malaria at New Orleans during the Civil War.

Colonial Dawn in America

In retrospect, there was a significant number of Toys or Toy families who arrived among the first waves of pioneers to America, perhaps, as many as fifty or more between the years of 1611 and 1650. A few of them predating the Mayflower and the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock. To recap, the most notable of these were William, Henry and John Toy in the Boston area. Humphrey, Thomas, James, and John Toy arrived in Virginia around 1620 to 1700. George & Christina Toy, Elias, and Joseph Nicholas arrived some where around 1630 to 1700 in the New Jersey and Maryland area.

The exact date of the first settlement of New Jersey is not fixed by accepted historical records. The earliest colonists were the Dutch from Holland, about 1620 who planted a colony near the present site of Bergen. In 1623 another company, under Captain Cornelius Mey, settled on the east side of the Delaware, nearly opposite where Philadelphia was located more than a century later, specifically,where Timber Creek enters the Delaware, a short distance below Camden. During the ensuing forty years, Swedes, Finns, Dutch and English struggled for supremacy primarily in the area known as the Swedish Colony.

In the year of 1664, Charles II of England disregarded all rival claims, and granted all the territory between the Delaware and Connecticut rivers to his brother, Duke of York, who later succeeded him as James II, and forcibly took possession. The Duke of York sold all of his claims to Lord Berkley and Sir George Carteret, who named the tract New Jersey. In 1673, Berkley sold his interest to John Fenwick and Edward Byllynge Quakers, who later conveyed controlling interest to William Penn and two other Quakers of financial responsibility; Gauen Laurie and Nicholas Lucas.

Fenwick, in 1675, brought over a colony of some two hundred persons and established a settlement on the Delaware which he called Salem. In 1677 another company of pioneers came from London, almost entirely of English and Irish Quakers. They located about sixty miles farther up the river and founded Burlington, New Jersey.

Pennsylvania archive records indicate that Patience Toy, the great grand daughter of George and Christina Toy was a Quaker when she married. This adds historical weight to our assumption that the Armstrong County Penna Toys were of English Quaker origin on the paternal side of the family.

Not only was the greater part of Colonial New Jersey sold for what amounts, in our time, to about two or three cents an acre, but the short sighted king, to free himself from the burden of an annoying obligation, squared the long standing account with the son of his deeased creditor, and thus for $400,000, William Penn became the possessor of a new and evolving embryonic empire.

Colonial records reveal that it was here along the Burlington area of the Delaware that George and Elias Toy appeared among the Yeoman Cavalier Pioneer families of the 1620 ~ 1660 era. The fact that George named one of his sons Elias would indicate that erhaps they were brothers. These Toys were fruitful and multiplied rather rapidly.

GEO + ELIAS

Colonial records and documents indicate that most of these Toys were wealthy aristocrats who married into some of the best families of the period The children of Dr Calvert Rogers Toy, through his marriage to Fielding Lewis Douthat, became blood relatives of President George Washington through their common ancesters. Dr Toy's wife, Fielding Lewis Douthat, daughter of Fielding Lewis Douthat, was a cousin of the Fielding Lewis that married Elizabeth Washington, sister of resident George Washington.

Not only are they related by marriage, but, they are directly related through common ancesters, namely, the great grandfather of George Washington. According to Henry Duke, Councilor, their common ancester was John Lewis Jr, member of the Royal Council, who married Elizabeth Warner. Mildred Warner Washington is the paternal grandmother of George and Elizabeth Washington. There were two cousins both named Fielding Lewis; one married Elizabeth Washington, the other was married, in 1788 to Agnes Harwood, descendent f Henry Duke Councilor.

The two Fielding Lewis cousins were born about twenty nine years apart. Our Fielding Lewis was the son of Colonel Warner Lewis and his wife Elizabeth Bowles Gooch of Warner Hall, Gloucester County Virginia. Elizabeth Gooch, (Grand daughter of Governor Wm Gooch of Virginia). Warner Lewis is a son of Colonel John Lewis III and his wife, Frances Fielding, hence the origin of the given name `Fielding Lewis.' For farther clarification of these ties read the vignette in this volume titled: "A Blacksheep has given us a Family of Nation Builders."

William, John and Henry Toy all appear in the earliest records of the Massachusetts area. In all probability they were brothers, however, the author cannot prove this assumption. William Toy was one of the founding fathers of Boston. He was a dairy farmer who came to the Muddy River area of Boston from New Amsterdam, Long Island New York prior to the year 1630. He traded two acres of Long Island for twenty acres of Boston. He married Grace Newell at Roxbury Mass on Sept 14, 1644.

A large part of Muddy River, as the Boston area was then known, was owned by William Toy. The very old Boston Records refer to this area as "Ye Toy Mountain." Many descendents of William Toy still live in Billerica and the Woburn area of Boston. Some of them use the original Toy spelling and others use the spelling of Tay.

In 1642 the Selectmen were enjoined to have a vigilant eye over their brethren and neighbors in areas of tithing, attendance at church and social activities. In 1650 the Rev. Samuel Whiting was chosen minister at Billerica where he remained with his people for fifty six years. His people heard two sermons of a very lengthy nature each Sabbath. It was a church where the people received not only spiritual food, but much of the intellectual and social stimuli needed.

In 1661 the problem of seating the people in the church was settled and it was agreed upon that: "ye towne doe apoynte Lt Wm French, John Parker, Ralph Hill sen'r and William Toy to set in the Deacon's seat; and also the towne do appoint & empower these four men joyned with Mr Whiting to appoint the rest of the inhabitants and proprietors belonging to the town there several places where they shall sitt in the meeting house according to their best discretion."

Links Between Britain & the Colonies

Some Early Toys in The United Kingdom and the Colonies 1200 ~ 1650 AD

Many sources of recorded data contain fragments or `windows' into the past of people bearing the Family Name of Toy. Reliable and substantial sources of information reveal that our progenitors in the colonies were primarily of Welsh, Irish and English descent. Most certainly many of them were scholars, publishers, ship captains, land owners and frequently referred to in many places as 'landed gentry.'

Major sources of information, as stated previously, includes the `Athenae Cantabrigeneaus,' Burks Landed Gentry, John Burke Heraldic History Vol III p-634, Wood's Athenae Oxon, Chamber's Biographical Illustrations of Worchestershire, and Nash's History of Worcestershire. Other sources will be mentions throughout the three volumes as they apply to particular items of data.

The following small references are windows into the past provided to substantiate the artifacts involved. The information contained in these references is much too broad and lengthy to be included here.

Sir John Toy was Vicar of the Church of Saint Augustine of Doddermill, Worchester (27 Oct 1536) and was a witness to the will of his friend Sir Nicholas Ffownes. Sir John Toy II, esq. (Bn 1611 d-1663) matriculated from Pembroke College on 23 May 1628, received his MA degree 2 July 1634.

Sir John Toy II was Chaplain to the Bishop of Hereford, Headmaster at Stokes until his death on 28 Dec 1663. Sir John was buried in the Cathedral of Worcester. His wife Martha died 10 April 1677. Most likely the Coat of Arms as illustrated on the cover of this volume was theirs.

Robert Toy (149? ~ 1556) came from Wales (Dwinn Heraldic Visitation of Wales, i.137) with his wife Elizabeth but, before 1546, had set up a printing press at the sign of the Bell in St. Paul's Churchyard. Several of his publications were: Mathew's Folio Bible in 1551 and a reprint of Thynne's edition of Chaucer's works in 1555. His widow carried on the business until 1558 and died in 1568 bequeathing four lbs to the company.

Humphrey Toy, son of Robert (1540 ~ 1577), was born in London and was made free of the stationers company by his father's copy on 11 March 1557 and came on the livery at the first reviving thereof in 1561. (Ames Typogr. Antiq, ed King's School 1634, Vicarage at WorcestershireHerbert p-933: Arber transcript i 130) and served as a warden from 1571 to 1573.

Note: William and Mary College of Virginia records that this Humphrey Toy is a direct ancester of Thomas Dallam Toy, a Norfolk Virginia druggist and merchant of the 1800's. (See the William & Mary Journal of Records. It is reasonable to conclude that the Humphrey Toy of early Colonial Virginia is the grandson of this Humphrey Toy thus providing a direct lineage for the later Toys.

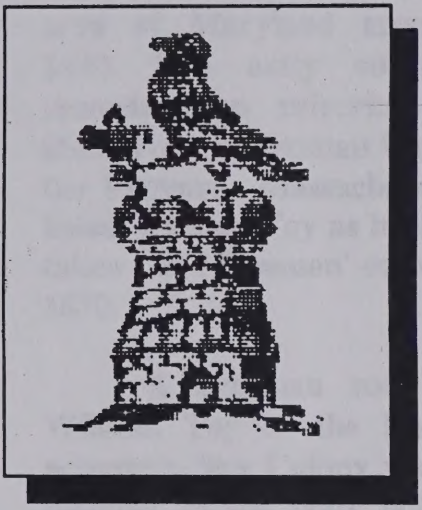
Humphrey Toy in 1564 was fined for keeping his press open on St Luke's day. In 1568, Humphrey took a prominent part in the dispute between the Company and Richard Jugge ~ the Queen's printer, about the privelege of printing the bible and testaments. Humphrey removed his press to St Paul's Churchyard and issued from it in 1567 a second edition of Salisbury's Playne and Familiar Introduction, Teaching how to pronounce the Letters in the Brytishe Tongue, now commonly called Welsh.

Humphry died at Bristol on 16 Oct 1577 and was buried there in All Saints' Church. A handsome monument was erected there by his widow Margery, with the following inscription: `Humfridus Toius, Londinensis, Jacet hoc tumulo, que obit 16 Oct 1577,' His wife carried on the business until her death.

Another Humphrey Toy was a merchant tailor in 1583 and yet another Humphrey Toy was made free of the Stationers Company on 6 June 1637. (Timberley's Encyclopedia: Corser's Collectanea, ii. 323: Barrett's Bristol. 1789, pp-442-3). This is most likely the Humphrey Toy who appeared in Virginia Colony as a plantation owner, linking the Virginia, Maryland and New Jersey Toys to the Welshman.



The Family Crest of Sir John Toy, esq. Note that it also rides as the left top part of the Merrick Coat of Arms.

John Toy, esquire of Caermarthen, Pembroke County, England, probably the son of Sir John Toy, married Jane Meyrick. (Burke's Landed Gentry `Meyrick's of Goodrich Court') John was probably born around 1560 and married into the descendents of Meuric ap Llewelyn of Bodorgan, esq of the body of King Henry VII, and VIII.

The wife of John Toy, Jane Meyrick is the granddaughter of the Right Reverand Rowland Meyrick (died-1563) 2nd son of Meuric ap Llewelyn, Bishop of Bangor in 1559 and Council of the Marches of Wales. Rev Meyrick married in 1554, Catherine Barrett (died- 1598) da of Owen Barrett, esq of Gellwick, County of Pembroke. Jane Meyrick, daughter of John Meyrick who died in 1634, was married 1st to Sir John Toy, esq. of Carmarthen, and 2nd to JohnHerbert, esq.

Jane Meyrick, daughter of John Meyrick who died in 1634, was married 1st to Sir John Toy, esq. of Carmarthen, and 2nd to JohnHerbert, esq.

Reverend Rowland Meyrick's son and heir, was Knighted at Cadiz in 1596 thru Robert, Earl of Essex, who obtained from Queen Elizabeth a grant of Wigmore castle in Herefordshire along with a dozen surrounding Manors for him. Sir Gelly was executed in 1600 for assisting the Earl of Essex in his rebellion. His estate was later restored to his children Sir Gelly married Elizabeth Lewis, widow of John Gwynne, esq of Llanelwed, County Recon. His daughter Margaret married John Vaughn, Earl of Carberry (Burke's Heraldic History Vol III P-634.

Much research remains to be done to close the missing links between the Toys of the Colonies and the Toys of the United Kingdom. Perhaps some of it will never be completed. Financial resources and the paucity of data being the major constraints to filling in the essential missing links.

George and Elias Toy appeared around the 1640 ~ 1660's New Jersey. William, Henry and John Toy appeared in the Boston area between 1620 to 1640 with William living in the New Amsterdam, Long Island New York prior to his arrival in Massachusetts. Records indicate that Henry Toy died in Ipswich in the year of 1655. How long he lived in the Colonies is not known.

Humphrey, Thomas and John appeared in the Colonial Virginia area during the same period of time. Records indicate that Joseph Nicholas Toy also came to the Harford County area of Maryland around 1640. The early colonial records keep referring to these Toys as Yeoman Cavalier Pioneers. Massachusetts listed William Toy as having taken the `Freeman' oath in 1630.

A Freeman such as William Toy of the Massachusetts Bay Colony was a member of the body politic and as such was entitled to the right of suffrage (the right to vote in political elections) and to hold office. In order to become a Freeman it was required that the applicant provide evidence that he was a member of the Congregational Church. Under the later Freeman's Oath they could be admitted by the General Court of the Colony.

Recorded in the Muddy River Brookline records (1634 ~ 1838) by the inhabitants of Brookline in a town meeting as recorded by J. E. that this is a true coppie as attests

Edward Rawston,
Secretary

Obviously `Ye Toy Mountain' was named after the three Toys living in that area in 1630 or thereabout. Boston records disclose the will of John Toy was one of the first three in Vol I. pro. 7 Dec 1641. His will refers to a son Allen Toy who remained in England. John was a trader and spoke in his will of `goods remain, besides beq. of money and especially trees, no doubt fruit trees.

Ethnic Roots of the Penna Toys

Progenitors of the Armstrong Co Pa Toy Families

William Toy, the only child of Richard and Rebecca Willard Toy came to Washington County Penna with his wife Sarah Cooper and their children. William died around 1816 in Washington County Pa about fifty miles southwest of Pittsburg Pa. They were the parents of eight, possibly nine children. All seven of their sons eventually settled in Armstrong County Pa. It follows that practically every Toy living in Armstrong County are therefore descendents of George and Christina Toy of the Swedish Colony, New Jersey (Circa 1640).

William Toy and Sarah Cooper were raised on neighboring plantations in Chester Twp., Burlington County New Jersey. They were married on 07 October 1793 at Philadelphia Pa. Richard Toy, William's father died in the American Revolution in 1777 defending his father's plantation. Richard and Rebecca Willard also raised on neighboring plantations in N J were married on 26 Dec 1774 at Philadelphia Pa. LDS records page 13411, sheet 82 through 97, batch 72015.

The Coopers of New Jersey were `Friends' or Quakers. They were pioneers in the New Jersey Quaker religious activities. Richard's sister Patience was also a Quaker as evidenced in her marriage certificate. Most probably Richard was a Quaker too making the Armstrong County Pa Toys of Quaker origin.

Bowser blood, runs deep within many of the Arm-strong County Toys. The Bowsers were of Palatine German descent and few of them who came from York Pa to Armstrong Co knew any English language at all. The Bowsers of York County were of Baptist Mennonite faith.

The first meeting of the Society of Friends in the Gloucester Burlington County NJ area was held in the year of 1682, at Newton, Gloucester County at the homes of Mark Newby and William Cooper. John Cooper built the first meeting house of the `Friends' around 1712 on an acre of land formerly owned by Thomas Matthews. It had been occupied by the family of Amos Campbell. Gloucester was first laid out in 1677. Atlantic Co was formed in 1837 from part of Gloucester Elias and George Toy were among a colony of 6000 Swedes, Dutch and English who had settled on the West Bank of the Delaware as early as 1638, almost fifty years before Wm Penn's arrival. The colony encompassed English Presbyterians, Quakers, Scotch, Irish Presbyterians, Swiss, Mennonites, Dunkards, French Huguenots and Reformed Palatinates.

Mennonite is a name borne by disciples of Menno Simons in Switzerland. Menno was a Baptist and from his teaching sprang the Regular Baptists of England and America. The Dunkard or German Baptists also sprang from these roots. One division of the Mennonite church was formed in the Berne Canton of Switzerland and came to America, It was founded by Jacob Ammish and became known as the Ammish denomination.

Crucial to understanding our heridity is to know about these religious beginnings, especially that of our ancesters who formed the Swedish Colony of New Jersey. The Armstrong County heritage is heavily laced with German ancestry. The Crissman clan, the Slagles or von Slagels, the Bowsers, the Johns, the Flenners, the Kamers and the Wolfe family are all of German origin. Hardly a family of Toys in Armstrong County can disavow their lineage with ancesters of German descent particularly from areas of the German Rhine, Palatine Germany and nearby Switzerland.

The border states of Germany on the south were intimately associated with Switzerland and France thus related to them by strong ties of blood. The policies of the kings of France, beneficent or autocratic, affected the fatherland powerfully.

Seasons prevailed when the vengeful, fanatical religious and political policies of kings like Charles IX and Louis XIV prevailed. In such periods, the Palatine became a place of refuge for many thousands of French Huguenots and again, when the aggressive and bitter persecution swept like a tidal wave of terror across borders, the Palatine Germans suffered almost as much as the unfortunate, highly persecuted Protestants in France itself.

Henry the IV was one of the greatest and best French kings and joined the Catholic Church because the majority of his subjects were Catholic. He was wise, liberal and tolerant in his views and actions. Henry the III had granted Protestants free exercise of their worship in castles of the Calvanistic lords to the number of 3,500 and to one town or borough in each county except Paris. They were permitted to own property, marry Catholics and hold public office. Henry IV maintained them and often extended them.

A treaty, the famous Edict of Nantes at Paris, was signed and published which proclaimed the religious position of Protestants in France and their relation to the Crown. Children of Protestants were allowed the priveleges of the schools and colleges the same as Catholics. Many Catholics violently opposed the new Edict but the king stood firm. Louis XIV, an unscrupulous king revoked the Edict of Nantes on 13 October 1685 and dealt his country and the world a blow more fatal than all his wars together.

Intoxicated by enormous victories in battle, he fancied that consciences could, like states, be bent and he set forth to bring back all his subjects to the Catholic faith. The Protestant Reformers fled France and carried their skills, labors, families and manhood into other countries and the new world. Pierre de Toy, as mentioned previously, was one of those who fled to the colonies.

The sixteenth century was marked by these religious disorders. Protestant Europe opened her doors to this choice class of French people. The Huguenots of France, like the Anabaptists of Germany and the Mennonites of Switzerland were the pioneers in religious liberty and real reform. The Huguenots found the Pope, the king and the chiefs of political positions determined to destroy them.

No crime was too horrible to impute to them, even that of sacrificing little children. Charles IX ordered the great massacre on St Bartholomew's day, August 24, 1572, when 60,000 Protestants perished. Eight hundred thousand of them perished in prisons and galleys and on scaffolds. (Beacon Lights of History, by John Lord.)

King Phillip of the Palatine in 1699 emulated Louis XIV in his persecution of the Protestants throughout his new possessions. The tidal wave of emigration again began to peak, with the Mennonites, Wallons and the French Huguenots being driven from the land; many went to Holland, Prussia and to America.

A little beacon began to glimmer on the distant hills, a whispering voice of hope which grew stronger and more insistant; a voice that beckoned with hope for peace, a home, a fireside, and lots of land for the taking, and of raising children without fear of persecution. It told of a new land of great forests and rivers and pine clad hills and of religious freedom without persecution.

Europe was in the throes of a monstrous three headed religious conflict Lutherism, Catholicism and Reformed Calvinism. Some saw visions and dreams of the `new land' and prayed for the Master to show a way to indulge in this new world of religious freedom. When their human frailities could endure no more, they grabbed their belongings and fled. To sail away forever from a land of senseless and endless strife to a land of promise and , just maybe, even perpetual peace and so they believed.

William Penn, often called the Great Proprietor, was far ahead of his time and came to take possession of his land in America in 1682. He sailed from England on Sept 01, 1682 and landed at New Castle Delaware on October 27 with one third of his one hundred comrades having died of smallpox during the voyage. He sailed up the Delaware to Upland which he renamed Chester. Here he convened the Assembly and promulgated his Great Law, namely, Pennsylvania was to be a Christian State. No one could be a citizen or elizible for office who was not a Christian.

Penn founded Philadelphia during the same year and within two years it had populated to 2,500. He discovered that the Swedish Colony of 6,000 people had already settled on the west bank of the Delaware. He gave equal rights to these and to all subsequent settlers from every land. Ever increasing in numbers came the Swedes, the English, Quakers, Scottish and Irish Presbyterians along with Swiss Mennonites, Dunkards, French Huguenots and Reformed Palatinates.

`Pennsylvania Dutch' is a misnomer. There is no such language. Many think that it is a corrupted German, perhaps, the result of natural variations due to ignorance and long separation from it's pure origins. This is not so! It is not a corrupted tongue. It is native to a part of Switzerland and the Rhine Palatinate which is actually a principality in the southern part of Germany.

Pennsylvani Dutch is therefore, in reality, the truly `Palatinate German' language. The German language or `Deutsche Sprache' embraces the different languages spoken in all their stages from the earliest history to the 20th century or the language spoken by the related Teutonic tribes. This encompasses the Austrians, Swiss, Alsatians, Bavarians and similar ethnic factions.

Many dialectal differences have evolved, increased and multiplied over the last several hundred years with life in the `new world.' This may be a result of or modified by the infusion in Western Penna of nationalities such as the Italians, Polish, Slovic, German, Irish, etc. and the consequent intermarriage between these ethnic groups. Factors such as this has made America truly the greatest country in the world. Our ethnic diversity and infusion of knowledge bases caused by the previously cited world trauma have given its people intestinal fortitude, knowledge skills, creative talents and mental acumen much broader than any other country in the world.

In retrospect, the German Palatinate was inhabited by descendants of the group of German tribes called the Rheinfranken with an admixture of the Alemanni, the latter of whom occupied the land until 496 A. D. when Chlodwig, king of the Franks, defeated them in a battle fought on the Upper Rhine.

The Alemanni is divided into three main groups Swabian, Alsatian and Swiss. Wurtenburg, the place from where many of our ancesters departed, and Switzerland were nearly pure Alemanni while the Palatinate is Frankish with a strong infusion of Alemanni blood. The Frankish, Hessian and Thuringian dialects are one of the three basic idioms or subcultures.

`Pennsylvania Dutch' is therefore an admixture dialect of Frankish and Alemanni modified and harmonized by basic characteristics derived from all these dialects. Briefly stated. this element of our forefathers was a mixture of the Alemanni, French and German races combined.

Artifacts about Armstrong County Pa

Several large tracts of Armstrong County land were owned by or partially owned by the Six Toy brothers who came to Armstrong County from Washington County Pa around the period of 1820 to 1840. Other parts of these tracts of land were frequently owned by the families who became the wives of these Toy brothers.

Some areas of concern is now known as Glade Run, Center Hill, Walkchalk, Montgomeryville, Redbank & Cowansville. The inclosed area map of Armstrong Co. identifies individuals and where their tracts of land were situated. There are other tracts owned by some of these Toy families not shown on this section of Armstg Co.

The name of David Flenner (Flannard ~ Flanner) plays a prominent role in both the history of Armstrong County and many of the Toy families. David purchased a parcel of land on 07 Sept 1816 from Sam Bowser who, prior to 1805, had built a small one story cabin on it. The parcel is located near the junction of Glade Run and Slate Lick Run.

David married Julia Ann Bowser, daughter of John Bowser and the grand daughter of Mathias Bowser Jr. Three of their daughters play prominent roles in the Toy Genealogy. Catherine Flenner married Rev James Toy. Julia Ann married Alexander Henry whose daughter Mary Ann married Wm Toy III, son of Wm Toy and Mary Ann Bowser Toy.

Peter Toy purchased 103 acres adjoining Great Meadow on Jan 21, 1836 for $200. Matthias Bowser purchased 87 acres on Nov

22, 1854 from a Cornman which he later conveyed to Solomon Hooks, who on Feb 01, 1865 conveyed this and other lands to Jacob Toy.

Jacob Toy had previously purchased another tract of 101 acres from John Leard. Another tract from James C Quigley which obviously made an estate of considerable acreage in Armstrong County. Joseph Paul Toy and wife Christina Crissman, the author's grandparents also owned a large tract of land near Walk Chalk along the Kittanning ~ East Brady Road at an area known as 'Toys Crossroads.'

A hamlet near Glade Run Falls received its name of Walk Chalk through a quirk of speech of John Cravenor. The story goes that a drumming band was organized there at the time and on a certain festive occasion John remarked that if he had command of the band he would make the members of the band 'Walk Chalk' hence to this day the modern name of this village of Armstrong County is Walk Chalk Pa.

Anthony Cravenor who claimed a tract of land previously owned by Peter Toy in 1825 and which was formerly owned by William Burnheimer. Burnheimer cleared the land prior to 1822 built a schoolhouse there and was the local shoemaker. Anthony Cravener claimed, while living with David Flenner, that he had a foreign title and a claim of three deeds to land in Wicklow County Ireland. A claim later substantiated by Armstrong County records.

Around this period of time, the area was the western frontier of civilization and the homes were usually log cabins; it was common practice for a family to live in the school house until they could manage to build their own home. Thus this school house was once lived in by Burnheimer, a Bowser, a Toy and perhaps others. We must remember that there were many Indians still in the area and frequent raids were made on these people.

Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy

Professor ~ Silversmith Minister
A Family of Nation Builders

d. 1641

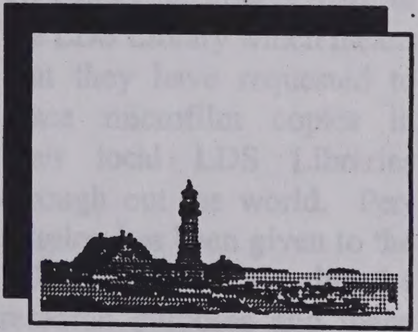
The first known Joseph Nicholas Toy of which the author has any records died in Harford County Maryland during 1641 which may make him the earliest known Toy in the Colonies. assuming that he spent some period of time here. At least he ranks with William Toy of Boston, Humphrey Toy of Virginia and George Toy of the Swedish Colony in New Jersey as being among the first. Regardless of this point, Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy of Harford Maryland, one of his descendants can truly lay claim to being the head of a family of nation builders.. Some of his descendants are blood relatives to the Father of our Country, President George Washington. They are also related through marriage to General Robert E Lee.

The Reverend Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy married the daughter of Richard Dallam II. Rev Joseph, a silversmith and minister of the Episcopal Church married Frances Dallam on 29 May 1770 (IBA-286 p-181) Barnes Gen 975.2 B263 1973. A noted prominent silversmith and faculty member of Cokesbury College, he died in Baltimore Md on Saturday afternoon Jan 28, 1826.

There were several silversmiths in Harford Co. among the most noted of whom were Prof Joseph Nicholas Toy, Isaac Nicholas Toy and William Wilson. Maryland marriage records 1778 ~ 1800 P-230, Harford County Courthouse, Bel Air Maryland indicate that Isaac Nicholas Toy also married a Frances Dallam (3HA-22) on 18 March 1793. Apparently these are two different Frances Dallams (prob aunt & niece) since Joseph Nicholas married the 1st Frances Dallam on 29 May 1770 and his death didn't occur until 1816, it is very unlikely that Isaac Nicholas Toy could have married her on 18 Mar 1793.

A second reason is that Joseph Nicholas had children after the date of Isaac Nicholas Toy's marriage.

Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy is the father of the Rev. Joseph Nicholas Toy ID= 1857 who travelled west with his family and settled in Robards Kentucky. Dr Joseph and Frances Dallam Toy are also the parents of Richard Dallam Toy (see the Vignette "Howells, Pres Washington & the Toys").



Concord Point Lighthouse Harford County Md.

imore; 30 miles from Wilmington Delaware; 61 miles from Washington and 60 miles from Philadelphia. Harford County encompasses the Concord Point Lighthouse on the Chesapeake Bay. Records indicate that several Toy families have settled there around 1620 ~ 1680.

Abingdon was laid out by the Paca family in 1779 and was an outstanding town during Colonial days. It became not only a manufacturing center of note, but the home community of many citizens active in business, government and politics. Large landowners nearby included Aquila Hall, George Bradford and Richard Dallam. These men played leading roles in the county's part in the American Revolution.

Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy was a silversmith of note here from 1776 to 1795; Isaac Nicholas Toy was also a silversmith of great reputation here from 1790 to 1829. Carolyn Lou Toy Id=1894 of Louisville Kentucky is a descendent of Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy above. Others include Tammie Chada Id=9076 of Guthrie Oklahoma, Charles L Wilson of Glasgow Montana, Robert Lewis in California and many others.

Carolyn has been very instrumental in providing data on the Kentucky side of this family. Carolyn was born on 05 Aug 1932 and is the daughter of William Owen Toy Sr (Id=1882) born at Anthoston Pct Ky on 16 July 1905, son of Samuel Owen Toy and Hester Langley Bennett. William and Lulu `Cully' Toy Id= 1893. have two children:

1). Carolyn Lou Toy, a spinster mentioned above. Carolyn is a librarian.

2). William Owen Toy II Id= 1895, born 07 Nov 1938. His first wife was Phyllis Sterneman and the second is Joni Witherspoon. They have three children; Teran Ann Toy Libbert, Wm Owen Toy III, and Jeffrey Phillip Toy. They presently live at Evansville Indiana.

Stephen Gerald Toy Id= 9085 is a teacher also from Vincennes Indiana near Evansville. Stephen has provided much data on his family going all the way back to County Tyrone, Ireland

Robert Michael Lewis Id= 8038 also has provided considerable data on his side of the family and is a direct descendent of Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy. Robert's aunt Dickie Jean Branum Id= 8053 along with Robert are avid Genealogy buffs and publish a monthly newsletter called the Branum Chronicle.

Charles L Wilson is a computer buff doing genealogy research particularly in the area of the descendents of Richard Dallam Toy, the Howells and the Mortons. He also has provided considerable information on his family line. A considerable amount of gratitude is expressed to all of the above for their interest and assistance in making the Toy history informative and interesting.

As many of you now know, through the efforts of Charles and Norma Toy Shafter of Salt Lake City, the three volume set of Toy genealogy is now a part of the LDS Library which means that they have requested to place microfilm copies in their local LDS Libraries through out the world. Permission has been given to the LDS Library to do this for research purposes and make microfilm copies available to other libraries on a loan basis.

Howells, the Toys & Pres Washington

A Blacksheep has given us a Family of Nation Builders

The following narrative is derived from several sources of data which includes several books of genealogy, historical magazines, census data, the Washington Pedigree Chart and other sources of reference. Major sources of data are as follows:

a). The Pedigree Chart of the Washington Family

c). 'Memoirs of Morton Boyte Howell' LDS Library, Salt Lake City.

e). 'Rust Family of Virginia.' and the Journal of William & Mary College.

We begin this narrative with the descendants of Ethelred Howell, born in Tudor Wales, who emigrated to Jamestown Virginia. There is a tradition that a king called Howell Dha died in the year 950. No direct linkage with him has been established by the author simply because of the paucity of data and meager records preserved of that period in Wales. Suffice it to say here that a positive direct link is established with the above Ethelred Howel of Tudor Wales and the descendants of Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy of Harford County Maryland.

Henry Howell, son of Ethelred Howell, was born in Jamestown Virginia in 1693 and later settled at South Quay on Blackwater River in Nansemond County Va. Henry married and raised a family of three daughters and a son to his first wife. He had three sons to his second wife. Our line of genealogy is not concerned with his first wife and children. For those interested in pursuing this family line further, considerable additional data is stored in the author's computer.

We will therefore proceed with an account of his second marriage and their relationship to the family of Richard Dallam Toy, our family Blacksheep son of Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy and Frances Dallam.

Henry Howell's second marriage occurred when he was approximately eighty years of age, after the death of his first wife. Yes, Henry fathered three sons after he was eighty years of age. After the death of his first wife he removed, with their children, to the Neuse River, at Dobbs, near Wayne County North Carolina. It was here that he met and married a lass in her late teens by the name of Rachel Boyte. Almost unbelievably, to this marriage was born three healthy strapping sons.

The eldest of the three sons was Henry Howell Jr; Next came Ralph Howell with whom we are concerned as our link to the Welsh Howells. Ralph Howell married Jane Crawford, the fifth child of Robert Crawford and his wife Anna Cogdell. More on them later.

The third son was John Howell and with whom we are not concerned.

Henry Howell Sr is said to be, even in his eighties, a strapping tall man of enormous physical strength. It is related in the Memoirs that he once was attacked out in the field by a bull ox. As the animal rushed at him he stepped aside and struck the ox with a blow to the head with his fist. The bull was killed instantly by the blow. His widow , a French Huguenot, was only seventeen when she married Henry and never remarried after Henry's death.

The nine children of his son, Ralph and Jane Crawford Howell were:

1.) Elizabeth Howell Standifer.

2). Ferebee Howell who married Edward York.

4). William Ringdon Howell Bn-1798

5). The fifth child, Robert Boyte Crawford Howell, is our direct link to the Toys. He was born on 10 March 1801 and died 05 April 1868 (Id=7199) Robert married Mary Ann Morton Toy (Id=7198) on the 23rd of April 1829 in Wayne County North Carolina.

6). Sarah Jernigan Alford

7). Serna Howell Smith

8). Alfred Cogdell Howell

9). Ralph Jr, Bn-1813, was the youngest known child of Ralph and Jane Crawford Howell.

We are concerned with Jane Crawford, the fourth child of Robert Crawford and Ann Cogdell. The other six children will be mentioned briefly as follows:

a). Margaret Crawford Hamilton.
b). Unid Crawford Powell
c). Arthur Crawford
d). Nancy married Henry Howell
e). Charles Crawford
f). Robert Crawford

The parents of Anna Cogdell are Daniel Cogdell and Anna McKenzie Their children were:

1). A daughter who married a Mr Oates. He later murdered his father-in-law, Dan Cogdell and fled to Alabama which was then known as the `Wild West.'

2). Unid Cogdell Stephens

3). The third child, our direct link, married Ralph Howell.
4). Daniel Cogdell
5). Lewis Cogdell

By way of brevity, we will proceed directly to Robert Boyte Crawford Howell who married Mary Ann Morton Toy. His father was a farmer who grew corn and sweet potatoes and lived in a one story weatherboarded log house. There was no market for their crops, except for their own livestock, however, they lived comfortably with few luxuries. Fortunately there was always plenty to eat.

The schools were the old kind called `Old Field' which were taught by pedagogues who kept soul and body together by their meagre tuition fees. Their courses of study were commensurate with the scantiness of their receipts. The extent of their labors was to teach the children how to read, write and cipher. Perhaps it can be said that this is more than our modern day schools do with many present day high school graduate students unable to successfully read or do math with any degree of success.

When Robert reached his majority, he was six feet tall, weighed two hundred pounds, with very large hands and feet, sandy or reddish hair, grey penetrating eyes and a powerful frame.

Robert grew up as a respectable Episcopalian, however, when some Baptist preachers from Raleigh came to Wayne County, it created quite a stir. Robert took quite a fancy to the religious meetings and it was not long after until he was converted, baptized and bonafide memberof the Baptist Church.

Robert's exceptional elocutional and oratorical ability combined with his earnest zeal in religious matters impressed the ministers from Raleigh and they made the necessary arrangements for him to obtain a better education. In the fall of 1824 he went to Washington and entered the Preparatory Department of the Columbian College in the District of Columbia.

During a meeting in the year of 1837 which was attended by the President of the United States, the Honorable Second Degree issued by the University was delivered to the Reverend Robert Boyte Crawford Howell.

Mary Ann Morton Toy, daughter of Richard Dallam Toy and Jane Morton, was born on 25 April 1808 at Ferry Point Virginia which lies between Norfolk and Portsmouth, about the time her father set sail from Antwerp bound for Riga, Russia on the Brig 'Ruby' with Capt Thomas Chapman at the helm.

Suffice it to say here that Richard Dallam Toy came from a long line of seafaring men who were wealthy Sea Captains, Yeoman Cavalier Plantation Owners, Doctors, Merchants and other positions of high prestige. Richard, led a lifestyle of a plain itinerant sailor most of his life, he appeared to shirk most of life's responsibilities. This is not to say that he was a vagrant or misfit in any nature or form. Plainly, from a family of high achievers, he was more or less just a blacksheep.

Richard Dallam Toy was considered a carefree plain sailor, globetrotter and a natural born poet. He was born in Harford County Md around 1771, the son of Rev Doctor Joseph Nicholas Toy, a respected silversmith and college professor, and Frances Dallam Toy, the daughter of a very wealthy landowner and and one knowledgeable in the political arena.

Richard ran away from home in the late 1790's choosing a wonderlust lifestyle on the open seas hardly compatible with marriage and raising of a family. The entire credit for raising a family of illustrious descendents must therefore be given to his wife Jane Morton Toy. His daughter Mary Ann Toy was about three years old before Richard again returned home from his seafaring lifestyle.

It is believed, according to the Howells, that Richard met his future wife, Jane Morton, at a hospital for sailors located at Norfolk a. Her mother Mary Logan Morton was the hospital matron. Jane Morton, Richard's wife, is the daughter of Thomas Morton and Mary Logan. Mary Logan's family, which included three brothers, emigrated to Williamsburg a from Glasgow Scotland when she was twelve years old.

When Richard returned from another three year stint at sea on 01 Aug 1811, his wife issued an ultimatum that plainly informed him if he went to sea again she would cease to consider herself his wife and he might just stay away.

Jane Morton Toy was in physical stature, a small woman, less than five feet tall and never weighed more than 100 lbs. She was truly brave and feisty as a Bantam hen. She was endowed with an inflexable will and a most determined character. Richard was well aware that she would do just as she said and as a consequence he took up quarters at the hospital with his wife and her mother.

Richard became employed in a printing office where his literary talents became most useful to him. Richard met his death by a quirk of fate in a very unusual manner. Richard had developed a habit of using his boat for going from the hospital wharf or pier on the Point across from Elizabeth River to Portsmouth, perhaps, to imbibe a few and visit with former sailor friends.. As destiny would have it, one very stormy night in the year 1816 he failed to come home.

A search was made early the next morning. His body was found by the side of his boat, his feet sticking fast in the harbor mud. It became obvious that sometime during the night he proceeded to his boat, the tide being out, a brisk wind and a heavy rain was in progress while Richard attempted to jump into the boat, he missed the boat and his feet became stuck in the mud. Unable to extricate himself the tide later rose over his head and he drowned.

Jane Morton married Richard Dallam Toy on 04 Oct 1804 and eleven days after their marriage Richard, foot loose and fancy free, sailed on the Schooner Ann Ballard for Bordeaux France and thence to Russia. Three children were born to them.

1.) Dr Joseph Alfred Toy MD (Id-3844) was born 11 Aug 1805 at the Sailor's Hospital in Norfolk Va. Joseph's father, as usual, was in Bordeaux France at the time of his birth. Dr Joseph A Toy was best known for having established the first documentation of Bright's disease in America.

Dr Joseph had become very sickly with Bright's disease at a very early period in his professional life and corresponded with Dr Richard Bright in England concerning the devastating kidney disease which he described in 1826 and published the paper in the London Lancet thereby bringing it to the attention of the American Medical community. Dr Joe performed successfully the Caesarian operation numerous times, a significant surgical procedure for that period of medical technology.

The famous author, Hugh Blair Grigsby, mentioned in his writings that Dr Toy was the best friend he ever had and that Jos was a great orator. Dr Toy is mentioned in several books (The Great Dismal Swamp) and others as delivering the Declaration of Independence during festivities at the Great Dismal Swamp Hotel. This and other events such as his marriage to Penelope Snowden Boushall (Id=1835) are recorded in `The Hotel in the Great Dismal Swamp.' by Jesse F Pugh, Old Trap North Carolina circa 1824 pps34 & 106.

Dr Joseph and Penelope were married on 01 Sept 1826 as recorded in the Raleigh Register and the Bulletin Gazette. Penelope Snowden Boushell, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Boushell, died on the 28th of Nov 1833. Her husband and three children had preceded her in death.

2). Thomas Dallam Toy (Id=2086), the youngest child of Richard and Jane Morton Toy was also born in Norfolk at the Sailor's Hospital on 20 March 1814. In 1835 Thomas married Amelia Ann Rogers who was the grand daughter of a Stanhope, an officer in the American Revolutionary War. The education of Thomas was provided by his brother Dr Joseph Alfred Toy.

Thomas prospered immensely as a Norfolk druggist and merchant. The Virginia Historical Magazine and records of the University of William & Mary tell us that `he had a vigorous appetite for the finer things in life and was able to provide educations in the finest European Universities of the day. ' Thomas Dallam Toy and Amelia Ann Rogers had issue of nine children, most all of them destined to become engrained as a part of American history.

2). Dr. Joseph Alfred Toy (nephew of the above Dr Joseph A Toy), 2nd son of Thomas and Amelia Ann Rogers, (Id=2093) married Sarah Pocohontas Rust at Loudin County Virginia. She is the daughter of Dr. Bushrod Rust and wife Margaret Carr. For further information see the Vignette of the Rust Family of Virginia.

3). Lucy Toy (Id=2095) married the Rev Johnson, a Baptist Minister.. A lot of American history is woven around Lucy Toy Johnson and her family. Lucy was born in Norfolk Va during January of 1850 and married around 1870. She is the daughter of Thomas Dallam Toy Sr and Amelia Ann Rogers. One of their sons Crawford Toy Johnson (named after his uncle Prof Crawford Howell Toy) is the founder of Coca Cola Bottling Company United Inc. A second son Wortley Johnson was the brakeman on the ill fated train that the famous `Casey Jones' hit.

The ballad goes something like this:

On a Six-Eight Wheeler
he came to fame,
Caller called Casey about half past four
said meet me at the station door
Mounted to the cabin
with the orders in his hands,
Said this is my trip to the promised land,
etc etc etc

Wortley later became the CEO of the Coca Cola Bottling Co. McComb Miss.

4). Thomas Dallam Toy II (Id=2101) married Heloise C Kelly on 29 July 1905. Heloise is the daughter of New York Socialite Horace R and Evelina de la (Forest) Kelly. Thomas D Toy II was owner of Thomas D Toy & Company Yarn Merchants at 118 E 25th St, New York City NY. A son of

Thomas D Toy II is Horace Robert Toy, born 03 Oct 1910 at Plainfield N.J. He married New York socialite Barbara Fish, daughter of Henry van C and Leontine Marie (Suse) Fish. Further information elsewhere.

4). Professor Walter Dallam Toy (ID=2096) who was educated in Europe and became Prof of Modern Languages at the Univ of North Carolina. His name is engraved on the cornerstone of the Administration Building of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. His biography also appears in many books of Who's Who and other notable references. Walter D Toy was born 13 Nov 1854 and was married to Jane Washington Bingham (Id=2107) on 29 June 1896. They had issue of three children, one of which leads us to the family of Pres George Washington.

Their son Dr Calvert Rogers Toy (Id=2121) born in 1899 on Rosemary St, Chapel Hill NC married Fielding Lewis Douthat, daughter of Fielding Lewis Douthat and Etta Keans of Asheboro North Carolina. They have issue of two daughters:

a). Elizabeth Bingham Toy

b). Eleanor Lewis Toy

Both of these daughters are blood relatives of President George Washington through their mother's lineage to the Lewis family. See the inclosed Pedigree Chart for this family. Also see the Vignette on Henry Duke Councilor for further clarification.

Fielding Lewis Douthat, wife of Dr Rogers Calvert Toy and daughter of Fielding Lewis and Etta Keans Douthat is a descendent of Henry Duke Councilor and also of Colonel Warner Lewis. Both of these are blood relatives of the Washingtons. Fielding Lewis Douthat, born at `Weyanoke' Charles City County Va. on 31 Jan 1866, died 22 Feb 1948 married Etta Keans of Asheboro NC. He is the son of Robert Douthat Jr and his second wife, Elizabeth M Wade.

Robert Douthat Jr's first wife was Mary

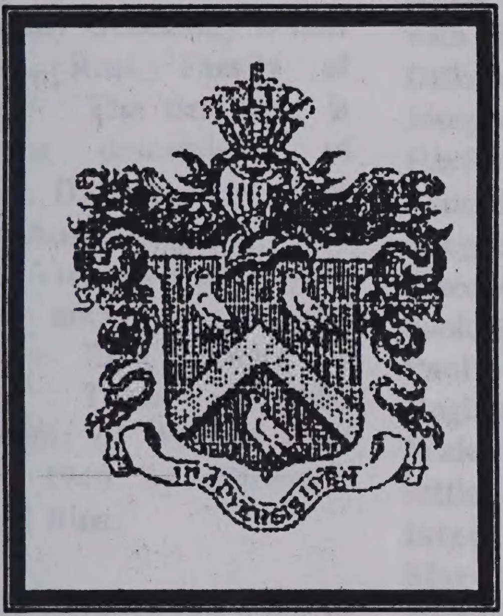
Robert Douthat Sr, a lawyer and son of Thomas and Jane (Price) Douthat was born in Augusta Co Virginia and married on 11 Feb 1819 to Eleanor Warner Lewis, a descendent of Henry Duke Councilor. Eleanor W Lewis is the daughter of Fielding Lewis and Agnes Harwood.



Henry Duke, Councilor

Fielding Lewis, not to be confused with his cousin Fielding Lewis who married Elizabeth Washington, President Washington's sister, married in 1788 Agnes Harwood. Our Fielding Lewis is the son of Colonel Warner Lewis of `Warner Hall' Gloucester Co Va. The Colonel is the son of Colonel John Lewis III who married Frances Fielding, hence the family name of Fielding Lewis.

Col John Lewis III is the son of John Lewis Jr, member of the Royal Council in 1715 and his wife Elizabeth Warner. Colonel Warner Lewis married Elizabeth Bowles Gooch, daughter of Governor Bowles of Maryland and by her first marriage was wife of Colonel Wm Gooch, son of Governor Wm Gooch of Virginia.

Mildred Warner Washington, daughter of Col Augustine Warner, is the paternal grandmother of President George Washington. Thus Mildred Warner Washington, George Washington's grandmother, is a direct blood ancestor of Elizabeth Bingham Toy (Id=3649) and her sister Eleanor Lewis Toy (Id=3650) of Brunswick New Jersey.

Additionally, it would appear with a high degree of certainty that the Fielding Lewis who married Elizabeth Washington is a brother of Col Warner Lewis, making him the uncle of Fielding Lewis, husband of Agnes Harwood. Both his age (30 years senior to the second Fielding Lewis and the unusual family name lends justifiable credence to this assumption. Thus, by marriage alone, Dr Calvert Rogers Toy is a relative of Elizabeth Washington. The author has not as yet attempted to trace the association of Jane Washingto Bingham, Dr Toy's mother, to the family line of Washington. Obviously there appears to be a familial association.

Among the earliest family names recorded by Burke in his pedigrees of the nobility and landed gentry of England is that of Duke. The family is of Norman origin, having come from France with others of their countrymen and signifies "Leader" or "Chief." In the book of Genesis it is recorded that the sons of Esau who dwelt in Mount Seir were "dukes" in the land of Edom. It is synonymous with the French "le Duc", the Italian "Il Duce", and the Anglicized form "Duke".

The Rusts & the Toys of Virginia

Sarah Pocohontas Rust Toy

A very important link in the Toy Family Genealogy is that of the 'Rust Family of Virginia.' The ties here is with the descendents of Thomas Dallam Toy and Amelia Anne Rogers. The Colonial Virginia Rust Family is the ancesters of the billionaire Rust Family of Texas. These are the descendents of William Rust 1654 ~ 1940 by Ellsworth Marshall Rust.

Very few families can point to so many descendents in one family line such as Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy that collectively have made such an enormous spectrum of achievements ranging from business, politics, religion, medicine, technology and social strata, etc.. The family accomplishments are legion and cover a broad spectrum of professional disciplines. They have touched upper crust of society, fostered world renowned professors, founded Coca Cola Bottling Co, United Inc. and penetrated other areas too numerous to discuss here.

The connection between the Rusts and the Toys begins with the children of Thomas Dallam Toy, grandson of Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy of Harford County Maryland. According to the Virginia Magazine, They claim descendency from Robert Toy, bookseller and printer in St Paul's Churchyard London England who came from Wales in the year 1540. They settled first in New Jersey, later in Virginia and Maryland. Prof Crawford Howell Toy is most recognized for a publication "Studies in History of Religions" 1912 according to his obit in Boston Transcript, May 13, 1919. See `The Development of Harvard University' 1869 ~ 1929 by D G Lyon in Harvard Grad's Magazine Dec 1919 pp-266-60 with portrait.

Dr Joseph A Toy, a son of Thomas Dallam Toy, married in 1867 Sarah Pocahontas Rust the daughter of Dr Bushrod Rust and Margaret Carr, Loudoun Co Virginia. Sarah Pocahontas was the youngest of thirteen children and was born January 1845. She died 22 Aug 1922 at Oyster Bay, Long Island New York. Dr Joseph A Toy was born in 1845 at NorfolkVa and died at New York City in October of 1901. They had issue of five children.

1). Mabel Rust Toy was born 24 Sept 1868 at New Orleans. Mabel was married in 1890 to William H Hendren (Bn-31 Mar 1859), the son of J Hardy Hendren. They had issue of Pocahontas Rust Hendren born 02 Aug 1891. She married John Ambler Mason, son of Dr Landon Mason, Rector, Episcopal Church, Shepherdstown, Md. John was Vice-pres of Bartlett Hayward Company, Baltimore Md.

5). Channing Rust Toy was born in December of 1883 at Norfolk Va. Captain US Army Retd was a staff member of American Magazine. His home was in Tampa Florida.

A Bowser Family Vignette

English & German Family Origins

The Armstrong County Penna Bowsers are mostly of Palatine German Ancestry. The change from the German spelling of Bausser was a gradual transition over a period of years. These Bowsers are mostly of Teutinic blood, however, this is not true for all Bowsers throughout the US. The Bowsers of Armstrong County Penna are of Pennsylvania Dutch or Palatine German German origin according to the Bowser Family History by Addison Bartholomew Bowser, A.M. (Excelsior Printing Co, Chicago, Ill.

Pennsylvania Dutch is a misnomer, (for an explanation), see ‘Origins of Names’ in this Volume. Bowser is also an early English surname, derived from the French ‘Beausire’ meaning 'fair sir' and is also found in the ancient English and early American records having the various spellings of Bowschere, Bowscher, Bousser, Bosher, Bowsher, Bowzer, Bowsir, Bowssar and Bowsyre. The spelling form most frequently in evidence in America is Bowser.

Some historians have asserted that the name is a variant of ‘Boutcher’ a name derived from the ocupation of butcher, however, the French derivation above is most probably the correct derivation since the Palatine German area is an admixture of German, French, Swedish and other cultures interwoven inextricably over many centuries resulting from the crusades, wars and famines.

The English Bowsers were of the landed and Yeoman classes located in the Counties of Kent, Gloucester, Chester, Buckingham, Somerset, and Hereford. Early records indicate that in the year 1278 A. D. Thomas le Bousyre was living in England. The prefix ‘le’ is generally French accepted as evidence that the name was first used as a nickname and later adopted as a surname.

Between the years of 1272 and 1327 one Roger Bousire was living in Herefordshire, later around the beginning of the 16th century, John Bowser was living at Tortsworth. John Jr, the eldest of his three sons left issue at Tortsworth, by his wife Margaret Cullimore. Their four children, John, Thomas, Elizabeth, and Margery left a trail of descendents which can be followed to the shores of Virginia.

Lieut General Thomas Bowser retired under the service of King George IV in 1894. According to Haydn's Book of Dignitaries, he was Commander in Chief of Madras, India and replaced Lt-Gen Sir Alexander Campbell on 15 June 1621. The Providence of Madras is sometimes called ‘Presidency of Fort Saint George’ from the settlement in which it had its origin.

Mathias ‘Bausser’ (Id=0675) or Bowser came from the German Palatine in 1733 to Philadelphia debarkation center. He is considered the progenitor of a majority of Bowser families and their descendents in Pennsylvania. By his wife Ester, he was the father of seven children as follows; Mathias (Id=0676), Christian, Daniel, Jacob, Magdalena, Anna Elizabeth, and Anna Marie. Since ship records are very fuzzy and inaccurate, it is quite possible that some of the above children were actually those of his son Mathias Bowser Jr.

Daniel and his two brothers came to America in 1733 and landed at Baltimore Maryland. Three Bowser brothers, most likely near kin or even brothers of the above Mathias also came from Palatine Germany about the same time as Mathias. Daniel (Id=0677) through his son Adam Bowser, plays a prominent role in the Armstrong County genealogy. John Bowser, brother of Daniel resided in both Maryland and in Penna. His children were John Jr, Peter, Henry, Barbara, Daniel, Elizabeth and Anna.

The author's mother is a descendent of Daniel Bowser and the author's father is, on his maternal side, a descendent of Mathias Bowser. Henry Bowser, the remaining brother of Daniel made his home in Washington Co. Maryland which later become Washington County Penna. He left issue of Frederick, Barbara, John, Anna, Elizabeth, Mary and Magdalena. Descendents of Henry Bowser settled in Indiana, Missouri, and Ohio.

A 'Genealogical and Historical Sketch' published by Roots Research Bureau, Ltd on the Bowsers in America says quote: 'bearers of the Bowser name can be described in general as intellectually able and, in many cases, gifted with literary talents. They have, on a whole, shown a preference for academic pursuit.' end quote.

Some of those who served in the Revolutionary War include William, Jacob, Michael, Peter, and Christopher Bowser. Dr Mathias Stevens Bowser MD was born in a log house three miles west of Kittanning on May the fourteenth and was the son of Abraham and Mary Stevens Bowser. In 1877 he took up the study of medicine under the tutelage of Dr George Tryon Harding, father of President Warren G Harding, Caledonia Ohio. He completed his medical training at the University of Cleveland.

President Warren G Harding was born at Corsica Morrow County Ohio on 02 Nov 18656, the son of Dr George Tryon and Phoebe Elizabeth (Dickerson) Harding. He is the grandson of Charles A Harding and Mary Ann Crawford and the great grandson of Joshua Crawford and Sophia Stevens thus linking him with the Bowsers and Toys of Penna.

Sophia Stephens was a sister of Mary Stevens, who married Abraham Bowser of Pa. Additional information concerning the Bowser connection is covered under the Vignette on the Flenner Family.

According to the Royal Armory Book of Records, the Bowsers of Stone County, Gloucester, England were confirmed by Camden, Clarenceus in 1606. Their shield and crest consists cross chequy of gold and blue between four water bougets of the last. It has a crest˜˜˜a demi talbot and coupled with red guttles d'or, gorged with a collar of gold and blue.

Moore Family Vignette

Sir Thomas Moore Scrooby England & Armstrong Co Pa

Two distinctly different clans of Moores live in Armstrogn County Penna. One is of German ancestry and the other definitely of Irish and British origin. Since a significant number of More and Moore families have interlinked with the Toys of Penna and Kentucky, this vignette will include information on both sects.

The most common given name among Moore families is `John' and includes several Rev. John Moores with at least one in Kentucky and one or more in Western Pa. The Moore families of Kentucky appear to have the same roots and ethnic lines as those of Penna. In the book `Preceeding the Mayflower' by James P Leynse page 37 about the Scrooby, England Moores, he discusses the fate of Sir Thomas Moore, one of the most prominent literary figures during the reign of King Henry VIII. The following paragraph contains a quote from the above book dealing with the illustrious stock from which the Moore families can trace their heritage.

Quote: `Sir Thomas More's (Moore) famous book "Utopia," like Plato's `Republic' and Sir Philip Sidney's `Arcadia,' pictures an imaginary kingdom on an island in the New World where laws, customs and life of the people are ideal. This was an eloquent protest against the brutality of the times, the religious intolerance and many social ills."

"Utopia foresaw a literate people living in clean cities where the dignity of the individual was respected and men were allowed to choose their religion. Many irudite and distinguished men were executed or thrown into filthy dungeons for refusing religious conformity: among those who lost their heads was Sir Thomas Moore". end quote.

A John Moore came from Germany to the United States when he was ten years old and was the only member of his family who lived to reach this country. The others were not destined to survive the horrendous conditions encountered during the voyage over here. This John Moore, after growing up, married Lydia Varnes and moved to Barnards, Armstrong Count Pa. John and Lydia spent the winter of 1852 in the school house there. They are the parents of seven children, namely:

a). Martin b). Isaac
c). Samuel d). John e). Ross S f). Mary
g). Sarah F `Sally'

Sarah F Moore, the youngest was born in Fayette Co Pa. Previously this John & Lydia lived in Delaware where he was employed by Du Pont. William Moore, farmer and stock raiser of Boggs Twp, Armstrong Co Pa came from Ireland during the spring of 1857. William is the son of Charles Moore (Bn-1836) and of Jane Hays. Charles Moore's parents were:

Matthew Moore and Elizabeth Stewart

harles and Jane Hays Moore had issue of twelve children:

1). Elizabeth 2). Gracie 3). Mrs Parks
4). John 5). Matthew 6). Sarah
7). ? Mickelwair 8). Wm 9). Mrs Stien
10). Ann Jane 11). Rebecca 2). Mrs Parks

Matthew, Rebecca and Ann Jane were the first to depart from Ireland. They settled in Lancaster Co Pa. during 1851. The remainder of the family, except Gracie who stayed in Ireland, came to America later. Charles, at the August age of 99, died in Armstrong County. William married Jane Dill (a native of Ireland) and had issue of:

a). Nannie b). Charles c). Mary d). Calvin e). Robert f). Harvey g). Edgar

Another William Moore was born in County Derry, Ireland in 1779 and he married Mary Downs also of County Derry. They moved to Armstrong County in 1828. William died in Corsica, Jefferson Co Pa. on 05 Dec 1867. Wm and Mary Downs Moore had issue a). Nathan b). John c). James d). Jennie e). Nancy f). Elizabeth

John Moore, born 1809, married Rachel Stuart and are the parents of Andrew M Moore (Id=1467). Andrew married Emmaretta `Etta' Fleming (Id=1798).

Andrew and Emmaretta are the parents of Rev John Moore, Kittanning Pa. They are also the parents of Grace Elma Moore Toy (Id=0170) who was born 14 Mar 1883. Grace Elma Moore married Wilson Sherman Toy (Id=0189)

Wilson and Grace Moore Toy had issue of:

2). Carl John Toy	Id=0309
3). Joseph Claire Toy	Id=0310
4). Emmaretta Toy	Id=0311
5). Ruby Elizabeth Toy	Id=0312
6). Geraldine Rebecca Toy	Id=0313

The John ~ Johns Family of Penna

Palatine German Ancestry

Rev. Martin John was a Palatine German Dunkard Minister born about 1755. Most likely he was born in Paradise Twp., York County Penna. (Id=0704) He passed away sometime during 1847 in a small log cabin on the farm of Henry Helsel his son-in-law at Sherrett, Armstrong [illegible]p., Penna. Rev John married Ester Matilena Bowser Id=0700, daughter of Mathias Bowser Jr.

Oddly enough, throughout his entire ministry, Martin John never learned to speak English. In fact, he prided himself on speaking pure Palatine German or Penna Dutch as it is frequently referred to. This certainly amplifies what the author has said concerning the fact that Palatine German blood does very run very deep throughout Armstrong County. The county is heavily laced with descendents of [illegible]e Slagles, the Bowsers, the Crissmans, the Flenners, the John and many other Palatine German families.

2). Martin John Jr. (Id=0706 married Mary Crissman.

3). Catherine John Id= 0707 also married a Crisman.

7). Ester mar Simon Steelman

The log cabin that Rev John erected in 1808 was the first building in Wash Twp Sherrett area. A second story was added to it and it stood and sheltered four generations of children until 1918 when it was permitted to fall in ruin. Ester preceded Martin in death and their bodies repose in a small burial plot on the William Hays farm, Sherrett Penna.

Ten children were born to their eldest son John John Sr. and Elizabeth Crissman. Two or more of these children are direct ancesters of quite a few Armstrong County Toy families. The two of special interest in this genealogy are John John Jr and Martin John III.

The children of John John Sr and Elizabeth Crissman are:

1). Frederick John who married Eva Wolf.
2). Adam married Ester Crissman.
3). Martin married Christina Flenner.
4). John John Jr married Julia Ann Toy, daughter of Rev James Toy.
5). Peter John married Nancy A Flenner; 2nd Katherine Bowser.
6). Sam John ~ Sarah Lasher
7). Henry mar S Hooks
8). Phillip mar a Lasher 9). Ester mar a Flenner and 2nd Jonathan Bowser.

John John Jr & Julia Ann Toy had two children: Wm John (bachelor) & James John who married Adaline Hooks.

Humphrey ~ John ~ Thomas
1640 Colonial Virginia Toys

Records of Kingston Parish William & Mary Quarterly

The following extracts are from the Register of Kingston Parish, Virginia, Virginia Patent Books 5 thru 10 named Cavaliers & Pioneers and other miscellaneous records of Gloucester County Virginia.

The Virginia records are very fragmented and not much can be done to construct a meaningfull genealogy record of any significant degree of confidence, however, some diamonds-in-the-rough can be found among these records. Chiefly, these pertain to the above three pioneers and their descendents. The earliest records appear to be those of Humphrey and Thomas among the early land grant and tax records.

Humphrey's name is recorded as having bought and sold numerous parcels of land ranging from ten acres to one record of 1,100 acres. His land began along the south side of Benits Creek. Other records place Thomas Toy's plantation in King & Queen county on Watkins line; to head of Brereton's Branch. dated 19 Sept. 1667. The question occurs that if they both had plantations around 1650, just when did they arrive in Colonial Virginia? page-175 Cavaliers & Pioneers Patent Book # 10.

Humphrey owned a plantation along side of the Dickins plantation in Gloster Co, Kingstone Parish. Records appear to indicate that Humphrey had several plantations between 1650 and 1700. Patent Book # 6 p-190 26 September 1678.

Jno Toy appears in Cavaliers & Pioneers Records Book # 7 October 1686 p-304 in the area between branches of Gray's creek and Pidgeon & Cypress Swamps Surry county Virginia. Another question begs an answer; are they father and sons, brothers or no relationship ?

Marriages:

Doctor Gustavus Brown, of Port Tobacco, Charles Co., Maryland, was the first of this family to settle in America according to his family bible. He was born on the 10th of April 1689, son of Gustavus Brown and June Mitchelson. He states on the fly leaf that he was born in Dalkeith, Scotland. Jane Mitchelson is the daughter of George Mitchelson. My wife's name is Frances Fowke born 02 Feb 1691.

The Glassell or Glassele family is said to be of French descent. It is claimed that the first of the name went from Poictiers, France to Scotland with Mary, Queen of Scots, on her return to her native land in 1550. It is so spelled in an old book, still preserved in the Virginia line, in which appears "John Glassele, his book, gotten in a gift, 1620. As written:
"His Grace the Duke of Argyll has writen me that his grandfather, John Glassell, had no Coat of Arms." "I do not find the name of Glassel in any records except in the parish records of Torthorwald and adjoining parishes of Dumfrieshire. I have as yet found nothing to corroborate the family tradition about the first Glassell having been an attendant of Queen Mary. Had the records of Torthorwald parish begun earlier than 1696, and had there not been gaps after that date, I might have helped you more. The first Glassell whom I have found as a landholder was the father of the Duchess of Argyll, who bought Longniddy, 16 miles from Edinburg in 1782."

John Glassell, Andrew^{3}·Robert^{2}·John^{1}· born Torthorwald, Madison county Va., 29 Oct 1780, died 30 Sept 1850, married 11 Sept 1806 to Louisa Richard Brown, born 22 June 1785; died 20 Aug 1818, daughter of Alexander & Humphrey Ann Frances Toy-Whiting. The Wallace Family
Elderslie Scotland

The name of Wallace is an important link in many of the Toy families especially those of Penna and New Jersey. Documentation indicates that these Wallace -Toys are related to the Wallace clan of Elderslie, Scotland. The arms of the Wallaces "Az. a lion rampant arg. within a bordure, counter company arg. and az." The Crest "An ostrich holding in his beak a horsehoe ppr."

"Ellerslie" is the spelling of this name as adopted by the Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, and Penna Wallaces who descended from the Riccarton stem. The data for the Scottish line of Wallace is derived from urke's Peerage, Burke's landed Gentry, Anderson's Scottish Nation, Crawford History of Renfrewshire, 1710 1nd 1818 as recapped in the Virginia Genealogies subtitle Wallace Family.

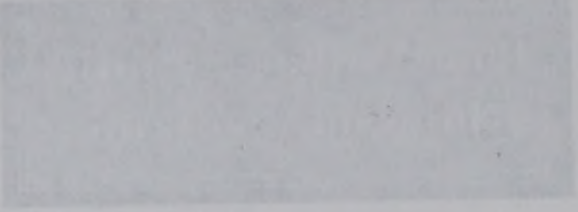
Eimerus Galeius, whom Anderson gives as the progenitor of all the families of Wallace in Scotland, was born in Wales, hence his name. He settled in Scotland, and was a witness of the foundation charter of the abbacy of Kelso by David I., A. D. 1128

His son Richard Walense of Riccarton, Ayr, succeded him. Mitchel says that when David I, set himself to complete the anglicizing of Scotland in Church and State he called a crowd of Southrons to aid im. Among them a Norman Knight, Walter tz Alan, rode north from Oswestry on the Weslh border. In his train rode one Welshman, Richard by name. The Norman knight was under obligations to his Welsh neighbor, and no doubt looked to clear off the the score in Scotland. Richard, the Welshman, was a witnes to the charter of the Abbacy of Paisley, A. D. 1160-3. The signature is Richard Wal, an abbreviation for Wallys or Walays.

The name appears in many slightly differentshapes˜˜ Wal, Walays, Walais, Waleis, Waleys, Walleyis, Wallayis, Walles, Walas, Wallas, Waless, Wallaise, Walace, Waleng, Wallensis, and others. The Guardian himself as Guillaume le Galeys. These have been replaced by `Wallace', in Ireland by `Wallis' and in Scotland by `Vallance.' The meaning for all is the same and tell us that the Wallaces were of the original Celtic people of the land.

Richard obtained from the high steward of Scotland a large part of the district of Kyle, Ayr. These lands he named "Riccarton," after himself. Richard was the most powerful vassal of the Stewarts in Kyle. He had two sons; Richard and Henry. Richard died in 1204 and was succeeded by his brother Henry. Henry acquired a significant amount of additional lands in Strathgrif, Renfrewshire including `Eledrslie.' He had a son Adam.

William[19] Wallace, Merchant, of Galrigs, died before 1734 when his son was indentured ot Dr. Gustavus Brown. He was a Commissioner on supply for the county of Ayr in 1720. Obviously skipping a few Wallaces, we come the Toy connection.



Michael Wallace^4 Michael^3 Michael^2 William^1 of Madison county, Va was born 11 Nov 1777 and dided 14 Feb 1851. In 1800 he married 1st to Mary Kelton Glassell born in Madison county Va on 04 May 1783 and died 06 June 1818. she was the daughter of Andrew and Elizabeth Taylor Glassell and married 2nd to Cecilia Gustavus Brown Brooke born 11 June 1784, died 19 Apr 1833 and is the daughter of Alexander and Humphrey Ann Frances Toy Whiting Brooke. His 3rd marriage was to Margaret Henderson born 1785, died 91 Apr 1859.

Michael's 2nd wife Cecilia Brooke Wallace by her first marriage had Betty Whiting Brooke born 03 Oct 1812. Betty married Dr. Francis Fitzhugh Conway on 24 Dec 1834.

Thelma DeAnn Wallace Id=0090 married Andrew S Toy Id= 0082 and, during their later years in life, settled in Armstrong County Pa. Andrew was born in 1799 in Washington County Pa. They had issue of two children Elizabeth Ann Toy Snyder Id= 0091 and Mary Jane Toy Id= 7446. Andrew was was a prominent gunsmith and died from Pulmorosis in Kittanning Pa on 20 Mar 1853. Film 861254 Armstrong County and wills of 1850.

Both Thelma DeAnn and Andrew have their roots in neighboring plantations in Chester Twp, Burlington Co New Jersey Andrew's father is William Toy Id= 0077 and his mother is Sarah Elizabeth Cooper, both born in Chester Twp, Burlington Co NJ. (Reader's History of Washington Co Pa. Richard Toy Id= 0070 and Rebecca Willard are the grandparents of Andrew. Richard was killed in action defending his father's plantation against the British soldiers in the American Revolution. He is the progenitor of the Armstrong County Toys of Penna. The Colonial Calendar of Wills show that Richard Toy was a witness to the Will of John Walker Sr's will on 22 May 1776, just prior to Richard's death at the hands of the British soldiers. The plantation of Richard's father James Toy Id= 0046 and his mother Mary Borden Id= 0074 lies adjacent to that of John Wallace, most liekly the grandfather of Thelma DeAnn Wallace.

Joseph Paul Toy Family

and
Christina Crisman

Joseph Paul Toy is the eighth generation of Toys in America beginning with his ancester George Toy, the ships captain, who was plying the coast of the Province of New Jersey around 1640 to nearly the year of 1700.

There are a number of colorful court records of that period concerning cargos of rum and slaves. His son James Toy was also a sea captain and his grandson James Toy is listed as the captain of the ship Lark. George's great grandson was lost at sea when the frigate he was on was lost during a violent storm. A picture of Joseph Paul, his wife Christina and the eldest members of his family are on the following page. The picture is approximately one hundred years old.

Joseph Paul was born in 1828 and died in 1918. Joseph's wife Christina was born in May 1836 and died on 02 Sept 1921 (Id=0149) Her parents are John Crissman (Id=0717) and Anna Crissman (Id=0718) , Joseph and Christina were married in 1852.

Their children are:

1). Mary Ann Toy (Id=0150) was born in 1852 in Armstrong Co Pa. She mar-ried Harvey Bowser (Id= 0175) in 1974 and had nine children)

2). John Ross Toy Id= 0151 was born 12 Dec 1853 and married Rebecca Ann Toy Id=0183 on 27 Nov 1873. John died on 13 Jan 1933. They had 10 children. See Vignette on this family.

3). Margaret Toy (Id=0152 and was born in 1855. She died a spinster at the old Jos Toy homestead at Toy's Crossroads.

4). Henry Clifford Toy (Id= 0153 was born 07 Jan 1859 and married Nannie C Higgenbotham (Id= 0197) on 05 July 1887. Nannie was born 15 Dec 1867. They also had ten children.

4). William Toy (Id= 0154) was born in Jan 1860 and married Rebecca (Id= 0206) and they had six children.

6). Sarah Jane Toy Id= 0155 was born in Nov 1860. She married a Claypoole.

7). Hulda Mae Toy Id= 0156 was born in 1871 and was married Charles Fletcher (Id= 2590) They had eight children. She died on 24 Jan 1941.

8). Ellen Elmira Toy (Id= 0157) was born in 1868, died on 14 Jan 1940. She married Harrison Hugh Hooks Id= 0215 on 09 July 1890. They had eight children.

9). Louis S Toy (Id= 0158) was born in 1870, Armstrong Co Pa, married 1st to Sabina Crissman (Id= 0224) on 14 May 1895 in Wash Twp. Sabina died during the birth of her second child on 04 Dec 1897. Her children are Beulah and Austin Toy.

10). Nancy Jane Toy Id= 0159 was born 10 Apr 1872 at Mosgrove Pa and died 10 Apr 1966. She married Samuel A Ruffner on 24 Dec 1889. Nancy Jane married two times. The first was to Samuel A Ruffner on 24 Dec 1889 and the second was to James C Hare. (Id= 0918). Nancy had one child to Samuel A Ruffner II and six children to James C Hare.

11). Susan Toy (Id= 0160) was born in 1876 and married C. T. Crissman first (Id= 7526) on or about 1890. Her second marriage was to Elvie L Claypoole (Id= 0236) on 09 July 1898. Elvie and Susan had issue of eleven children. Susan had two children in her first marriage.

12). Frederick Frank Toy Id= 0161 was born 25 July 1874 at Redbank Pa. He married Ester Mae Haggerty Id= 0248 on 01 August 1898 and died 22 Mar 1960. They had Eleven Children Fred inherited the old homestead.

13). Florence Toy Id= 0162 was born 04 Mar 1879 and died 06 May 1967. She married J A Prater Id= 0260 on 06 May 1967 at McGrann Pa.

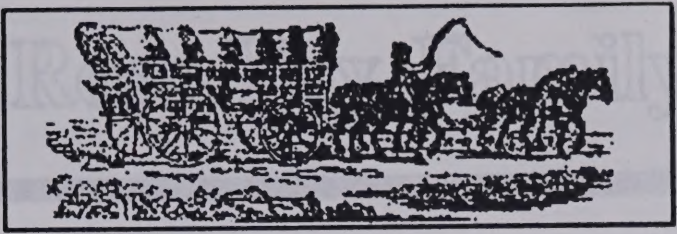
Joseph Paul was a well to do land owner, carpenter and farmer. His father was William Toy II and his mother was Mary Ann Bowser Id= 0092. Sndx- 1860-236-52 Ln 19. He was born on 24 Mar 1828 At Redbank, Armstrong Co, Pa., married in 1852 and died on 30 March 1918 at the august age of 90 years and six days.

The original of this group photo was obviously an old tintype shot through a barb wire fence. On the original photo, the barb wire is very large and prominent going across the mid section of those sitting down. The photographer probably was not aware the barb wire would be so obvious. Computer enhancement was necessaary to remove the discoloration, barb wire and dirt accumulation over the 80 plus years.

Unfortunately direct sunlight had eliminated the facial features of several in the back row. Remember! Joseph's father was a true pioneer in Penna at the time Joseph was born and photography was in its very infancy. Photography was done by trial and error; mostly error. Copies of the enhanced photos on photography quality paper are available free of charge for anyone who would like to have one. Seated, left to right are: John Ross Toy, eldest son of Joseph Paul Toy, next to him is his mother, Christina Crissman Toy, followed by Joseph Paul Toy. Rebecca Ann Bowser Toy, wife of John Ross Toy, is seated on the far right. Since the author is too young to know the others, he can only assume that the four ladies standing are Mary Ann, Margaret, Sarah Jane and Hulda Mae. The two gentlemen standing would most likely be Henry Clifford and William. Any additional information available from readers, please share it with the author. Perhaps better pictures are available in memorabilia long forgotten or hidden away by descendents who would like to share it with the author. Even if the author never has the opportunity to revise the books, his computer files are shared with the LDS for perpetual storage and retrieval.

The author is very grateful to those who have shared their treasure of family pictures with him or have intrusted precious artifacts with him. All pictures and other memorabilia shared this way is stored in fireproof containers. Sometimes it may be several months before they can be returned because of the time element involved in proper formatting into the computer.



We should pause a moment and reflect about the grandparents of Joseph Paul Toy and the terrible hardships they endured to settle in Little Washington, Washington County Penna. On Oct 07, 1793 William Toy and Sarah Cooper were married in Philadelphia Pa and shortly thereafter departed from New Jersey to seek their fortune in the wild west frontier of Penna. There were no railroads, only wagon trails, over the forbidding Allegheny mountains fraught with many perils and hidden dangers, not the least of which were the many savages lurking behind every tree along the way.

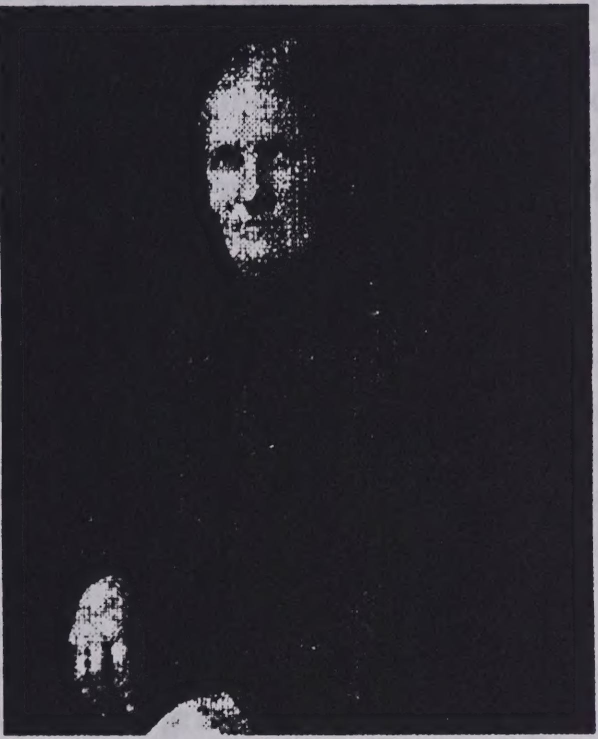
They left behind the comfortable life style of plantation living in Chester Township, Burlington County, New Jersey. William was an only child as his father, Richard Toy, was killed by the British in the Revolutionary War while defending his father's plantation. Andrew and William were both born in Penna, perhaps before they departed from Philadelphia. Records indicate that John, the fourth in line, was born in Yohogania County Virginia in 1806. Yohogania county was carved out of Virginia by the Mason Dixon line and became Washington County Penna. It lies about 80 miles southwest of Armstrong County in close proximity to Wheeling West Virginia.

Other records indicate that William and Sarah Cooper Toy's third son was born in 1805 in Washington county. Next came James, a frontier preacher who married Catherine Flenner. Jacob followed in 1816 and Joseph in 1816. According to Reader's history of Washington county, they had a daughter Ann. Other records indicate that a William Toy died in Western Penna in 1816. We believe that this was our William.

Reader's history of this western frontier indicates that they appear to have travelled in a group from the Philadelphia area stopping to develop a settlement which is now known as Hagerstown Maryland. Among the group that travelled west were many of the later Washington Pa and Armstrong county settlers. In this group were David Flenner, the Flemings, the Piles, the Fricks, the Crismans, John Bish, Claypooles, the Cravenors, the Johns and a number of other family lines of present day Armstrong county.

John Ross Toy Family

John Ross Toy



Rebecca Ann Bowser

John Ross Toy Id=0151 was born Dec 12, 1853 at Redbank, Armstrong County Penna, the son of Joseph Paul & Christina `Crissman' Toy. He married Rebecca Ann Bowser on Nov 27 1873 and is the father of nine boys and one daughter as shown on page 72. John Ross, master carpenter, landowner and farmer died at Toys Crossroads at his homestead on Jan 15 1933.

Rebecca Ann Bowser Toy Id= 0183 was born on May 30, 1854 at Armstrong County Pa. She is of Palatine German extraction and the daughter of Robison Bowser Id=0183 and Elizabeth Nunnamaker Id= 0271. She married John Ross Toy on Nov 27 1873 and died at the Toy Homestead on April 07 1939.

Rebecca, my grandmother, was a very stern, perhaps just a little spiteful, however, very loving lady. Very often she would tie a knot in the end of a towel and tuck it onto her apron. I learned very quickly about that knot, when snapped very quickly by her expert hand, it could deal out sudden and quick punishment for anyone who was on the receiving end of that long towel.

John Wilbert Toy and his wife Sarah Belle Bowser Toy are the author's father and mother so you can see that Palatine German blood runs deeply on both sides of our family. For example, Joseph Paul Toy, my great grandfather's mother was also a Bowser of German extraction. The Crissmans were also German. As the name Toy is very unusual, occasionally I would ask my father to tell me our nationality and he would usually reply that we were `square heads' a term frequently applied to the Palatine Dutch.

Joseph, Id= 0188, a steamfitter and twin of Robert Id= 0187 had died at an early period of his life due to an industrial accident. The steam in the plant had reached an abnormal pressure level and a pipe burst while Joseph was standing on a ladder. He was thrown to the concrete floor below and, unfortunately, landed on his head.

Harvey, Id= 0184 is the eldest of the family of nine boys and one daughter. He passed away on Dec 07, 1936, just three years after his father John Ross Toy died. Granpa & Granma Toy expected all of their children and grand children to come `home' for holiday festive occasions.

Heaven forbid if anyone was ever foolhardy enough to even consider any other alternative. I can remember, as a young boy, the enormously long heavily laden table in the basement where all the grand children were served during such festive meals. Vivid memories of granma's towel was sufficient deterrant for any of the children who might consider wandering into the kitchen for an early morsel.

Should you think that the above is stretching the truth a little, just bear with me a little while I recall their golden wedding anniversary, an event which illustrates just how close knit the family really was on special occasions. The local newspaper reported that the home of Mr and Mrs John Ross Toy in East Franklin Township was the scene of much joy and happiness on Tuesday Nov 27, 1923 when that worthy couple, surrounded by children, grandchildren, other relatives, and friends, celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary.

For everyone in the congenial company present, the day was one never to be forgotten. Everybody entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion and none were more so than Father and Mother Toy. Addresses were delivered by Rev John Moore, Rev T. R. Wayne and Rev John MacPhail. Mrs T. R. Wayne sang a number that was also appreciated. Miss Ethel Barnhart and Miss Kate Moore sang a duet.

A beautiful cake was made for this occasion and the `old folks' were given a `joy ride' through the streets of Kittanning while old tin cans and coal buckets trailed behind.

There were fifty six grandchildren and six great grandchildren present at the occasion. Mr and Mrs Toy received one hundred and fifty dollars in gold (a very large sum for the period), and many other gifts. Edna Toy, a grandchild twelve years of age read an essay she composed which reads as follows:

Golden Wedding of Grand pa and Granma Toy.

Were united in marriage quite a number of years ago Twice ten plus 20 plus 10 Although I was not here, I know a little about it Of this I know and a little of that, That Granma was glad and Granpa was sad, For they had tied the knot which never to this day has been opened. For fifty years to this day it has remained so, and fifty more we hope, this is the reason.

Granpa was sad, he thought when the knot was tied it would become so tight, it would never be broken, therefore his hard work would begin. Next came the family, ten there were. whom all as mischevious as in number there were. There were single file children, triplets and twins. Such an increasing number, no end could be seen.

Poor grandfathers wrinkles became bigger and deeper as each day wore out, his patience to nothing but steeps. Grandmother laughed harder but her eyes did grow dim, for all the mending she did was a sin. First came Harvey whose hair now is quite gray. Second came Curtis whose fame is well known. Third came Elizabeth, the flower of the flock, for granpa was really delighted, and lost his new sock. Fourth came the twins, Robert and Joe who in their lives had a hard row to hoe.

Joseph is dead, Robert is living and now he is meek as a wee little kitten. Now came Wilson~~who through his troubles resembled Abraham Lincoln.

Next came Lawrence who got his name from a river of deepness, named Saint Lawrence. Next came Wilbert, who surely did lose, for he made a living by selling tarts and hose. Next came Frank who in time was great helps, for he ate grandmother's pie, one day on the shelf. Then grandpa was sadder for new pants were to buy.

Next came Samuel, the baby, I suppose. For up to this day, the baby he denotes. Grandpa worked harder, how hard he did work, and his back became bended, and stiff and straight. More clothes, food and shelter, especially scarce. Grandma was vexed at the thought of the work, for above all the work she did during the day; at night, she patched til the moon grew gray, and still there was holes in their pants next day.

She put dresses on those nine little boys, when they came back, there was no dresses to be seen, so she decided this wouldn't do. Elizabeth was sad, for blue overalls ~~ she wore.

Now they all have grown~~~ in age and in stature, and meet difficulties with~~~ their own children and grandchildren. Now they come home to this place~~~ where it is possible to celebrate the Golden Wedding of their poor old father and mother. While all their sons and daughters had come to bless their home, now they are all gone and their parents are left alone.... to fight their battles through. finis~~~

My cousin Edna was only eleven years, going on twelve at the time she wrote the above salute to her grand parents. I salute her for her keen perception and ability to put everything in proper perspective. Edna Buskirk-Kirkland Id= 0295 now lives with her second husband George Kirkland in Minnesota and on holiday occasions we send greetings to each other. She is the daughter of Robert Id= 0187 and Daisy Mae Bish Id= 0265.

Her family is all raised now and she is out to pasture, the same as I am. I was just six years old and barely old enough to remember the occasion. Edna now is an accomplished musician and certified public accountant and as, indeed, her first husband was before he passed away.

My Grandmother, Rebecca Ann Bowser Toy died at the age of 84 at the homestead on the East Brady Road on Friday, April 07, 1939 at 4 P. M. She was buried in the cemetery at the Cowansville Presbyterian Church, bless her dear heart. For more information about her background, please read the vignette on the Bowsers.

Concerning grand dad John Ross Toy, his ancestry can be traced back to Sea Capt George and Christina Toy around 1640 in the Swedish Colony of New Jersey. In fact, a number of these old Toy pioneers came from England, by way of Jamaica. Captain George plied his trade of carrying Rum and slaves between these two points.

Many of the British and Irish who were persecuted for religious beliefs sailed to Jamaica and later in life moved on to the colonies. Records indicate some of these Toys were born in Jamaica. Various colonial records imply that Robert Id=0001, the Welshman, and his wife Elizabeth are the first known progenitors of the Armstrong County Toys. The old Virginia William & Mary College records state this to be so.

The Von Schlegel ~ Slagle Family

Christopher F Schlegel and Anna Maria Aister

The Schlegel (Slagle) Family in America was founded by Christopher Friederich Schlegel and Anna Maria Aister of York County Penna. He is mentioned in the town Ratsbuch as one of the surviving children of Christoph Gottlieb Schlegel on May 19, 1697.

He settled in the Province of Pennsylvania at what is the present Germantown, Penna. On Dec 14, 1700 On Feb 21, 1705 he purchased one hundred acres of land from Amndrew Cox, near a branch of Red Lyon Creek in New Castle County Pa. (now Delaware County Pa.) Pps 27 & 28 of "The Schlegel Family in America" by Wm B Marye and Russel Slagle.

Christopher Friederich Schlegel married Anna Maria Aister on 15 May 1718. Anna was the daughter of Johann Jacob Aister. (The Aister File, `Historical Society of York County Pa.) They had a daughter Hanna, born 06 Feb 1721, of which little is known. John Jacob Aister, a prominent Lutheran settler of Philadelphia County, Pa. emigrated from Germany in 1717 from the city of Leutschau, Hungary where the paternal grandfather of Christopher Schlegel was living in 1651 and from there Christopher's grandfather received his patent of nobility.

Christopher Schlegel, a native of Saxony in Germany appears to have been the first person to build a mill anywhere in the Susquehanna watershed. AT the time, it was still virgin territory and its only inhabitants were Indians and a handful of Swiss Mennonites who had settled several years earlier on both sides of the Pequea Creek which is located just a few miles southeast of what was later to become Lancaster Pa.

Below is a chart showing the relationship between Johann Wolfgang Goethe and the Romantisist Schlegel Brothers."

About Volume Three

This book is the third of a three volume set on Tay ~ Toy ~ Toye Genealogy and all of their ancestors, descendents and related families. Volume One is mostly narrative dealing with the origins of the family name including a Biblical king who was a friend and ally of King David.

Volume One also includes many vignettes on related family lines such as the Bowsers, Coopers, Christmans, Bordens, Browns, Lees, Washingtons, Johnsons, and numerous others. Additionally, it contains many photos of these Toy families, especially those who attained historical prominence and notable achievements.

Volume Two begins the individual family profiles such as those contained within this volume. There are, as in most Genealogy books, gaps in family lines, however, there are some ten thousand individual profiles within the three volume set. A Fifth Edition of the set is now being compiled with many new names and family profiles. It is scheduled for printing in early January of 1996. Anyone having family records pertaining to Toys or their related families is encouraged to forward it to Dr Toy whose address is on the cover page. The intent is to make the set as complete and informative as time and sources of information permit.

The descendents of the above referenced Sea Captain George and Christina Toy of the Swedish Colony in New Jersey are legion and truly includes many nation builders and people of prestige and repute. Many other family lines of Toys and their descendents are also covered especially those from England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales. According to early colonial records George Andrew Toy is obviously the son of Joseph Nicholas Toy who died in Harford County Maryland in 1641.

KETCH: HOPEWELL

According to William & Mary College in Colonial Virginia, Joseph Nicholas Toy is a descendent of the Welshman Robert Toy and his wife Elizabeth. Prior to the year of 1540 he had set up a printing press at the 'Sign of the Bell' in Saint Paul's Churchyard, London England. Robert's son Humphrey Toy was born in London about 1540 and died in Bristol on 10 Oct 1577.

Yeoman Cavalier Colonial Land Grant Records show a Humphrey, John and Robert Toy as plantation owners, perhaps sons of the above mentioned Joseph Nicholas Toy. These early Toys come from a long line of 'Sea Captains' plying their trade from the Barbadoes to the Colonies from 1630 to the late 1700's.

William Toy and two brothers appeared on Long Island and the Boston area around 1620 to 1700, perhaps from the same family line.

Toys in The United Kingdom & The Provincial Colonies

1100 ~ 1850 AD

The family name of Tay ~ Toy ~ Toye, as it is commonly used today, evolved over the centuries from spellings such as Tuve, Tovey, Towey, Toui, Tau, Taw, Tuath, Tovi and Toi, a name brought to England from Biblical times by Tovi, The Proud, a follower of CNUT. (see Dithemic Derivation of Names, London England), a dictionary of British surnames.

Many sources of recorded data contain many fragments `or windows' into the past of people bearing the Family Name of Toy. People with the name of Tue who migrated to the British Isles from Norway accepted the English spelling of Toy and Toye. The Irish name of O`Toy was derived from Touhy, O`Touhy, Touhey, and Tighe meaning descendants of the sturdy man, grandson of Touth which also meant Rustic Lord. The book "Old Galway" speaks of three "Tuath Brothers" who ruled with an iron fist the county of Galway. The name "Toye" in Irish and Welsh simply means the "son of Toy."

Bun ~ Gaillimh (Old Galway) was in the Province of Connau Ireland and in the year of 1227 Connaught was partitioned between Rich de Burg and the King with the "Three Tuaths" or Toy ancestors receiving one of the five contreds into which it was divided. The book "Old Galway" tells that these three Toy brothers circa 1227 ruled Old Galway with an iron fist, ruthlessly and indeed were true warriors.

Major sources of information concerning these names include the `Athenae Cantabrigeneaus,' Burks Landed Gentry, John Burke Heraldic History Vol III p-634, Wood's Athenae Oxon, Chamber's Biographical Illustrations of Worchestershire, and Nash's History of Worcestershire. Other sources place the Toy name in Cornwall as early as 1530.

The Rev Patrick Woulfe's "Irish Surnames' lists this as a rare Mayo surname, possibly an abbreviation of O'Twohy, Tooey, or O'Toye.. There is a village in Northern Ireland called Toye. O`Toye in Ireland means "son of Toye." It follows therefore, according to some of the Irish Surname Books, that Toye is the son of Toy and O`Toye is the son of Toye, presumably O`Toye would then be the grandson of Toy, if it were a direct lineage of three generations.

Opposed to an Irish origin for the name are Aluric Toi, Liber Wintoniensis A. D. 1066, and Warin Toy; County Cambridge 1273 Hundred Rolls. The Royal Book of Crests of Great Britain and Ireland (James MacVeigh, 1883, Vol page 399) gives Toy or Toye of Gloucester; on a mural coronet, gules, a martlet argent. (inside front cover.)

The Toy or Toye family appeared in the Helford River area just after the Hugenot persecutions somewhere around 1600 and they say that their name was originally `du Toit.' There are also du Toit families in Holland and in South Africa. The Dean of Carlisle in 1967 was called `du Toit.' Sir Richard do Toit accompanied the Earl of Pembroke to Ireland in 1171 (History of `Botreforda (Butterford) is an entry that appears twice in the Doomsday Book as two manors...which were held by two different Saxons `Alricus and Tovius before the Conquest which sounds very much like Aluric Toi. The name Toi, still found in the United States, first appears in the Bible for King Toi (Tau) an ally of King David and being a descendent of the 7th and 11th sons of Ham.

According to the Dictionary of British Surnames by P. H. Reaney, it is a name brought to this country by Tovi the Proud, a follower of Cnut (ile. King Canute) `Tovi had been a considerable land owner in Hampshire before 1066 viz...a reference in Feudal aids, Vol 11 p-172 to Robert de Toye who held a fourth part of a fee in the Hundred of Lexeden, County Essex, 1346 which would suggest that Aluric Toy is the same man as Tovi the Proud.

The Oxford History of England (an Anglo-Saxon England) pages 407, 408, 417; ‘One of Edward the Confessor's chief household officers, Hamed Anager, whose lands extended into, at least, seven counties, was a grandson of King Cnut's (Canute's) followers, Tovi the Proud.' Other sources will be mentioned throughout the three volumes as they apply to particular items of data.

Sir John Toy was Vicar of the Church of Saint Augustine of Doddermill, Worchester (27 Oct 1536) and was a witness to the will of his friend Sir Nicholas Ffownes. Sir John Toy III, esq. (Bn 1611 d-1663) matriculated from Pembroke College on 23 May 1628, received his MA degree 2 July 1634.

Sir John Toy III was Chaplain to the Bishop of Hereford, Headmaster of King's School 1634, Vicarage at Worcestershire then at Stokes until his death on 28 Dec 1663. Sir John was buried in the Cathedral of Worcester. His wife Martha died 10 April 1677. Most likely the Coat of Arms as illustrated elsewhere is that of Sir John.

Robert Toy (149? ~ 1556) came from Wales (Dwinn Heraldic Visitation of Wales, i.137) with his wife Elizabeth but, before 1546, had set up a printing press at the sign of the Bell in St. Paul's Churchyard. Several of his publications were: Mathew's Folio Bible in 1551 and a reprint of Thynne's edition of Chaucer's works in 1555. His widow carried on the business until 1558 and died in 1568 bequeathing four lbs to the company.

Humphrey Toy, son of Robert (1540 ~ 1577), was born in London and was made free of the stationers company by his father's copy on 11 March 1557 and came on the livery at the first reviving thereof in 1561. (Ames Typogr. Antiq, ed Herbert p-933: Arber transcript i 130) and served as a warden from 1571 to 1573.

Humphrey Toy in 1564 was fined for keeping his press open on St Luke's day. In 1568, Humphrey took a prominent part in the dispute between the Company and Richard Jugge ~ the Queen's printer, about the privilege of printing the bible and testaments. Humphrey removed his press to St Paul's Churchyard and issued from it in 1567 a second edition of Salisbury's Playne and Familiar Introduction, Teaching how to pronounce the Letters in the Brytishe Tongue, now commonly called Welsh.

Humphry died at Bristol on 16 Oct 1577 and was buried there in All Saints' Church. A handsome monument was erected there by his widow Margery, with the following inscription:

‘Humfridus Toius, Londinensis, Jacet hoc tumulo, que obit 16 Oct 1577,' his wife carried on the business until her death.

Another Humphrey Toy was noted in the Journal of Records. It is reasonable to conclude that the Humphrey Toy of early Colonial Virginia is the grandson of this Humphrey Toy since English records refer to his son Humphrey a clothier and a Mariner merchant tailor in 1583 and yet another Humphrey Toy was made free of the Stationers Company on 6 June 1637. (Timberley's Encyclopedia: Corser's Collectanea, ii. 323: Barrett's Bristol. 1789, pp-442-3). This is most likely the Humphrey Toy who appeared in Virginia Colony linking colonial Toys to the Welshman.

Another Toy Coat of Arms as illustrated on the inside back cover of this volume portrays a Welsh beast with a spear and axe to signify that this line of Toys are of Welsh descent and also was Armorer to the King.

John Toy, esquire of Caermarthen, Pembroke County, England, probably the son of Sir John Toy, married Jane Meyrick. (Burke's Landed Gentry 'Meyrick's of Goodrich Court') John was probably born around 1560 and married into the descendents of Meuric ap Llewelyn of Bodorgan, esq of the body of King Henry VII, and VIII.

The wife of John Toy, Jane Meyrick is the granddaughter of the Right Reverand Rowland

Rev Meyrick married in 1554, Catherine Barrett (died- 1598) da of Owen Barrett, esq of Gellwick, County of Pembroke. Jane Meyrick, daughter of John Meyrick who died in 1634, was married 1st to Sir John Toy, esq. of Carmarthen, and 2nd to John Herbert, esq.

Rev. Rowland Meyrick's son and heir, was Knighted at Cadiz in 1596 thru Robert, Earl of Essex, who obtained from Queen Elizabeth a grant of Wigmore castle in Herefordshire along with a dozen surrounding Manors for him. Sir Gelly was executed in 1600 for assisting the Earl of Essex in his rebellion. His estate was later restored to his children Sir Gelly married Elizabeth Lewis, widow of John Gwynne, esq of Llanelwed, County Recon. His daughter Margaret married John Vaughn, Earl of Carberry (Burke's Heraldic History Vol III P-634.

Much research remains to be done to close the missing links between the Toys of the Colonies and the Toys of the United Kingdom. Perhaps some of it will never be completed. Time, financial resources and the paucity of data being the major constraints to filling in the essential missing links.

Three Toys; William, Henry and John appeared in the Boston area between 1620 to 1640 with William living in New Amsterdam, Long Island New York prior to his arrival in Massachusetts. Records indicate that Henry Toy died in Ipswich in the year of 1655. How long he lived in the Colonies is not known. Joseph Nicholas Toy died in Baltimore in 1641 and we have no knowledge of how long he was in the Provinces.

Note: William and Mary College of Virginia states that this Humphrey Toy is a direct ancester of Thomas Dallam Toy, a Norfolk Virginia druggist and merchant of the 1800's. (See the William & Mary magazine). thus providing a possible direct line to the later Toys. Many of the early New Jersey Toys were Mariners, ship captains and Ministers.

Humphrey, Thomas and John Toy also appeared in the Colonial Virginia area during the same period of time. It is unlikely if this John Toy is the one who appeared in Massachusetts around 1630, however, he is most likely a descendent of Sir John Toy . Records indicate that a Joseph Nicholas Toy also came to the Harford County area of Maryland around 1640 and died there in 1641. The early colonial records keep referring to these Toys as Yeoman Cavalier Pioneers.

Massachusetts listed William Toy as having taken the 'Freeman' oath in 1630. A Freeman such as William Toy of the Massachusetts Bay Colony was a member of the body politic and as such was entitled to the right of suffrage (the right to vote in political elections) and to hold office. In order to become a Freeman it was required that the applicant provide evidence that he was a member of the Congregational Church. Under the later Freeman's Oath they could be admitted by the Church or General Court of the Colony.

Obviously `Ye Toy Mountain' was named after the three Toys living in that area in 1630 or there about. Boston records disclose the will of John Toy was one of the first three in Vol I. pro. 7 Dec 1641. His will refers to a son Allen Toy who remained in England. John was a trader and spoke in his will of `goods remain, besides money and especially trees, no doubt fruit trees.

Most of the early records of Massachusetts list the descendants of these Toys under Tay or Toy or both. For instance the records of King Philip's War list them under Tay and again under Toy. Many of the town records also do likewise. So do many of the church records. In fact, early Colonial records of New Jersey, Delaware and Pennsylvania indicate that the descendants of George and Christina Toy of the Swedish Colony of New Jersey have used four different spellings for the same individual, namely, Tay, Taw, Toy and Toye. The name of Gertrude Toy, daughter of James and Mary Bordon Toy, appears in various wills, deeds, marriage records and death records as Gertraude Tay, Gertray Taw, and other places as Gertrude Toye..

The name of Tay ~ Toy ~ Toye is a comparatively rare and uncommon surname with, perhaps, less than ten thousand individuals in the entire world with this combination or the variations of it. The name and or its common variations can be associated with such ethnic groups as the Irish, English, Welsh, French, Scandinavian, Syrian, and Asian people.

Many of these names were previously derived from early Dutch names of Tahey and Tooy. In Belgium, the family name is derived from Tye ~ Thy ~ Thye and are directly related to the root name of Teigh

The study of Onomastics is the study of tracing such names back to the medieval villages and manors of the person's origin It concerns how or where the name began and the subsequent evolution of its various spellings

The Cornish Toys from Cornwall England

The Toy Roots in Cornwall England

There are large clusters of Toys in various counties of various states of the USA. There also appears to be similar clusters of Toys in England, Ireland and Wales. One of these clusters is located in a large sector of the British Isles called Cornwall. We have a history of some of these Cornwall Toy families both when they lived in Cornwall and later when they lived in early America. Apparently the Cornwall area is rich in culture, tradition, history and deeply steeped in superstitions.

A book was written called "The Story of the Toys" by Mary H Dodge. The book has been out of print for many years now. The author hired a rare book company to locate him a copy and, unfortunately, had to pay a collector's price for it. It is the story of Mary H Dodge's mother and father's family and covers a period of about one hundred years. It is unfortunate that the book is written in the second person and was cut short by the sudden illness and death of her mother Jane Osler Toy.

Two things make the book very interesting. The first is her vivid discription of Cornwall England and the second is how she portrays the life of her father Reverend Joseph Toy, a munitions manufacturer, of Simsbury Connecticutt.

The following account of life in Cornwall England is a composite description based upon Mary H Dodges account; second from the "History of the Dingle Family," third a book on Cornwall written by Tregellas, and from other sources and accounts from various familys who have lived there or have visited the area. All the above sources refer to it with reverence, a great nostalgia and a deep longing to go back to their roots.

The long coastline of Cornwall, the most southern and western county of England, has been, like Italy, compared in shape to a Wellington boot. The iron heel of the boot is the mass of serpentine rock which forms the southern point of the Lizard, and the foot that part which lies between Mounts Bay and Land's End. The instep is at St Ives Bay, and the body of the boot constitutes the main portion of the country. The highest part toward the eastern end forming the Bodmin Moors.

Along the northern coast, the mural cliffs, against which the Atlantic rollers forever break, are in marked contrast to the tamer and more sylvan scenery of the south and west shores; while across the low lying lands between St Ives and Mounts Bay the sea often threaten to meet during the spring tides.

The climate of Cornwall, owing to its situation, is so remarkable as to deserve appreciation. The month of January at Penzance is as warm as at Florence or Madrid, and July is as cool as at St Petersburg. The Cornwall people claim that it is the mildest climate in the world.

According to Mary Dodge, the people are "ardent and vivacious, self-reliant and versatile." She tells us that it is no uncommon thing for a Cornish man to build his own house, make his own shoes, be both fisherman and miner, and possibly, small shopkeeper. Where ever the Cornish miner emigrates, he is pretty sure to take the lead in enterprise and danger. As a body of men they are industrious, intelligent, sober and orderly, neither soured by hard work nor depressed by harsher privations.

The poet Taylor, in 1649, writes:
"Cornwall is the compleate and repleate 'Home of Abundance,' for high, churlish hills and affable, courteous people.

The country hath its share of huge stones, mighty rocks, noble free gentlemen, bountiful housekeepers, strong and stout men, handsome and beautiful women." end quote.

From time immemorial Cornwall has had a leading part in the mineral industries of England. Mines of tin, copper, lead, and zinc abound. They have been the chief source of revenue to the country. They gave abundant employment to the laboring class.

Men, women and even the children were freely employed in various ways about the mines. Since 1870 the mining industry has declined. The mines have been less productive and the great discoveries of ore in this and outher counties have greatly reduced prices and scattered the Cornish miners over the world.

A recent syndicated news article written by Wm Ecenbarger (Univ Press Syndicate) Jan 1992 tells about the present popularity of Walking Tour Trips to Cornwall England. The Wayfarers is one of several Walking Tour Companies, located at: 172 Bellevue Ave, Newport R.I. 02840 Phone: 401/849-5087. These companies takes them to quaint, rustic old English villages such as Ruan Lenihorne, Truro, Philleigh, Trewortha, Gerrans, Veryan, Portloe, Portscatho, Mevagissey and Bohortha.

Cornwall is well suited for walking because it offers a varied topography and also because of its isolation. It is the tail of England, at the southwest tip, aloof and detached; a rocky claw thrusting out into the Atlantic. Americans who want to see one pretty village after another usually go walking in the Cotswold. There is very little to do in this part of Cornwall except walk and sail.

The Cornish have a long history of superstition and magic spells. Along the estuaries and little coves that follow the coastline you can hear not only of the shipwrecks but also of smuggling, pirates and contrived shipwrecks. While the natural elements caused thousands of shipwrecks, the Cornish, appear to have a hand in more than a few of these early disasters. The locals would set beacons on cliffs over the rocks and feast on the leavings of the dying vessels. Of course, that is a part of their history and the Cornish people today are friendly and eager to talk of the past.
Many curious old customs linger in Cornwall, among them the ceremony of 'cutting the neck' or the last few ears of corn at harvest time. The lighting of bonfires on the hills at St John's Eve, and the 'furry' or Flora dance at Helston, on the eighth of May.

Among the peculiar dishes of the Cornish cuisine, prominent is the pasty, the almost universal dinner of the working class. It is a savory compound of meat and potatoes, inclosed in a crescent shaped crust; but one must be a Cornishman to appreciate this dish thoroughly. The variety of pies is truly marvelous and it is often said that the devil himself would be put in a pie if he were caught in Cornwall.

In the little hamlet of Roskear, an outlaying village of Camborne is where our Joseph Toy of Simsbury, Connecticut was born. It is said that his father's long low stone cottage, with small windows and overhanging roof may still stand there. Joseph was the youngest of eight sons, born in April 1808, of Robert and Ann Hosking Toy. They are John, Robert, Nicholas, William, Jame, Joseph and two sisters; Mary Ann Sims and Nancy Granville.

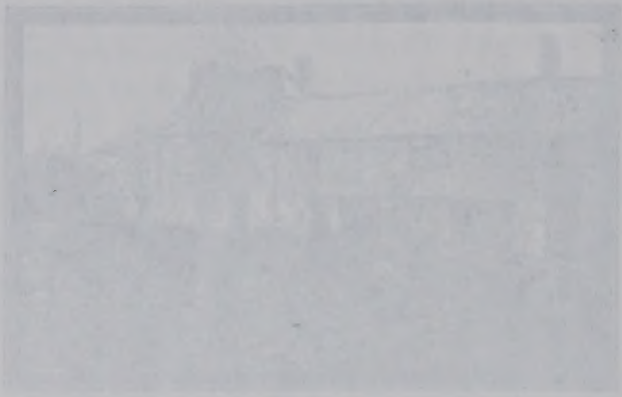
Robert and Ann were God-fearing people who trained their children to a life of industry and integrity, and very early leading them into the ways of piety and obedience. Robert died when Joseph was quite young, somewhere around 1815. Joseph was raised by his older brother John in a home filled with sunshine and love according to Mary H Dodge. John, a man of much energy and ability, became the Captain of the West Seaton mine. John's wife, Ann Davey who was born at Nans Nuke Illogan, Cornwall. Her children spoke of her with reverence as a grand Christian, a splendid character and beautiful. Her mother's maiden name was Andrews and was born in the Parish of Newlyn East.

All of the family were blessed with deep rich voices which made them naturals for the boy-choir of the Wesleyan Church of Camborne. They would go forth in the frosty air of the Christmas morning to sing carols under the windows of their friends, and eagerly catch the pennies which were thrown from the windows in response to their greetings.

Joseph Toy became the Rev Joseph Toy, Superintendent of the Sunday School and qualified himself as teacher obtaining a situation in one



American Colonies, Canada, South Africa and Australia.

Mary Seymour, daughter of Chester and Sabra Thankful Ensign Seymour, was born on 26 Mar 1852 and married Capt George G. B. Toy,born `8 Mar 1852, son of Rev. Joseph Toy of Simsbury Conn.

Mary Seymour is a descendant of the Colonist Richard Seymour who settled in Hartford Connecticutt in 1630. Richard was a descendent of Sir Edward Seymour, Knight~Baron and and brother of Lady Jane Seymour, third wife of King Henry VIII.

Capt George G. B Toy died 25 Mar 1881 of malaria at New Orleans during the Civil War. His body was placed in a sitting position in a barrel which was filled with whisky and then shipped back to Simsbury for burial.

Mary Seymour Toy married, second, the Rev. Jos Toy on 11 April 1882 and is the mother of his daughter Josephine Seymour Toy who was born on 19 Jan 1884 at Hartford Connecticutt. 1884 John Toy, brother of the above Joseph of Simsbury Connecticut married Jane Rule of Camborne and they had four daughters and one son. Mary Ann married Joseph Snell, a prosperous building contractor who moved to London.

From time immemorial Cornwall has had a leading part in the mineral industries of England. Mines of tin, copper, lead and zinc abound and have been the chief source of revenue for the county. The fisheries are very important, especially the mackeral and pilchard fishing. The pilchard is a very delicious fish, similar to the herring and is found almost. exclusively on the Cornish coast.

Camborne receives its name from `Cam' or `crooked river' and it is here that many of the Toys came from. Mary Ann Osler, Jane Osler Toy's sister became Mary Ann Sims. Rev. Sims died in Aug 1909 at their home in Carwinning, a few miles from Camborne.

Rev Joseph Toy and his family arrived in the harbor of New York on 18 Aug 1839 and from there to Hartford Cn. Their destination being Simsbury.

Mary H Toy Dodge refers to two other children who came to bless their home. Ann Jane, named for her two grandmothers was born 23 Feb 1842 and Julia Osler Toy was born 14 June 1845. Their mother died from malignant erysipelas on 27 July 1848 with Rev Joseph, her husband, four children; Mary H Toy, Joseph, Ann Jane, and Julia Osler Toy all by her side at the time.

Colonial Dawn in America

In retrospect, there was a significant number of Toys or Toy families who arrived among the first waves of pioneers to America, perhaps, as many as fifty or more between the years of 1611 and 1650. A few of them predating the Mayflower and the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock. To recap, the most notable of these were William, Henry and John Toy in the Boston area. Humphrey, Thomas, James, and John Toy arrived in Virginia around 1620 to 1700. George & Christina Toy, Elias, and Joseph Nicholas arrived some where around 1630 to 1700 in the New Jersey and Maryland area.

The exact date of the first settlement of New Jersey is not fixed by accepted historical records. The earliest colonists were the Dutch from Holland, about 1620 who planted a colony near the present site of Bergen. In 1623 another company, under Captain Cornelius Mey, settled on the east side of the Delaware, nearly opposite where Philadelphia was located more than a century later, specifically,where Timber Creek enters the Delaware, a short distance below Camden. During the ensuing forty years, Swedes, Finns, Dutch and English struggled for supremacy primarily in the area known as the Swedish Colony.

In the year of 1664, Charles II of England disregarded all rival claims, and granted all the territory between the Delaware and Connecticut rivers to his brother, Duke of York, who later succeeded him as James II, and forcibly took possession. The Duke of York sold all of his claims to Lord Berkley and Sir George Carteret, who named the tract New Jersey. In 1673, Berkley sold his interest to John Fenwick and Edward Byllynge Quakers, who later conveyed controlling interest to William Penn and two other Quakers of financial responsibility; Gauen Laurie and Nicholas Lucas.

Fenwick, in 1675, brought over a colony of some two hundred persons and established a settlement on the Delaware which he called Salem. In 1677 another company of pioneers came from London, almost entirely of English and Irish Quakers. They located about sixty miles farther up the river and founded Burlington, New Jersey.

Pennsylvania archive records indicate that Patience Toy, the great grand daughter of George and Christina Toy was a Quaker when she married. This adds historical weight to our assumption that the Armstrong County Penna Toys were of English Quaker origin on the paternal side of the family.

Not only was the greater part of Colonial New Jersey sold for what amounts, in our time, to about two or three cents an acre, but the short sighted king, to free himself from the burden of an annoying obli-gation, squared the long stan-ding account with the son of his deeased creditor, and thus for $400,000, William Penn became the possessor of a new and evolving embryonic empire.

Colonial records reveal that it was here along the Burlington area of the Delaware that George and Elias Toy appeared among the Yeoman Cavalier Pioneer families of the 1620 ~ 1660 era. The fact that George named one of his sons Elias would indicate that perhaps they were brothers. These Toys were fruitful and multiplied rather rapidly.

Colonial records and documents indicate that most of these Toys were wealthy aristocrats who married into some of the best families of the period The children of Dr Calvert Rogers Toy, through his marriage to Fielding Lewis Douthat, became blood relatives of President George Washington through their common ancesters. Dr Toy's wife, Fielding Lewis Douthat, daughter of Fielding Lewis Douthat, was a cousin of the Fielding Lewis that married Elizabeth Washington, sister of President George Washington.

Not only are they rela-ted by marriage, but, they are directly related through common ancesters, namely, the great grandfather of George Washington. According to Henry Duke, Councilor, their common ancester was John Lewis Jr, member of the Royal Council, who married Elizabeth Warner. Mildred Warner Washington is the paternal grandmother of George and Elizabeth Washington. There were two cousins both named Fielding Lewis; one married Elizabeth Washington, the other was married, in 1788 to Agnes Harwood, descendent of Henry Duke Councilor.

The two Fielding Lewis cousins were born about twenty nine years apart. Our Fielding Lewis was the son of Colonel Warner Lewis and his wife Elizabeth Bowles Gooch of Warner Hall, Gloucester County Virginia. Elizabeth Gooch, (Grand daughter of Governor Wm Gooch of Virginia). Warner Lewis is a son of Colonel John Lewis III and his wife, Frances Fielding, hence the origin of the given name `Fielding Lewis.' For farther clarification of these ties read the vignette in this volume titled: "A Blacksheep has given us a Family of Nation Builders."

William, John and Henry Toy all appear in the earliest records of the Massachusetts area. In all probability they were brothers, however, the author cannot prove this as-sumption. William Toy was one of the founding fathers of Boston. He was a dairy farmer who came to the Muddy River area of Boston from New Am-sterdam, Long Island New York prior to the year 1630. He traded two acres of Long Island for twenty acres of Boston. He married Grace Newell at Rox-bury Mass on Sept 14, 1644.

A large part of Muddy River, as the Boston area was then known, was owned by William Toy. The very old Boston Records refer to this area as "Ye Toy Mountain." Many descendents of William Toy still live in Billerica and the Woburn area of Boston. Some of them use the original Toy spelling and others use the spelling of Tay.

In 1642 the Selectmen were enjoined to have a vigilant eye over their brethren and neighbors in areas of tithing, attendance at church and social activities. In 1650 the Rev. Samuel Whiting was chosen minister at Billerica where he remained with his people for fifty six years. His people heard two sermons of a very lengthy nature each Sabbath. It was a church where the people received not only spiritual food, but much of the intellectual and social stimuli needed.

In 1661 the problem of seating the people in the church was settled and it was agreed upon that: "ye towne doe apoynte Lt Wm French, John Parker, Ralph Hill sen'r and William Toy to set in the Deacon's seat; and also the towne do appoint & empower these four men joyned with Mr Whiting to appoint the rest of the inhabitants and proprietors belonging to the town there several places where they shall sitt in the meeting house acc-ording to their best discretion."

Colonial Life in America

Colonial Lifestyle What it was Like

Many of our ancesters arrived in America to begin a term of servitude as indentured servants in a status that was neither colonist or slave. There was a great demand for laborers in our vast forested land. Trees had to be cut down and their roots grubbed out from the earth. soil that had never been tilled before had to be broken up and planted: crops needed to be hoed and harvested. Much that had to be done was not considered men's work; for example, clothes, soap, candles and most other necessities were home made.

Cooking, mending and washing was usually dawn to dusk chores and if these were completed, women were expected to work alongside the men. Children worked from early childhood until they were married and had a home of their own. Before the revolution, more than half of the immigrants who arrived in the colonies south of New England were indentured. Just how they fared is a grim part of our heritage which frequently was ignored and forgotten.

One wonders just how people who never expected to become rich or yearn for a chance to worship in their own way could be convinced to abandon their roots and travel to a harsh, uncompromising and forbidding land. It was quite unlikely that any man of plentiful stature and estate would move voluntarily or abandon a happy certainty to roam after imaginary advantages in a strange and uncompromising new world.

Indentured servitude began in the Virginia Colony even before the Africans were wrenched from their homes and sold into a life of bondage. At its best, indentured servitude was a reasonably fair contract between a master and a servant.

Indentured servitude was much like the agreements between craftsmen and apprentices during the middle ages which permitted skills to be passed from one generation to the next. Under ideal conditions, the master paid the price of passage across the Atlantic and guaranteed their food, shelter and clothing. In return, the servant agreed to work without pay for a term of three to five years.

At the termination of the servitude period, the master was then responsible for giving his servant a chance for a fresh start in the new world. The risks of going to America were very great under any circumstances and indentured servitude was a good enough system in theory especially under the harshness of that age in time.

In Pennsylvania the law required that a servant was to be given two suits of which was had to be new, one ax, one grubbing hoe, and one weeding hoe. Frequently land was also used as a reward. North Carolina required that the servant be given a suit of clothes and some money as his freedom dues.

The person was free to try their fortune after his or her period of servitude. They may have had a vision to become a colonial legislator, to stake out land on the frontier or, as frequently happened, to sink back into poverty. A woman was free to marry and cast her fortune with those of her husband.

There was frequently an ugly gap between the contract that an unfortunate person signed, perhaps in some grog shop in London or Ireland, and the life a servant actually lived. Frequently ship captains turned to recruiting agents known as `Spirits' to fill their quota for the voyage to America. The name of Spirits was tagged on these agents because they usually spirited their victims away in the middle of the night. In Germany they were called Newlanders or `Soul-sellers.'

Household goods, farm tools and items of clothing were very precious in those days. Newspapers, of the day, are full of ads offering rewards for a stolen spoon, a pair of sox, a flannel shirt, a hoe, or many other items. Nathaniel Toy, a plantation owner, offered a `bountiful reward' for the capture of an Irish peddler who stole two pair of sox, a pair of suspenders, a razor and a grubbing hoe.

Another add in New Jersey offered a reward of six pence and travel expenses for the capture of one Daniel Toy. Daniel, according to the add, was of stalky build, a ruddy complexion, sullen disposition and was indentured owing one remaining year of service.

Some of the colonies offered ten acres of land or more to be given to each new arrival as an inducement to make the journey. Most of these new arrivals never saw the land. It was either kept by the ships captain as a part of the cost of travel or conviscated by the person with whom they were indentured. Many a plantation was built in this manner.

Colonial life was indeed a heyday for the minister, parson or preacher. They ruled their congregation with an iron fist, exacting a bountiful tithe from all. Generally they were business men who had much to gain by keeping their hand on the pulse of the congregation. This is quite apparent in the case of Rev Joseph Toy of Simsbury Connecticutt.

Joseph, a minister in Camborne England brought his family to America in the early 1800's to open a munitions factory. He mainly manufactured Squibs and other explosives used in the mining process. He accrued considerable power and prestige within the community.

An interesting anecdote, as mentioned previously, occurred when Joseph's son Capt George Toy, died of Malaria in a Confederate Prison Camp in New Orleans. Being a man of enormous prestige and power, even as a northern yankee, he was able to have his son's body brought back to Connecticut for burial. The body was placed in a cask of whiskey and transported by steamer back to Simsbury. The whiskey surrounding the body became a marvelous preservative for the body arriving up north several months later very well preserved.

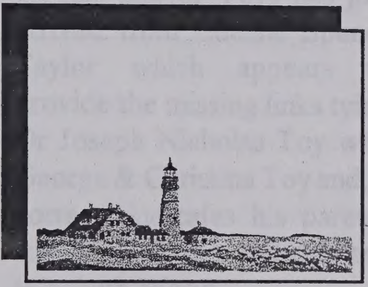
A Family of Nation Builders

The first known Joseph Nicholas Toy of which the author has any records died in Harford County Maryland during 1641 which may make him the earliest known Toy in the Colonies. assuming that he spent some period of time here. At least he ranks with William Toy of Boston, Humphrey Toy of Virginia and is probably the father of George Toy ID= 0030) of the Swedish Colony in New Jersey and is among the first to arrive in the Colonies. Regardless of this point, Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy of Harford Maryland, one of his descendants can truly lay claim to being the head of a family of nation builders.. Some of Dr Jos- eph's descendants are blood relatives to the Father of our Country, President George Washington. They are also related through marriage to General Robert E Lee.

The Reverend Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy married the daughter of Richard Dallam II, Rev Joseph, a silversmith and minister of the Episcopal Church married Frances Dallam on 29 May 1770 (IBA-286 p-181) Barnes Gen 975.2 B263 1973. A noted prominent silversmith and faculty member of Cokesbury College, he died in Baltimore Md on Saturday afternoon Jan 28, 1826.

There were several silversmiths in Harford Co. among the most noted of whom were Prof Joseph Nicholas Toy, his son, Isaac Nicholas Toy and William Wilson. Maryland marriage records 1778 ~ 1800 P-230, Harford County Courthouse, Bel Air Maryland indicate that Isaac Nicholas Toy also married a Frances Dallam (3HA-22) on 18 March 1793. Apparently these are two different Frances Dallams (prob aunt & niece) since Joseph Nicholas married the 1st Frances Dallam on 29 May 1770 and his death didn't occur until 1816, it is very unlikely that Isaac Nicholas Toy could have married her on 18 Mar 1793. A second reason is that Joseph Nicholas had children after the date of Isaac Nicholas Toy's marriage.

Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy is the father of the Rev. Joseph Nicholas Toy ID= 1857 who travelled west with his family and settled in Robards Kentucky. Dr Joseph and Frances Dallam Toy are also the parents of Richard Dallam Toy (see the Vignette "Howells, Pres Washington & the Toys").



Concord Point Lighthouse Harford County Md.

The town of Abingdon, Harford Co Md is one of the oldest in Harford County. It is situated on the Old Post Road about two miles west of the former county seat at Bush. It lies just 23 miles from Baltimore; 30 miles from Wilmington Delaware; 61 miles from Washington and 60 miles from Philadelphia. Harford County encompasses the Concord Point Lighthouse on the Chesapeake Bay. Records indicate that several Toy families have settled there around 1620 ~ 1680.

Abingdon was laid out by the Paca family in 1779 and was an outstanding town during Colonial days. It became not only a manufacturing center of note, but the home community of many citizens active in business, government and politics. Large landowners nearby included Aquila Hall, George Bradford and Richard Dallam. These men played leading roles in the county's part in the American Revolution.

Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy was a silversmith of note here from 1776 to 1795; Isaac Nicholas Toy, his son, was also a silversmith of great reputation here from 1790 to 1829.
Carolyn Lou Toy Id=1894 of Louisville Kentucky is a descendent of Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy above. Others include Tammie Chada Id=9076 of Guthrie Oklahoma, Charles L Wilson of Glasgow Mont-ana, Robert Lewis in Calif-ornia and many others.

Carolyn has been very instrumental in prov-iding data on the Kentucky side of this family. Carolyn was born on 05 Aug 1932 and is the daughter of Wm Owen Toy Sr (Id=1882) born at Anthoston Pct Ky on 16 July 1905, son of Samuel Owen Toy and Hester Langley Bennett. William and Lulu `Cully' Toy Id= 1893. have two children:

1). Carolyn Lou Toy, a spinster mentioned above is a librarian and occasionally corresponds with the author.

2). William Owen Toy II Id= 1895, born 07 Nov 1938. His first wife was Phyllis Sterneman and the second is Joni Witherspoon. They have three children; Teran Ann Toy Libbert, Wm Owen Toy III, and Jeffrey Phillip Toy. They presently live at Evans-ville Indiana.

Stephen Gerald Toy Id= 9085 is a teacher also from Vincennes Indiana near Evansville. Stephen has provided much data on his family going all the way back to County Tyrone, Ireland

Robert Michael Lewis Id= 8038 also has provided considerable data on his side of the family and is a direct descendent of Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy. Robert's aunt Dickie Jean Branum Id= 8053 along with Robert are avid Genealogy buffs and publish a monthly newsletter called the Branum Chronicle.

Dr Charles L Wilson is a computer buff doing genealogy research particularly in the area of the descendents of Richard Dallam Toy, the Howells and the Mortons. He also has provided considerable in- formation on his family line. An enormous amount of gratitude is expressed to all of the above for their interest and assistance in making the Toy history informative and interesting.

Additional information on this line of Toys has just arrived from Luanne Spence Taylor which appears to provide the missing links tying Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy with George & Christina Toy and, if correct, indicates his parents are Elias Toy Id=0051 and Elizabeth Wood.
Several inconsistencies re-main unresolved.

Howells, the Toys & Pres Washington

A Blacksheep has given us a Family of Nation Builders

The following narrative is derived from several sources of data which includes several books of genealogy, historical magazines, census data, the Washington Pedigree Chart and other sources of reference. Major sources of data are as follows:

a). The Pedigree Chart of the Washington Family
c). `Memoirs of Morton Boyte Howell' LDS Library, Salt Lake City.
d). Various census reports and State Archives data.
e). Rust Family of Virginia. and the Journal of William & Mary College.

We begin this narrative with the descendants of Ethelred Howell, born in Tudor Wales, who emigrated to Jamestown Virginia. There is a tradition that a king called Howell Dha died in the year 950. No direct linkage with him has been established by the author simply because of the paucity of data and meager records preserved of that period in Wales. Suffice it to say here that a positive direct link is established with the above Ethelred Howel of Tudor Wales and the descendants of Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy of Harford Co Md

Henry Howell, son of Ethelred Howell, was born in Jamestown Virginia in 1693 and later settled at South Quay on Blackwater River in Nansemond County Va. Henry married and raised a family of three daughters and a son to his first wife. He had three sons to his second wife. Our line of genealogy is not concerned with his first wife and children. For those interested in pursuing this family line further, considerable additional data is stored in the author's computer.

We will therefore proceed with an account of his second marriage and their relationship to the family of Richard Dallam Toy, our family Blacksheep son of Dr Joseph Nicholas Toy and Frances Dallam. Henry Howell's second marriage occurred when he was approximately eighty years of age, after the death of his first wife. Yes, Henry fathered three sons after he was eighty years of age. After the death of his first wife he removed, with their children, to the Neuse River, at Dobbs, near Wayne County North Carolina. It was here that he met and married a lass in her late teens by the name of Rachel Boyte. Almost unbelievably, to this marriage was born three healthy strapping sons.

The eldest of the three sons was Henry Howell Jr; Next came Ralph Howell with whom we are concerned as our link to the Welsh Howells. Ralph Howell married Jane Crawford, the fifth child of Robert Crawford and his wife Anna Cogdell. More on them later. The third son was John Howell and with whom we are not concerned.

Henry Howell Sr is said to be, even in his eighties, a strapping tall man of enormous physical strength. It is related in the Memoirs that he once was attacked out in the field by a bull ox. As the animal rushed at him he stepped aside and struck the ox with a blow to the head with his fist. The bull was killed instantly by the blow. His widow , a French Huguenot, was only seventeen when she married Henry and never remarried after Henry's death.

The nine children of his son, Ralph and Jane Crawford Howell were:

1.) Elizabeth Howell Standifer.
2). Ferebee Howell who married Edward York.
4). William Ringdon Howell Bn-1798
5). The fifth child, Robert Boyte Crawford Howell, is our direct link to the Toys. He was born on 10 March 1801 and died 05 April 1868 (Id=7199) Robert married Mary Ann Morton Toy (Id= 7198) on the 23rd of April 1829 in Wayne County North Carolina.

6). Sarah Jernigan Alford
7). Serna Howell Smith
8). Alfred Cogdell Howell
9). Ralph Jr, Bn-1813, was the youngest known child of Ralph and Jane Crawford Howell.

We are concerned with Jane Crawford, the fourth child of Robert Crawford and Ann Cogdell. The other six children will be mentioned briefly as follows:
a). Margaret Crawford Ham-ilton.
b). Unid Crawford Powell
c). Arthur Crawford
d). Nancy married Henry Howell
e). Charles Crawford
f). Robert Crawford

The parents of Anna Cogdell are Daniel Cogdell and Anna McKenzie Their children were:
1). A daughter who married a Mr Oates. He later murdered his father-in-law, Dan Cogdell and fled to Alabama which was then known as the `Wild West.'
2). Unid Cogdell Stephens
3). The third child, our direct link, married Ralph Howell.
4). Daniel Cogdell
5). Lewis Cogdell
By way of brevity, we will proceed directly to Robert Boyte Crawford Howell who married Mary Ann Morton Toy. His father was a farmer who grew corn and sweet potatoes and lived in a one story weatherboarded log house. There was no market for their crops, except for their own livestock, however, they lived comfortably with few luxuries. Fortunately there was always plenty to eat.
The schools were the old kind called `Old Field' which were taught by pedagogues who kept soul and body together by their meagre tuition fees. Their courses of study were commensurate with the scantiness of their receipts. The extent of their labors was to teach the children how to read, write and cipher. Perhaps it can be said that this is more than our modern day schools do with many present day high school graduate students unable to successfully read or do math with any degree of success.
When Robert reached his majority, he was six feet tall, weighed two hundred pounds, with very large hands and feet, sandy or reddish hair, grey penetrating eyes and a powerful frame.
Robert grew up as a respectable Episcopalian, however, when some Baptist preachers from Raleigh came to Wayne County, it created quite a stir. Robert took quite a fancy to the religious meetings and it was not long after until he was converted, baptized and bonafide member of the Baptist Church.

Robert's exceptional elocutional and oratorical ability combined with his earnest zeal in religious matters impressed the ministers from Raleigh and they made the necessary arrangements for him to obtain a better education. In the fall of 1824 he went to Washington and entered the Preparatory Dept of the Columbian College in the District of Columbia.

During a meeting in the year of 1837 which was attended by the President of the United States, the Honorable Second Degree issued by the University was delivered to the Reverend Robert Boyte Crawford Howell.
Mary Ann Morton Toy, daughter of Richard Dallam Toy and Jane Morton, was born on 25 April 1808 at Ferry Point Virginia which lies between Norfolk and Portsmouth, about the time her father set sail from Antwerp bound for Riga, Russia on the Brig `Ruby' with Capt Thomas Chapman at the helm.
Suffice it to say here that Richard Dallam Toy came from a long line of seafaring men who were wealthy Sea Captains, Yeoman Cavalier Plantation Owners, Doctors, Merchants and other positions of high prestige. Richard, led a lifestyle of a plain itinerant sailor most of his life, he appeared to shirk most of life's responsibilities. This is not to say that he was a vagrant or misfit in any nature or form. Plainly, from a family of high achievers, he was more or less just a blacksheep.

Richard Dallam Toy was considered a carefree plain sailor, globetrotter and a natural born poet. He was born in Harford Co Md around 1771, the son of Rev Doctor Joseph Nicholas Toy, a respected silversmith and college prof, and Frances Dallam Toy, the daughter of a very wealthy landowner and and one knowledgeable in the political arena.
Richard ran away from home in the late 1790's choosing a wonderlust life-style on the open seas hardly compatible with marriage and raising of a family. The entire credit for raising a family of illustrious descendents must therefore be given to his wife Jane Morton Toy. His daughter Mary Ann Toy was about three years old before Richard again returned home from his seafaring lifestyle.

It is believed, according to the Howells, that Richard met his future wife, Jane Morton, at a hospital for sailors located at Norfolk Va. Her mother Mary Logan Morton was the hospital matron. Jane Morton, Richard's wife, is the daughter of Thomas Morton and Mary Logan. Mary Logan's family, which included three brothers, emigrated to Williamsburg Va from Glasgow Scotland when she was twelve years old.

When Richard returned from another three year stint at sea on 01 Aug 1811, his wife issued an ultimatum that plainly informed him if he went to sea again she would cease to consider herself his wife and he might just stay away.

Jane Morton Toy was in physical stature, a small woman, less than five feet tall and never weighed more than 100 lbs. She was truly brave and feisty as a Bantam hen. She was endowed with an inflexable will and a most determined character. Richard was well aware that she would do just as she said and as a consequence he took up quarters at the hospital with his wife and her mother.

Richard became employed in a printing office where his literary talents became most useful to him. Richard met his death by a quirk of fate in a very unusual manner. Richard had developed a habit of using his boat for going from the hospital wharf or pier on the Point across from Elizabeth River to Portsmouth, perhaps, to imbibe a few and visit with former sailor friends.. As destiny would have it, one very stormy night in the year 1816 he failed to come home.

A search was made early the next morning. His body was found by the side of his boat, his feet sticking fast in the harbor mud. It became obvious that sometime during the night he proceeded to his boat, the tide being out, a brisk wind and a heavy rain was in progress while Richard attempted to jump into the boat, he missed the boat and his feet became stuck in the mud. Unable to extricate himself the tide later rose over his head and he drowned.

Jane Morton married Richard Dallam Toy on 04 Oct 1804 and eleven days after their marriage Richard, foot loose and fancy free, sailed on the Schooner Ann Ballard for Bordeaux France and thence to Russia. Three children were born to them.

1.) Dr Joseph Alfred Toy MD (Id-3844) was born 11 Aug 1805 at the Sailor's Hospital in Norfolk Va. Joseph's father, as usual, was in Bordeaux France at the time of his birth. Dr Joseph A Toy was best known for having established the first documentation of Bright's disease in America.

Dr Joseph had become very sickly with Bright's disease at a very early period in his professional life and corresponded with Dr Richard Bright in England concerning the devastating kidney disease which he described in 1826 and published the paper in the London Lancet thereby bring-ing it to the attention of the American Medical community. Dr Joe performed successfully the Caesarian operation numerous times, a significant surgical procedure for that period of medical technology.

The famous author, Hugh Blair Grigsby, mentioned in his writings that Dr Toy was the best friend he ever had and that Jos was a great orator. Dr Toy is mentioned in several books (The Great Dismal Swamp) and others as de-livering the Declaration of Independence during festivities at the Great Dismal Swamp Hotel. This and other events such as his marriage to Penelope Snowden Boushall (Id=1835) are recorded in `The Hotel in the Great Dismal Swamp.' by Jesse F Pugh, Old Trap North Carolina circa 1824 pps34 & 106.

Dr Joseph and Penelope were married on 01 Sept 1826 as recorded in the Raleigh Register and the Bulletin Gazette. Penelope Snowden Boushell, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Boushell, died on the 28th of Nov 1833. Her husband and three children had preceded her in death.

2). Thomas Dallam Toy (Id= 2086), the youngest child of Richard and Jane Morton Toy was also born in Norfolk at the Sailor's Hospital on 20 March 1814. In 1835 Thomas married Amelia Ann Rogers who was the grand daughter of a Stanhope, an officer in the American Revolutionary War. The education of Thomas was provided by his brother Dr Joseph Alfred Toy.

Thomas prospered immensely as a Norfolk druggist and merchant. The Virginia Historical Magazine and records of the University of William & Mary tell us that `he had a vigorous appetite for the finer things in life and was able to provide educations in the finest European Universities of the day. ' Thomas Dallam Toy and Amelia Ann Rogers had issue of nine children, most all of them destined to become engrained as a part of American history.

1). Prof Crawford Howell Toy (Id=2088) was born 23 March 1836 at Norfolk Va. He married Nancy Saunders in 1888. They had no issue. (Uncle of Crawford Toy Johnson)
A confederate Civil War Veteran, appointed Hancock Professor of Hebrew and other Oriental Languages and Dexter Lecturer on Biblical Literature for Harvard University. His biography is in practically all volumes of Who's Who. He wrote the article on the Hebrew religion appearing in the 1903 Encyclopaedia Britannica. Prof Crawford Howell Toy died at 7 Lowell St

2). Dr. Joseph Alfred Toy (nephew of the above Dr Joseph A Toy), 2nd son of Thomas and Amelia Ann Rogers, (Id=2093) married Sarah Pocohontas Rust at Loudin County Virginia. She is the daughter of Dr. Bushrod Rust and wife Margaret Carr. For further information see the Vignette of the Rust Family of Virginia.

3). Lucy Toy (Id=2095) married the Rev Johnson, a Baptist Minister.. A lot of American history is woven around Lucy Toy Johnson and her family. Lucy was born in Norfolk Va during January of 1850 and married around 1870. She is the daughter of Thomas Dallam Toy Sr and Amelia Ann Rogers. One of their sons Crawford Toy Johnson (named after his uncle Prof Crawford Howell Toy) is the founder of Coca Cola Bottling Company United Inc. A second son Wortley Johnson was the brakeman on the ill fated train that the famous `Casey Jones' ballad.
The ballad goes like this:

On a Six-Eight Wheeler
he came to fame,
four
said meet me at the station door
Mounted to the cabin with the orders in his hands,
Said this is my trip to
the promised land,

Wortley later became the CEO of the Coca Cola Bottling Co. McComb Miss.

4). Thomas Dallam Toy II (Id=2101) married Heloise C Kelly on 29 July 1905. Heloise is the daughter of New York Socialite Horace R and Evelina de la (Forest) Kelly. Thomas D Toy II was owner of Thomas D Toy & Company Yarn Merchants at 118 E 25th St, New York City NY. A son of Thomas D Toy II is Horace Robert Toy, born 03 Oct 1910 at Plainfield N.J. He married New York socialite Barbara Fish, daughter of Henry van C and Leontine Marie (Suse) Fish. Further information elsewhere. 4). Professor Walter Dallam Toy (ID=2096) who was educated in Europe and became Prof of Modern Languages at the Univ of North Carolina. His name is engraved on the cornerstone of the Administration Building of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. His biography also appears in many books of Who's Who and other notable references. Walter D Toy was born 13 Nov 1854 and was married to Jane Washington Bingham (Id=2107) on 29 June 1896. They had issue of three children, one of which leads us to the family of Pres George Washington. Their son Dr Calvert Rogers Toy (Id=2121) born in 1899 on Rosemary St, Chapel Hill NC married Fielding Lewis Douthat, daughter of Fielding Lewis Douthat and Etta Keans of Asheboro North Carolina. They have issue of two daughters: a). Elizabeth Bingham Toy
b). Eleanor Lewis Toy

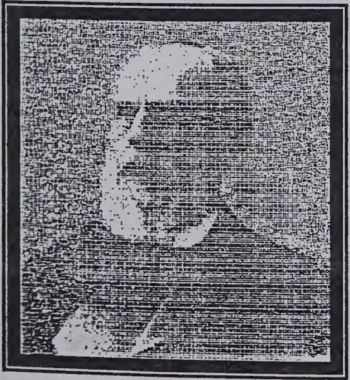
Dr Walter Dallam Toy Prof of Germanic Languages University of North Carolina

Fielding Lewis Douthat, wife of Dr Rogers Calvert Toy and daughter of Fielding Lewis and Etta Keans Douthat is a descendent of Henry Duke Councilor and also of Colonel Warner Lewis. Both of these are blood relatives of the Washingtons. Fielding Lewis Douthat, born at `Weyanoke' Charles City County Va. on 31 Jan 1866, died 22 Feb 1948 married Etta Keans of Asheboro NC. He is the son of Robert Douthat Jr and his second wife, Elizabeth M Wade.

Robert Douthat Sr, a lawyer and son of Thomas and Jane (Price) Douthat was born in Augusta Co Virginia and married on 11 Feb 1819 to Eleanor Warner Lewis, a descendent of Henry Duke Councilor. Eleanor W Lewis is the daughter of Fielding Lewis and Agnes Harwood.



Prof Crawford Howell Toy

Fielding Lewis, not to be confused with his cousin Fielding Lewis who married Elizabeth Washington, President Washington's sister, married in 1788 Agnes Harwood. Our Fielding Lewis is the son of Colonel Warner Lewis of Warner Hall' Gloucester Co Va. The Colonel is the son of Colonel John Lewis III who married Frances Fielding, hence the family name of Fielding Lewis.

Col John Lewis III is the son of John Lewis Jr, member of the Royal Council in 1715 and his wife Elizabeth Warner. Colonel Warner Lewis married Elizabeth Bowles Gooch, daughter of Governor Bowles of Maryland and by her first marriage was wife of Colonel Wm Gooch, son of Governor Wm Gooch of Virginia. Mildred Warner Washington, daughter of Col Augustine Warner, is the paternal grandmother of President George Washington. Thus Mildred Warner Washington, George Washington's grandmother, is a direct blood ancestor of Elizabeth Bingham Toy (Id=3649) and her sister Eleanor Lewis Toy (Id=3650) of Brunswick New Jersey. Additionally, it would appear with a high degree of certainty that the Fielding Lewis who married Elizabeth Washington is a brother of Col Warner Lewis, making him the uncle of Fielding Lewis, husband of Agnes Harwood. Both his age (30 years senior to the second Fielding Lewis and the unusual family name lends justifiable credence to this assumption. Thus, by marriage alone, Dr Calvert Rogers Toy is a relative of Elizabeth Washington. The author has not as yet attempted to trace the association of Jane Washingto Bingham, Dr Toy's mother, to the family lin of Washington. Obviously there appears to be a familial association.

A noble birth and fortune, though they make not a bad man good, yet they are a real advantage to a worthy one and place his virtues in the fairest light....Lillo

The last edition of "The Genealogy of the Tay ~ Toy ~ Toye Family" was prepared as a tribute to the loving wife of Harold D Toy. Hal was born on Oct 03, 1917 in Armstrong County Penna. Endowed with two nicknames `Hal' & `Bud' Known to family and friends as Bud. Known in the professional world as `Hal.' Take your pick, both are acceptable.

Hal married Irene Elizabeth Ditmore at Hampton, Virginia on Dec 18, 1941. Hal was attached to the Langley Air Force Base as a Bombardier-Navigator on antisubmarine patrol. Both grew up in the same home town of Kittanning, Pa. Irene was born on July 22, 1918 and is a daughter of William Edward Ditmore and Florence Etta Hays. Harold and Irene have issue of one son Harold James Toy who arrived on their fourth wedding anniversary Dec 18, 1945. Irene, at the age of 79, passed away at 3.15 p. m. on March 12, 1997 in the Desert Springs Hospital in Las Vegas Nevada. Irene was recovering from a stroke, however, cause of death was acute kidney failure.

Harold James Toy married three times. His first wife was Debra Darlene Henry whom he married in 1964 at Houston, Texas. They have issue of three children.

a). Steven James Toy born in 1965.
b) Timothy John Toy in 1967
c). Sara Elizabeth Toy in 1972

Hal joined the US Army Air Corps at Langley Air Force Base, Hampton Virginia in 1939 and attended the US Army Air Corp Armament and Bombardier Technical Schools at Lowry Colorado. Many missions were performed in B-17, B-18, B-24'a, B-29's and B-50's particularly on Anti-submarine missions over the Atlantic Coast and Bermuda Triangle. Later a commission was received as an Armament & Aircraft Engineering Officer and the Toys were stationed at the Air Depot Training Station, Albuquerque, New Mexico. He was later given responsibility for the effective transfer of the Sandia AFB over to the newly formed Atomic Energy Commission. After WW II, Hal & Irene owned and operated the Shangra-La Inn, Apollo Taxicab Service and the Valley Construction Co, all located in the Apollo Pennsylvania area. (1946 ~ 1949) With the advent of the Korean War, Hal returned to the military as a civilian team leader flight crew member at Wright Air Development Center, Dayton Ohio where he became involved in laboratory and airborn research on Stellar-Doppler-Inertial Navigation Systems making extensive research flights into the eye of hurricanes, plotting the Jet-stream over Japan and low altitude flights over active volcanoes to determine their thermal vectors by use of infrared technology. During this period Irene was very active in civic affairs thru the Air Force Officers Club at Wright Patterson.

While preparing to attend the International Air Show in 1954 at Madrid Spain as a member of General Albert Boyd's staff, an unfortunate incident brought about permanent loss of vision in the author's right eye. The mission to Spain was accomplished, however, the ability to perform as an active flight crew member was diminished and a resignation was tendered to accept a position as Manager of Reliability Engineering for Kollsman Instrument Corporation. An appointment was also received to the Data Processing Committee of the BuAer, Industry Advisory board, Bureau of Aeronautics, Dept of Navy in 1959.

The days of the Russian Sputnik loomed heavily on the horizon and the federal govt again beckoned with an opportunity to play an important role in the goal to land a man on the moon. Hal was the 72nd person to be hired into the embryonic Langley NACA Space Task Group, the forerunner to the present National Aeronautics and Space Administration Johnson Spaceflight Center, Houston Texas. In this capacity he was assigned to the Technical Assessment Panel, Source Evaluation Board, Project Apollo during 1960, serving also as Chairman of the Technical Assessment Panel for the Apollo Prime Contractor Ground Support Equipment. As a Senior Aerospace Systems Engineer, two major positions were held; Chief of Flight Research Projects Branch and Manager of the Natural Resources Program under Astronaut Dr. Donald K Slayton, Flight Crew Operations Directorate. In addition to writing feature articles for scientific and technical magazines, Hal is author of the NASA Working Paper 1071 "Lunar Rendezvous and Let-down Guidance Procedures," and "Anthology of the Natural Resources Program." While working for the State of Texas, he authored numerous feature articles for the prestigious Texas Parks and Wildlife Magazine. He also presented an `invited' paper at the L Joliet Curie Rest Home For Scientists, Varna Bulgaria on "Teaching & Learning Concepts" which was later published by the Russian Govt thru UNESCO. He is a past member of the Intnl Platform Association, formerly "The Lyceum." This is the organization for the performing arts with prestigious past members such as Lowell Thomas, Victor Borge, Hubert Humphrey, Lyndon Johnson, and others.

Irene adapted extremely well to the social life surrounding the NASA complex and became a very gracious host to many governmen officials, university faculty members and foreign diplomats who visited NASA Houston. Hal resigned from NASA in 1969 to become President and CEO of Era Inc, a subsidiary of Mark Products, a member of the Zapata Norness Conglomerate. At this time he also served on the Board of Advisors for GURC, Gulf Universities Research Corporation which is a consortium of 17 universities and research centers. Carlos Elizondo, Executivo Secretario, Commission Nacional del Espacio Exterior Mexico D. F. appointed the author to a position of technology consultant and advisor.

Preston Smith, Gov. of Texas appointed the author to serve on the Committee for Land Use and Environmental Control; to the State Senate Subcommittee for Research & Implementation of the Gulf Coast Waste Disposal Authority and to the Governor's Youth Secretariat Advisory Committee. Prior to retiring from the state he served as Public Hearing Officer for Engineering Development and as the Federal-State Liaison Coordinator. In addition served as Admin/Technical Asst to the director of Parks Division, Texas Parks & Wildlife Department.

Dr Toy's biography appears in many volumes of public library biographical references such as the Dictionary of International Biography, London, England; Who's Who in America, South & Southwest editions (Vols 1968 thru 1975), Amer Men & Women of the Physical & Biological Sciences (vol 6/12th edit & vol 17/15th edit.), National Social Directory (1971) and Creative & Successful Personalities of the World (vol-i 1972) by International Personnel Research.

Harold James `Jim' Toy, son of Harold & Irene Toy, was divorced from Debra Darlene Henry and later married Sandra Rose Gallion on Apr 12, 1975. They have no issue. Sandra, a former marketing and purchasing executive for a large aerospace corporation passed away from viral pneumonia at Coco Beach Florida on Monday, October 14, 1991 at Cape Canaveral Florida.

Jim married Denise Gautier, Manager of the Castaways restaurant, Cocoa Beach Florida and she is his third wife. Denise died of Leukemia in August, 1999. Jim was an Engineer for Bechtel Corporation. He presently owns the Banana River Meats & Deli at Satellite Beach Florida.

With the loss of Irene, the home in Las Vegas was sold and Hal moved to Cape Canaveral where he purchased a home June 1997 at 8757 Banyan Way, Cape Canaveral Florida 32920, several blocks from the home of Jim and Denise. Irene was so full of smiles, kindness and sunshine. her departure after 56 years of married bliss will leave a void that can never be filled. Jim & Debra's children are;

1). Steven James Toy, born July 13, 1965 at Houston Texas. Steve married Susan Blanche Bailey on May 26, 1984 and remarried to Shirley Tarnow on Aug 21, 1987 at Detroit Mich. Steve matriculated with honors at the Univ of Texas Austin with a degree in Business and Computer Science. Steve was a computer group leader in the employ of General Motors and presently is with Arthur Anderson Corporation. Shirley is a Certified Public Accountant and partner in a Michigan Accounting Firm. Steve is presently active in the same discipline of computerized business accounting.

Steve and Shirley have two daughters a). Stephanie Alexa Toy was born on Aug 14, 1990 at West Bloomfield Mich.

b). Sidney Louise, two years younger

2). Timothy John Toy was born June 04, 1967 at Houston, Texas. Tim is a member of the Culinary Union and previously worked for the Fitzgerald's Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas. His home is presently in Cape Canaveral, Florida.

3). Sara Elizabeth Toy was born Nov. 26, 1972 at Houston, Tx. Sara is the darling of the family with an outgoing personality and a warm, happy smile for everyone as did her granmother Irene. She has a biblical name that has run in our family for several centuries. The name in biblical times meant Princess Queen. Her grand mother's middle name is also Elizabeth, her great grandmother's name was also Sarah and she has a great great aunt named Sarah Elizabeth Toy. She also has an ancester in the Swedish Colony of New Jersey (circa 1680) named Sarah Elizabeth Toy.

Sara was a `Foley's Model.' is now married to Manny Bekire and they have two lovely daughters:

a). Hana Laxime Bekiri was born in Houston Texas on August 09, 1995 with brown hair and beautiful hazel eyes.

b). Sophia Marie Bekiri born March 06, 1997, 5 lbs 15 oz, da of Manny & Sara Bekiri.

Jim's first wife and mother of his children, Debra Darlene Henry Toy has remarried and is the wife of Anthony Santavicci, plant manager for a major chemical corp. in Louisiana. Debra is a professional photographer having received her degree in commercial arts science.

STORY of the TOYS

BY

Crawford Toy Johnson is the son of Rev John Lipscomb Johnson (bn: 08-12-1835, Forrest Hill, Spotsylvania Cnty, Va) and Julia A. Toy (Bn: 1842, Norfolk Va). Their other son Wortley Johnson was the brakeman of the ill- fated train that Casey Jones collided with.

Both sides of the family come from a long line of ministers, business men and mariners. Julia Toy's father, Thomas Dallam Toy was a well educated man, druggist and extremely wealthy.

According to Crawford Toy Johnson III, his grandfather died suddenly in 1942 and his grandmother, to avoid a possible conflict between the Episcopal side of the Family and the Baptist side, she arranged to have the funeral at home.. His Father and Uncle Allen were both serving in WW II which left his grandmother to run the business. until the end of the war. his father was a finance officer and his Uncle was serving in the Air Force in Albany.

According to the Necomen Report, Crawford Toy Johnson Sr. was born in Danville Va, son of a Baptist minister, who was named for his uncle Crawford Howell Toy. He tells that Crawford Howell Toy, an eminent Baptist Scholar, who was thrown out of the South because his teachings did not seem to be quite as fundamental as some of his contemporaries thought they should be. Crawford Howell Toy became a renowned Harvard Professor of Hebrew religion and wrote the article on the Hebrew religion appearing in the 1903 Encyclopedia Britannica.

Wortley Johnson, brakeman on the train Casey Jones hit spent his remaining years running the Coca-Cola Bottling Company in McComb, Mississippi. Crawford Toy Johnson Sr. graduated from the University of Mississippi when he was sixteen. He moved to Chattanooga, Tennessee where he was in the produce business and the assistant clerk of the county court. He married Caroline Acree from Clarksville Tennessee.

He came to Birmingham in 1902 with $12,000 to establish the Birmingham Coca-Cola Bottling Company with a helper named Sam Whitt and a borrowed mule named Bird. He was Baptist and his wife was Episcopal which made their background religions.

THE STORY OF THE TOYS

I WISH to preface this memorial by a little sketch of Cornwall, especially those parts of it most nearly connected with our family history. I have gathered the materials for it from a little book on Cornwall, by Mr. Tregellas.

The long coast-line of Cornwall, the most southern and western county of England, has been, like Italy, compared in shape to a Wellington boot, the iron heel of which is the mass of serpentine rock which forms the southern point of the Lizard, and the foot that part which lies between Mounts Bay and Land's End. The instep is at St. Ives Bay, and the body of the boot constitutes the main portion of the county, the highest part toward the eastern end forming the Bodmin moors. Along the northern coast, the mural cliffs, against which the Atlantic rollers forever break, are in marked contrast to the tamer and more sylvan scenery of the south and west shores; while across the low-lying lands

The climate of Cornwall, owing to its situation, is so remarkable as to deserve notice. The month of January at Penzance is as warm as at Florence or Madrid, and July is as cool as at St. Petersburg. There is scarcely a country in the world with a climate so mild and equable.

The people are "ardent and vivacious, self-reliant and versatile." It is no uncommon thing for a Cornishman to build his own house, make his own shoes, be both fisherman and miner, and, possibly, small shopkeeper besides; and wherever the Cornish miner emigrates, he is pretty sure to take the lead in enterprise and danger.

Wilkie Collins says: "As a body of men they are industrious, intelligent, sober, and orderly, neither soured by hard work, nor depressed by harsher privations"; and the old poet Taylor, in 1649, writes: "Cornwall is the compleate and repleate Home of Abundance, for high, churlish hills and affable, courteous people. The country hath its share of huge stones, mighty rocks, noble free gentlemen, bountiful housekeepers, strong and stout men, handsome and beautiful women."

Many curious old customs linger in Cornwall, among them the ceremony of "cutting the neck," or last few ears of corn at harvest time, the lighting of bonfires on the hills at St. John's Eve, and the "furry" or Flora dance at Helston, on the eighth of May. Among the peculiar dishes of the Cornish cuisine, prominent is the pasty, the almost universal dinner of the working class. It is a savory compound of meat and potatoes, inclosed in a crescent-shaped crust; but one must be a Cornishman to appreciate this dish thoroughly. The variety of pies is truly marvelous. It has been said that the devil himself would be put into a pie if he were caught in Cornwall. Most of them are richly saturated with clotted cream, a real Cornish dainty, which is very popular, as are also Cornish seed-cakes.

From time immemorial Cornwall has had a leading part in the mineral industries of England. Mines of tin, copper, lead, and zinc abound, and have been the chief source of revenue to the county. They give abundant employment to the laboring class, and men, women, and even children are freely employed in various ways about the mines. Since 1870 the mining industries have declined; the mines have been less productive, and the great discoveries of ore in this and other countries have greatly reduced prices and scattered the Cornish miners over the world.

The fisheries of Cornwall have been another very important industry, especially the mackerel and pilchard fishing. The pilchard is a very delicious fish, similar to a herring, and is found almost exclusively on the Cornish coast.

Cornwall abounds in interesting antiquities, and many of these are claimed to be almost as old as the granite rocks and cliffs of which they are composed. They are relics of the early Britons, — remains of villages, various sorts of sepulchral and memorial stones, and also some that were associated with ancient religious rites. Some of these, such as the "holed stones," have given rise to many superstitions among the common folk, who have been in the habit of dragging invalids through the orifices in the hope of curing them. There are also "cliff castles," especially at Land's End and at other points on the coast, — retreats of the native tribes from enemies, — and also earth-work forts on elevated sites throughout the country. The early Christian antiquities include churches and priories and the oratories or small chapels, frequently associated with a Baptistery or holy well. Some of these are as early as the fifth century. There is also an unusual number of crosses. As to their uses an ancient manuscript says: "For this reason ben crosses by ye way, that when folk passynge see ye croysses they shoulde thynke on Hym that deyed on ye croysse, and worshyppe Hym above althyng." They were also sometimes erected to guide and guard the way to the church, and sometimes for the beautiful custom of leaving alms on the crosses for poor wayfarers. The crosses were formerly far more numerous than now, but recently some of them have been rescued from doing duty as gate-posts and the like, to be reerected in the churchyards. There are also

Of the towns of Cornwall, almost all have some interest, ancient or modern. Truro has recently become the episcopal town of the county; a fine cathedral has been built, and the Bishop has his residence there. Falmouth, at the mouth of the Fal, is a comparatively modern town, beautifully situated. Its magnificent and famous harbor has given it considerable commercial importance in former times. One of its chief attractions is Pendennis Castle. It stands on a bold promontory two hundred feet high, on the western side of the harbor. It was one of the works of defense undertaken by Henry VIII, but the enclosure is of the time of Elizabeth. It is an interesting example of the military architecture of the period. During the Civil War, Pendennis Castle played a prominent and interesting part, and was the last but one of the old castles that held out for the King's cause.

A picturesque spot of much interest on the coast is the jutting headland of the Lizard. The serpentine rock of which it is composed is very beautiful when polished. The best time to visit this spot is at low tide on a summer day, after a storm. Its soft yellow sandy beach, its emerald waves, deep rock-pools and gorgeous serpentine cliffs, of green, purple, crimson, and black, are then of astonishing beauty. Passing eastward along the coast, we come to the little town of Marazion, in front of which rises from the strand the far-famed St. Michael's Mount — an isolated, rugged pyramid of granite, about a mile in circumference and two hundred and thirty feet high at the chapel platform. Several Sir John St. Aubyns have successively inherited it since 1860, the date on which they acquired it from a Bassett of Tehidy. The chapel and the hall are the portions most worthy of examination. A few steps below the chapel is a recess called the dungeon; near it, a narrow winding stair leads to the tower. Near the platform are the remains of a stone cresset called St. Michael's Chair, which is supposed to bring good fortune to those that sit in it.

The town of Penzance, "the Holy Headland," is the place of approach to the Land's End — a bold promontory standing out into the sea at the southwestern extremity of England. Its granite cliff-scenery is the finest in Cornwall. The tempest-scarred cliffs, the furious onset of the waves in stormy weather, and the gorgeous sunsets, so frequent at that point, invest Land's End with a deep and almost melancholy grandeur. It is said that Wesley stood upon this point when he wrote the hymn,

> 'T wixt two unbounded seas I stand."

But the chief interest of Cornwall for our present purpose lies in the town of Camborne on the Cam, or "crooked river." It is one of the great mining centres, and has numerous rich mines, of which the principal is Dolcoath, one of the deepest and most ancient in Cornwall. It is a busy town, built mostly of stone, with nothing of note in the way of architecture. The plain parish church, with its three sharp gables, contains nothing of special interest. It stands in the midst of the churchyard, in which are found many monuments and inscriptions to attract the attention of those who love to recall the past. About three miles to the north is Tehidy, the seat of the Bassetts, with its fine park and gallery containing pictures by Gainsborough, Sir Joshua Reynolds, and Vandyke. In driving to the high bluffs on the north shore it is easy to visit Carn Brea, a rocky headland seven hundred feet above the sea, with picturesque granite blocks piled upon its summit. Here, it is said, was the chief scene of Druid worship; here was the sacrificial rock, in the hollows of which the victim was laid; and here were the granite basins hollowed out to receive his blood. The castle, of Norman origin, was built by Ralph De Pomeroy, and was occupied by a Bassett in the time of Edward IV. There are also here the remains of ancient British earthworks, and "hut circles," and a tall monument to Lord De Dunstanville of Tehidy, erected in 1836.

A point of great interest to us is that Mr. Samuel Davey, the inventor of the safety fuse for blasting and mining, was a native f Camborne, and had his residence there, s did also his partner in business, George Smith, LL.D. Mr. Smith was a man of high character, and great ability as a scholar and writer, and the author of many works of theology and biblical history. Among these are "The Hebrew People" and "The Gentile Nations," which have been accepted as text-books in some theological courses. The other member of the firm was Major John S. Bickford, a man of wealth and influence, and the title of the firm became "Bickford, Smith and Davey." The manufactory was located at Tuckingmill, a village a little distance from Camborne. The business, at first small, has grown and become very successful, and has branches in many parts of Europe and America. The original firm, as represented by its successors, still carries on the business in Tuckingmill.

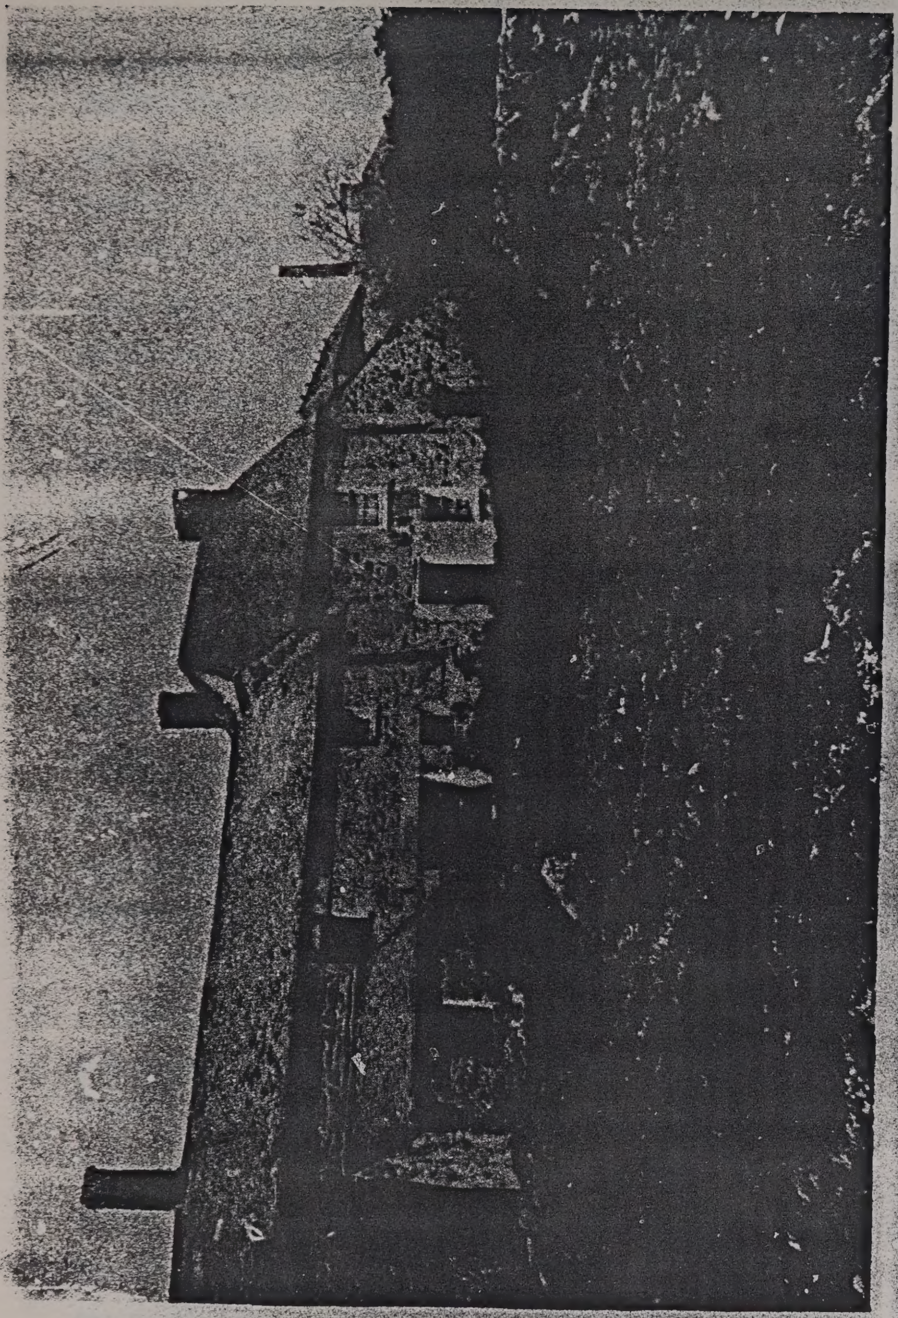
One of the noteworthy features of the town life is the Saturday market-day. On this day are gathered the people from all the outlying country, with varied products of farm, garden and dairy, as well as wares of all kinds, which are offered for sale in the great market-house of the town.

"Camborne Feast" is a harvest festival answering to our Thanksgiving. It occurs on November 13.



BIRTHPLACE OF JOSEPH TOY

In the little hamlet of Roskear, an outlying village of Camborne, my father, Joseph Toy, was born. The long, low stone cottage, with small windows and overhanging roof, still stands. A narrow drive runs in from the village street, and a low stone wall separates it from the plain yard in front adorned with here and there a shrub or climbing vine. The house is little changed since the large family of children were sheltered under its eaves and played about the yard, and the dear mother spread the simple food on the white table, and sanded the well-scoured floor. My father was born in April, 1808. He was the son of Robert and Ann Hosking Toy. He was the youngest of eight children: John, Robert, Nicholas, William, James, Joseph, and his sisters Mary Ann (Mrs. Sims), and Nanny (Mrs. Granville). His parents were honest, God-fearing people, training their children to a life of industry and integrity, and early leading them into the ways of piety and obedience. Joseph, being a bright, attractive child, and possessing an affectionate nature, was very naturally the pet and darling of the family. While he was quite young his father died suddenly, and as the elder children were mostly married, the home was broken up, and he, with his widowed mother, was received into the family of his brother John, a man of much energy and ability, who afterwards became captain of the West Seaton mine. In a few years his mother, too, entered into rest, leaving her beloved Joseph to the care of his elder brother, and well did that brother and his estimable wife fulfill their trust. The home was full of love and sunshine, and the most tender affection was lavished upon the young brother. My uncle scarcely ever came home without the inquiry, "Where is the dear boy?"

Mrs. Jane Gilbert, my Uncle John's youngest daughter, writes thus of the family. "Their father died when Joseph was a lad, but he was always a great pet with his brothers. I have heard my father tell how when he was going courting Joseph had cried to go with him, and he has taken him many a time. Their moth[illegible]ed when your father was young, and he came to him at our house and continued to live with us until his marriage. So my sisters looked upon him more as a brother than an uncle. I can remember that when the letter came to father announcing your dear mother's death, he wept aloud and said, 'Poor little Joe!' Their mother's maiden name was Ann Davey, and she was born at Nans Nuke Illogan. She was a grand old Christian, a splendid character and handsome. I have always heard her children speak of her with reverence and love. Our grandfather's mother's name was Andrews, and she was born in the parish of Newlyn East."

The circumstances of the family made it necessary that all should share in its support, and, as soon as he was thought capable, my father was put — as were other children of his age — to do such work at the mine as was then almost the only employment open to children. They were set at picking up the ore for wheeling from the opening, and other light work suited to their age, the labor and responsibility being increased as they grew older. The advantages of education for the children of the working classes were few indeed at that day, and where so many mouths were to be fed, but little could be spared for books or schooling. My father early developed a fondness for reading which grew into an earnest thirst for knowledge, leading him to devote much of the time spent by other boys in play to the search for it as for hid treasure.

There was considerable natural musical talent in the family, and, as my father had a sweet voice, he was early taken into the surpliced boy-choir of the parish church, to which one or two of his brothers belonged, though his family were devoted members of the Wesleyan church of Camborne. The beautiful ritual of the church and its impressive services had a refining influence upon the sensitive boy, and the musical training he there received was of much value to him, and gave him much enjoyment in after life. He used to speak with enthusiasm of this experience, and I have often heard him tell of the delight with which the boys would go forth in the frosty air of the Christmas morning to sing carols under the windows of their friends, and how eagerly they would catch the pennies which were thrown from the windows in response to their greeting. The drinking habit of those days was universal, and total abstinence was a thing unknown; and I have heard him say that the good rector, Parson Rogers, would often pat the boys affectionately when they had done particularly well, and say, "You have done well, boys. Now come with me and have a little drop of something warm." His connection with the parish choir was also the means of attracting the notice of some people of influence who were afterwards of much assistance to him.

As he grew older, his interest in education increased greatly, and produced a distaste for the drudgery of his life at the mine. The conviction grew upon him that he was fitted for something better, and while he patiently bided his time, he was diligently improving every opportunity for study. Kind friends soon noticed the boy's struggles, and began to encourage him by lending him books, assisting him in evening studies, and giving him help in every possible way. Prominent among these were Mr. Thomas Davey, Mr. Thomas Garland, Dr. George Smith, the author and scholar, Lady Bassett, and Lord De Dunstanville of Tehidy, whose kindness and sympathy were very helpful.

At the age of nineteen my father passed the religious crisis of his life, and his conversion was thorough and complete. He united with the Wesleyan church, and threw himself with all the ardor of his nature into its Christian work. He was very active in the social meetings, and showed such decided talent in that line that he was soon appointed a class-leader. He was also a teacher in the Sunday School, where he showed such aptitude for the work as to incline him to the profession of teaching as a vocation. He became Superintendent of the Sunday School, and was soon licensed to preach, receiving an appointment as local preacher on a circuit.

By untiring diligence he had qualified himself for the position of teacher and obtained a situation in one of the Lancastrian schools, so popular at that day, located in Camborne. He filled this position for some years with much acceptance, continuing at the same time his own studies, until he acquired, almost wholly by his own exertions, a solid and excellent education. He was a good English scholar, a fine reader, carefully exact in spelling and pronunciation, well read in history, a good mathematician, fairly proficient in algebra and geometry, with considerable knowledge of Latin, Greek, and French. He demonstrated clearly what can be accomplished by any boy with a good mind, by energy and perseverance, in the face of the most serious obstacles.

About this time he formed the acquaintance of Miss Jane Osler, a young lady of refinement and culture, who was at that time proprietor of a millinery establishment in Camborne; and he married her in 1833. My mother was the daughter of Benjamin and Jane Osler of Falmouth, and was born August 1, 1802. The family was a very excellent one. Benjamin Osler was the son of Edward Osler and Joan Drew, sister of the famous Cornish metaphysician. He was a man of very decided character, a "gentleman of the old school." His discipline in his family was very strict, though kind, the rod always occupying a conspicuous place over the mantel for the admonition of any child inclined to disobedience. A fine miniature of my Grandfather Osler is in my possession, and it is our most cherished heirloom. It is in the form of a locket. The picture shows a fine oval face, with delicate features, powdered hair, and the heavy eyebrows we have learned to call "the Osler eyebrows." On the reverse side it has the hair of my grandfather and grandmother, smoothly crossed, and upon it the monogram, "B. J. O.," in exquisite letters formed of tiny pearls. This locket was given to my mother by her father when the family went out to the Cape of Good Hope, South Africa, in the year 1819. It was painted in London some time previous to that.

In April, 1797, according to the Falmouth church register, my grandfather married Jane Sawle, the daughter of Stephen Sawle of Falmouth, an officer in the British navy and afterward Captain of a Falmouth packet, the Hanover. A solid silver tankard is preserved in our family, which was presented to our great-grandfather by the British Admiralty. It bears this inscription: "For twenty years' faithful service"; and on the side, the letters, "S. S." It is now the property of my sister, Mrs. R. H. Ensign. There is also somewhere in the Osler family a picture of our Grandfather Sawle, an old gentleman in naval uniform.

My mother was also one of a large family, which consisted of eight girls and two brothers.[1] They were: Susan, Eliza, Mary Ann, Amelia, Philippa, Jane, Julia, Sarah, Stephen, and Benjamin.

While my mother was still young, her father went out to the Cape of Good Hope, in charge of a colony of settlers. Dr. William Osler has kindly loaned me a diary of my grandfather's, containing lists of provisions and supplies purchased for the party, as well as other items. The entries extend from January 3, 1815, to January 25, 1821. There seem to have been in the party fourteen men, sixteen women, one boy, and three girls. All payments were to be made in a proportion of the products of the land. My grandfather settled in Simons Town, with most of his family, and was probably a magistrate of the new colony. Two of the daughters, Julia and Philippa, being in business in England, had remained behind. My mother was left in the care of her mother's sister, Mrs. John Harris. They were people of some culture, and having no children of their own, were very fond of my mother and gave careful attention to the cultivation of her mind and manners. Her uncle took special delight in training her in reading and elocution. I have often heard her recite with much spirit:

She also gives additional information about Benjamin Osler and his family which I have added as an appendix. — S. W. D.

> "My name is Norval. On the Grampian hills

also many selections from the Iliad and Odyssey, taught her by her uncle. Her home with these dear friends was most pleasant, and she cherished the loving memory of their kindness all her life. It found expression in the name she gave to me, her first-born, of Mary Harris. She learned her business while she remained with them, and became the head woman in a large millinery establishment in Falmouth, and afterwards set up in business for herself in Camborne. My mother became a member of the Church of England, to which all her family belonged, at the age of seventeen, and so continued till near her marriage, when she united with the Wesleyan church in Camborne.

My grandfather Osler died at Simons Town, after some years' residence there. My grandmother returned to her English home, but most of the children, being married and settled in business at the Cape, made their homes permanently there, and their descendants are now living mostly in Simons Town and in Cape Town. After my grandmother's return to England, she taught for a time a school for girls; but later came to Camborne and made her home with her daughters who were in business there. Her home was with my mother till her departure for America.

While my mother remained in Falmouth, her Aunt Osler, the last of the old family, lived near her with her two daughters, and they were a great comfort to her. This Aunt Osler died in April, 1864. She was Mary Paddy Osler, the wife of my grandfather's eldest brother, Edward. Their eldest son, Edward, has descendants in Canada, with whom we have had very pleasant relations, and a daughter, Mary, was the mother of Mrs. Truran of Truro. Another son, Rev. Featherstone Osler, came out to Canada as a missionary, and became the founder of a large and influential family there. Our own relationship to them has been only lately discovered, and has been the source of much pleasure to us. Mrs. Featherstone Osler died at the age of one hundred, in 1907, a woman very remarkable and greatly beloved; and her large family of sons, including Dr. William Osler of Oxford, Hon. Justice Osler of Toronto, Britton Bath Osler, the eminent lawyer, and Mr. Edmund Osler, the financier are all distinguished in public life.

Of my mother's sisters, Susan married a Mr. Fineran of Cape Town, and had an interesting family of children. She was early left a widow. Her daughter, Mrs. Kate Divine, has written me several times, and given me interesting details of the family. One daughter went to New Zealand to live after her marriage; one son, Charles, died early. Mrs. Divine's son, Edmund, went to sea quite young, in a British ship, and coming to New York, visited us all, which was a great pleasure. Mrs. Divine is now quite an invalid, and with her unmarried daughter, Maude, lives in Plumstead, a suburb of Cape Town, very near two of her sons and their families.

Mary Ann married Mr. Sayers of Simons Town, and her children are still there. She was a very lovely character, and died about 1855, after a long and severe illness borne with great fortitude and patience. The inscription chosen for her tombstone was the same as that on my mother's: Rev. xiv: 13. Her daughter, Mrs. Eliza Storrier, has written me under date March 13, 1882, from the address: Mrs. J. E. Storrier, Patent Slip, Simons Town.

Eliza Osler married Mr. Jordan, and lived at Wynberg, Cape of Good Hope. Her husband was in good business, and they had a family of seven daughters and one son. She was also left a widow.

Philippa married Mr. William Cogill, a merchant of Simons Town, who had several children. She had three of her own — two sons and a daughter, Julia, who married a Captain Bray and went to England to live. She was left a widow with two children, in rather unpleasant circumstances. I corresponded for some time with my Aunt Philippa, and her son Arthur, who was at sea, came into the port of Boston at one time and we went to see him while in port. Aunt Philippa died February 14, 1879. She had a stroke of apoplexy and lingered for twenty-four hours, but never regained consciousness. She was a woman of lovely character, and an earnest Christian.

Julia Osler, who, with Aunt Philippa, went out to the Cape after we left England, was married there and had one child, but died early. I have not the name of her husband.

Amelia married Gilbert Williams of Falmouth, who followed the sea. She sometimes went with him, leaving her two children, Gilbert and Amelia, with her mother. The son, Gilbert, lived in Falmouth. He was an engineer, and had a large family. We visited them while in England. One daughter was named Mary Harris Dodge, for me, and one Julia Osler, for my sister Julia. My cousin Gilbert had a good mind and was well educated, but was never very successful in life. He died several years ago. His children are doing well, and are still located in Falmouth. His sister Amelia had always lived with them, being of feeble intellect and a great care. My Aunt Williams had a hard struggle in life. She was early left a widow, and her health was delicate, but she supported her family by teaching, and educated her children. Her health failed, however, and at last her reason gave way. She was for some time in the Bodmin Asylum, but later her reason returned, and she lived some years with her son; and died in Falmouth a few years ago.

Sarah, the youngest daughter, was nine years of age when the family returned from the Cape. She was adopted by her Aunt Harris and her husband, and through them family of seven daughters and one son. She was also left a widow.

Philippa married Mr. William Cogill, a merchant of Simons Town, who had several children. She had three of her own — two sons and a daughter; Julia, who married a Captain Bray and went to England to live. She was left a widow with two children, in rather unpleasant circumstances. Sarah, the youngest daughter, was nine years of age when the family returned from the Cape. She was adopted by her Aunt Harris and her husband, and through them received an excellent education — a thing very difficult to acquire in those days. She remained with them till their death, then went to Camborne to her sisters, and afterwards secured a situation in Truro, where she became engaged to a man much older than herself. She lost her interest in him as the time drew near for her marriage, and determined not to marry him. Hearing of a family who were going to Gibraltar and wished a governess, she at once secured the position, and after a hasty farewell to her mother, having gained her very unwilling consent, she left England in two days. This was in 1838. In 1840 she married Mr. Watson, of Edinburgh, Scotland, who belonged to the Royal Artillery. At the end of two years they returned to England, and were stationed at Woolwich, but in 1845 they removed to Edinburgh. In 1852 the discovery of gold in Australia created a rush to that colony. My Aunt Sarah with her family removed there, her husband joining in the search for gold with varying success, while she labored energetically to rear and educate her children.

She was a widow for some years before her death. Her children, of whom six lived to grow up, were a great comfort and an honor to her. They are all respectably settled in Australia. Her eldest daughter, Julia Osler, married a Mr. Thomas Sayle, and they now live at Queenscliff, Australia. My sister Julia met them in her journey to the East, in 1900, as well as another daughter, Mrs. Evans, and two sons, William and Arthur, the latter of whom has since died. My Aunt Watson died after a short illness a few years ago,—I have not the exact date. In a letter received from my Aunt Sarah, dated June 10, 1872, she thus speaks of my mother:—

"My first recollection of your mother was when we returned from the Cape. I was then nine years old. She was much occupied by business, but often on evenings she would take a walk in a quiet, beautiful lane near our home, with your Aunt Phillis and myself. In these rambles I first learned to love nature and poetry, for, to our delight, she would repeat to us choice poems which I have never forgotten. She sowed the seeds of a love of literature in my mind, which time has never effaced and which has been a solace to me in prosperity and adversity. I never think of my dear sister Jane but as the most perfect and consistent Christian I ever knew."

She also quotes from a letter written to her by my mother, August 15, 1844, in which she says:—

"Mary is smaller than our other children, but she is a kind-hearted little creature, and is able to render me many little services. I think her disposition resembles that of our dear mother. Joseph is naturally self-willed, and little Susan volatile. Ann Jane is now two years old. She is an engaging little creature, and can sing and talk remarkably well. She is named for her two grandmothers."

Of the two sons, my Uncle Stephen Osler remained at the Cape. He was for many years a teacher in the government schools. I had for some years an interesting correspondence with him. He had two sons, Stephen and Benjamin, and a very sweet daughter, Katherine Jane, who died quite young. The sons were both men of position

My Uncle Benjamin returned to England and established his business there. He lived for some years in Barnstaple, and died of apoplexy, February 3, 1864. He left two sons, both of whom were men of character. One of them, Rev. Benjamin Osler of Exmouth, afterwards became a Baptist clergyman. I have recently had a delightful correspondence with him, and my sister Susan has met him and his family. He has two sons, John Stephen and Ernest Edward, both of whom have children.

I should have inserted before a sketch of the family of my Uncle John Toy, with whom we have been more intimately connected than with any other branch of either family. My uncle married Jane Rule of Camborne, and they had four daughters and one son. The eldest, Mary Ann, married Mr. Josephus Snell. He was a builder and contractor, and had a prosperous business. They removed to London, and most of their life was spent there. They had a very pleasant home, and Mr. Snell owned several houses which he rented. They have both died within a few years. The second daughter, Amelia, married James Snell, a brother of Josephus. They had two daughters. Asenath, the elder, was adopted by her Uncle Josephus, as they had no children of their own. She married Edward Brundell, and their home was in London. Louisa, the younger, always lived with her parents. My cousin Amelia died quite suddenly about two years ago. Jennefer married Philip Morshead of Camborne. They had two children: a son, John, who has always been a teacher, and a daughter, Annie Davis, who has been also a very successful teacher. My cousin Jennefer was a little older than myself, and was very fond of us as children before we left England. She was a favorite of my mother, and I always corresponded with her occasionally. Both she and her husband have recently died. Jane, the youngest, married John Gilbert, since captain of one of the large mines, and a man of much intelligence and influence. He has made several visits to America in the interest of the mines, also he was sent to India, where he was employed for two years by the mine-owners. They have a pleasant home in Camborne and three fine children: two sons, Arthur and Bertie, who are both in business, and Leonora, a sweet girl who is soon to be married to a Wesleyan minister.[1] The only son, John Toy, was not as successful as the rest. He came to America, and went from here to Australia, where he died some years ago.

I wish also to mention the family of my aunt, Mrs. Mary Ann Sims. She was my father's only remaining sister when we visited England in 1882. She was then living with her daughter, Mrs. Arthur, in Camborne, and was about eighty years of age. She was a lovely old lady, petite in figure, exquisitely neat in dress, her face beaming with kindness from beneath one of the snowy caps with which her grandson, Johnnie Arthur, delighted to keep her supplied. She was greatly beloved by her grandchildren, and the pet of all the nieces and nephews. She reared a large family of children, who are widely scattered. One son has long lived in Norway, and is the father of Joseph Sims of Simsbury, Connecticut. One is the Rev. James Sims[1] of Council Bluffs, Iowa, who was for many years a Methodist minister in Wisconsin. Reverend and Mrs. James Sims celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage in 1907, when they were both over eighty. They had ten children, of whom seven are still living, Mrs. Mary Bainbridge being best known to us. Two sons and two daughters are living in England.

My Aunt Sims had a cosy cottage at Carwinning, in the country, a few miles from Camborne; and it was one of my mother's chief pleasures to take her little children to this pleasant country home, where we were always cordially welcomed and treated to the best of Cornish cream and gooseberry pasties. It was a pleasant relief from her busy and confining life in the

My father lived, for over five years after his marriage, in Camborne, holding the position of principal of the Lancastrian School, and making himself very useful as local preacher and class-leader in the Wesleyan church. Three children were born to them in these happy days of their early married life. I was the first-born, and was ushered into life October 31, 1834, at about 8 o'clock in the morning. I have often heard my father speak of the joy he felt when I was placed in his arms for the first time. The second was my brother Joseph, born July 23, 1836, a bright, active boy, who made life busy for those who had the care of him. Then came my sister Susan, born June 3, 1838. She was the household pet when we turned our faces from the dear old home to seek a new one in a land of strangers. This great change which now came into our family life was in connection with the introduction of the manufacture of safety fuses into America. The firm, having an established and lucrative business in England, naturally sought to enlarge and extend it, and America was considered an inviting field for the new industry.

About this time Mr. Richard Bacon of Simsbury, Connecticut, was travelling in England in the interest of copper-mining, which was then carried on at the old prison in East Granby, Connecticut, known as Newgate. He met with the firm of Bickford, Smith & Davey, and they determined to make an effort through him to introduce their business into America. The first attempt was accordingly made at the old prison, with some success. It had been transferred to Simsbury, and was in successful operation there, when, in the summer of 1839, my father, who was well and favorably known to the firm, and had been greatly encouraged and befriended by Mr. Smith and Mr. Davey, and in their employ, received from them an offer of a position as bookkeeper in the American establishment, which was known as Bacon, Bickford & Co., with what was for those days a good salary. The accounts of the new branch were confused and unsatisfactory, and the company desired to have accurate statements rendered. It was a fine opening for the future for my father, as was proved a few years later when he became a member of the firm of which he was afterwards the head.

This startling proposition brought a season of anxious thought and prayerful consideration into the little home. My mother was well established in her business; her mother and two sisters were with her; her love for her English home and friends was deep and true; and she shrank with all the force of her loving nature from the separation. The journey was long and trying. No ocean steamers made the voyage a pleasant pastime of a few days. Long weeks of tossing on the stormy ocean were to be followed by the search for a new home in a land of strangers. But with my mother the voice of duty was always the voice of God. The prospects of a wider field for her husband, and enlarged opportunities for her children, were not to be neglected. Her decision was made, and saying, as did Ruth, "Where thou goest, I will go," she bravely put away the arms of love which would have held her back, and set herself to the task of closing her business and arranging for her journey. At length the preparations were over. The last farewells were said to the dear little home, to the church they loved and had served so faithfully, and to the dear ones from whom it was so hard to part. The van laden with luggage for the voyage, with space reserved for the family, was ready to start; and amid the tears and prayers of those who loved them, the dear old home faded forever from the eyes of my father and mother.

The first stage of the journey was to Falmouth, my mother's early home, where we remained for a rest of a day or two with my mother's sister, Mrs. Williams. Pleasant days they were, of loving sisterly communion. The children, wild with the excitement of the new experience, were eagerly spying out the wonders of the city, in company with their cousins. My brother Joseph, a bold, adventurous little fellow of scarcely three, wandered off one day, to the great anxiety of his mother. He was found, after a long search, by my aunt, gazing intently into the

These pleasant days soon passed, and with renewed good-byes, we left for Portsmouth, from which port we were to sail. A vexatious delay of some days was experienced there, but at last the good ship spread her sails and stood off down the harbor. With tearful eyes they stood on deck and watched the receding shores of their dear native land fade from their sight. Then, with new devotion to each other and to the God who was leading them, they turned with hope and courage to the new life opening before them.

For six long weeks the vessel ploughed its way over the heaving sea. My father was almost immediately prostrated by sea-sickness, and for most of the passage was confined to the stateroom, unable to render any assistance in the care of the family. My mother bravely rose to the emergency, caring for her sick husband and the restless children, and bearing the weariness and discomfort of the voyage without a murmur.

My brother Joseph, being of an inquiring mind and full of restless energy, was constantly wandering about the ship, exploring every new place, talking with the sailors, trying to climb the ropes, and requiring unceasing vigilance to keep him from harm. Little Susan, then just past her first birthday, learned to walk on board the ship, and one of her first exploits in climbing about was to upset a teapot of hot tea into her bosom, making a bad scald of which she carries the scars to this day; thus adding much to the care and anxiety of her mother.

At last the weary weeks wore away, and their eyes were gladdened by the sight of land. On the eighteenth of August, 18[illegible], 1839 they made safe anchor in the harbor of New York. From there an easy sail by the Sound brought them to Hartford. Once more the luggage was mounted on a heavy wagon, with space reserved for the family, and they were off on the ten-mile drive over the mountains to Simsbury, their place of destination.

As the afternoon was wearing away, they came to the top of the high hill rising abruptly at the eastern end of the street of East Weatogue, where their journey was cut short by the breaking down of the wagon. The prospect which opened before them was beautiful indeed. The little village which was to be their home nestled at the foot of the mountain range, while fertile meadows stretched away in the distance, through which the Farmington river with its wooded banks wound its peaceful way, the horizon bounded by the range of mountains west of the town. It was a lovely picture, but the way-worn travellers could not realize its beauty, as they alighted from the broken wagon, and took their weary way down the hill to the village, leaving the driver to repair the wagon and follow later. My mother, walking on, came to a hospitable-looking home and ventured to ask a drink for the tired children. A pleasant-faced matron greeted them kindly, invited them in to rest, and offering my mother a cup of tea, proceeded to regale the hungry children with bread and molasses. This was their first welcome to their new home. My mother rejoiced to find that her new friend was from the dear home land, also that her husband was in the employ of the same firm. They became lifelong friends, and in sickness and in health it was their delight to show a sisterly kindness to each other. This good woman was "Auntie Whitehead," a warm friend of our family, who has since joined my mother in the heavenly home.

At last, as the evening shadows were falling, the heavy wagon came slowly down the mountain, and we were lodged in our first home in America. It was an old-fashioned New England house, with long sloping roof and lean-to running down behind. It is still standing and in fair repair, just opposite the Cornish house, which stood by the old schoolhouse in East Weatogue. One half the house was occupied by the family of Mr. Joseph Eales, who was a member of the firm. We remained there for a time, and afterwards removed to the house standing where Mr. Aman Latimer's house now stands. But, desiring a more permanent home, my father bought the farm owned by Mr. Roswell Phelps, lying just at the foot of the mountain. It is now owned by Mr. Henry Ensign. My mother rejoiced to feel that at last her wanderings were over and she was settled in a home of her own.

How plainly I can see it now! The plain house with its gambrel roof and double front-doors kept secure by a stout oak bar resting in sockets of iron; the narrow front hall, the family sitting-room on one side, with the east door opening on the grassy yard; and the wide stone steps, our only piazza. The parlor was on the west of the hall, with its ingrain carpet and plain furniture, which then seemed quite fine to my childish eyes. The best bed standing in the corner with the heavy English counterpane was one of the conspicuous features of the room. Behind was the long kitchen with its great fireplace, my mother's bedroom at one end, and a smaller one for the children at the other. Plain and simple, indeed, and even bare as compared with the homes of these days, as was this home of our childhood, it was "sweet home" to us, for it was bright with the love that made our lives all sunshine, and peace and contentment were our constant guests.

Two large buttonwood trees stood at the front gate, up to which led some stone steps. By the street was an open shed under which wagons could drive, and beyond was the garden with the great apple tree at the top of it, flanked by peach trees, whose fruit was "sweet to our taste." Behind the house was the well with its long sweep and its "oaken bucket," which was our only refrigerator. It sometimes befell that a luckless pail of cream or butter fell to the bottom. Then one of the children was despatched in haste over the fields to borrow neighbor Bissel's iron creepers, and great was the excitement as we watched the grappling which surely brought up the pail, if not always the contents. There, too, was the old pear tree, in the back garden, whose fruit was so delicious as we ran out in the early morning to gather what had fallen during the night; and the orchard with its long grass, often trampled in our hasty search for the "golden sweets" which strewed the ground. The hill rising at the back of it was crowned with the fine spreading chestnut trees, which were such a joy to us in the autumn when the frost had opened the burs and strewed the brown nuts on the ground. Behind the house was the barn, with the cow which we early learned to milk, and the white horse which carried the family to church on Sunday, and my father on his semi-weekly journeys to the post office in Hopmeadow. For daily mails were unknown in the peaceful valley then. The yellow stage rumbled through the streets on its semi-weekly trip from Hartford and was hailed with joy as a messenger from the great world beyond.

Across the brook and farther down the street was the little brown schoolhouse, with its stiff hard benches, and open Franklin stove. Behind was an old apple tree, and a barnyard flanked it on the north side. There was a row of maples under which we played, and built stone houses in the soft sand, making wonderful china closets of bricks and shingles and filling them with bits of bright crockery laboriously gathered from the children's homes and carried to school in our aprons.

Early rising was the rule in our house, for the early breakfast was always preceded by family prayers, from which none might be excused; and after it my father went to his office and the children to school. We were happy children then; our simple sports and homely pleasures had a zest which, it seems to me, children in these days of multiplied means of diversion know little of. The free life of the fields and woods; the fun of driving the cows to and from the mountain pastures, and, in spring, carrying home pails of maple sap, and boiling it into sugar; scouring the mountain-sides and pastures for berries and nuts, picking up apples and potatoes in the fall, by which we gained a little money which was all our own; and, in winter, the joys of coasting down the steep hill and far across the fields below by moonlight. The wonderful snow-forts our brothers built and stormed, and the rides over the snow behind the frisky steers on the ox-sled they made; in-doors the home-made dolls and pleasant games, and in the evenings the delightful stories and songs with which our mother entertained us — all these were enjoyed with a relish so keen as to leave nothing more to be desired.

As was most natural, my parents immediately connected themselves with the church of their choice in their new home. The little band composing the Methodist Episcopal church, which answered to the Wesleyan they had left at home, had at that time no church edifice and were holding Sabbath services in the schoolhouses, mostly at West Weatogue, about a mile from our house. I well remember pleasant Sabbath morning walks down the village street, through the "River Lane," bordered by a tall row of Normandy poplars, over the bridge and by the sheepfold of Squire Owen Pettibone at the corner, where we were allowed, much to our delight, to stop to look at the young lambs with their soft white coats and bright eyes. I remember, too, the weekly evening prayer-meetings held at our own schoolhouse at "early candle-light," when lamps and chairs were brought in by the neighbors, and the simple service, generally conducted by my father, was often as "the house of God and the gate of heaven" to the earnest worshippers. It sometimes happened in the spring-time, when the swollen river flooded the meadows and made the roads along its banks impassable, that the brook which crossed our street was raised to a small river, and the street could be crossed only by boats. When this occurred on a Sabbath the young men would bring a boat, and to our great delight we were rowed over, and the neighbors gathered at the schoolhouse for a Sabbath service at which my father preached.

His talents as a preacher and religious leader were soon perceived and appreciated by the people, and his services were in much demand. It is said that he preached in the schoolhouse at West Weatogue on the evening after his arrival in Simsbury. In those early days he preached frequently, supplying every alternate Sabbath for many of the weaker churches in the vicinity which could not afford a regular pastor. He preached in this way at North Canton, Granby, Bloomfield, Washington Hill, Newfield, Burlington, and many other places. He would often start off on Saturday afternoon for a drive of ten or fifteen miles, leaving his little family to get to church on Sunday as best they could. In cold weather he would wrap himself in his long cloak brought over from England, and with the faithful white horse, go forth to wrestle with the wintry winds and snows, often not returning till Monday. In 1840 the Methodist Episcopal church edifice was built, on land donated by Squire Ensign, a Congregationalist. My father, J. O. Phelps, Esquire, and Mr. Edward C. Vining were appointed building-committee. Through their earnest efforts, it was finally located at Hopmeadow, in spite of strong opposition from some of the most influential members, who resided at "Cases' Farms," now West Simsbury, and who favored its erection there. It was said of my father by his pastor, Rev. I. Simmons, "He was one of the most efficient workers and liberal givers in the erection of the Simsbury church." A contribution was secured by his efforts from the English firm to aid in building the church. It was a plain white structure with long windows and green blinds. The steeple much resembled that of the present Congregational church, but was smaller. They have been not inaptly compared to two boxes piled on one another. The pleasant-toned bell still hangs in the church tower, and it was music in the ears of the little company of Methodists, when its clear notes rang out over the meadows and hillsides, calling them to worship in a church of their own.

The interior was very simple: the plain pews with high doors; the swinging gallery at the rear with the stiff green curtains on brass rings across the front, which were drawn with all due ceremony when the preliminary sounding of the tuning fork announced the beginning of preparations for singing; the plain white pulpit with its purple velvet cushion and hangings and straight seat cushioned with green baize, its door closed and carefully buttoned after the minister had ascended the narrow stairs; the high altar railing inclosing the communion table at which it was so tiresome for children to kneel; — all these form a vivid picture in my memory. Some years later an improvement(?) was introduced which was thought to be a marvel of art, in the shape of a fresco behind the pulpit. It represented two heavy curtains, supported by pillars on each side, looped back by a large cord with immense dark tassels. This was the wonder of our childish eyes for many years. Two large box stoves stood near the entrance doors, at which I used to stand tremblingly to warm myself after our cold ride in winter, while the stalwart young sexton, whose rough manners concealed a kind heart, raked at the glowing coals with his long poker and thrust in the big sticks which soon sent a glow through our chilled hands and feet. The plain little church has been transformed into a neat modern one with a corner tower,[1] and the worshippers with whom my memory fills those pews all lie quietly sleeping on the hillside in the neighboring cemetery. Only their children remain to remind us of them and the good work they did in those early days, but their memory is green,

In 1844 my father served as pastor of the Simsbury church, giving his services that the church might free itself from debt, which it did. He conducted during all those years a Bible class of ladies in the Sunday School, by whom he was greatly appreciated and beloved. The Sabbaths of those early days were far from being "days of rest" to my father and mother. They were obliged to rise early to get the family ready for church, leaving home at about half-past nine for the two-mile ride to Hopmeadow. Then the two services with Sunday School between, and the drive home occupied the time till four P. M. Then my mother had to prepare the warm supper, and when all was over it was nearly time for the evening prayers, which were never omitted. Not until the restless children were in bed and soothed to sleep by the sweet hymns she used to sing to us, was there a moment of quiet rest for the dear mother. My father at that time always drove to Hopmeadow for the evening service, and later one or two of the older children were allowed to go with him. In pleasant weather, when my father was absent on his preaching tours, my mother would take such of the children as were old enough, and walk to church on Sabbath mornings, leaving the little ones with her friend Mrs. Whitehead.

One of the chief pleasures of that early time was the receipt of letters from the dear mother and sisters left behind, for letters were indeed like angels' visits then. They were full of tender memories and loving messages for the dear ones over the sea. One of my most cherished mementos is a letter written to my mother by my Grandmother Osler in October, 1839, in which she speaks of her joy in hearing of our safe arrival and settlement in our new home and of how much she missed my mother, and her affectionate longing to see the children who were so dear to her. She says, —

"Kiss the three darling children for me. I cannot express my love for them and you, nor my feelings on account of the great distance between us. I shed many tears in reading your much valued letter over and over again. You are all generally uppermost in my thoughts, and I find you wanting more than I can describe. I am very glad you like the appearance of the country and that you were so kindly received. I hope the winters will be more mild than we expected; and that by the blessing of the Almighty you will all be happy and comfortable. Oh! how I would love to see my beloved little Mary, and my darling little Joseph, who seems inclined to remember me by expecting to find me in his new home, and I should have been much pleased to see my dear, sweet, pretty little Susan take to run off, but suppose the misfortune of pulling the hot tea over into her tender bosom put her back some time. Pretty dear! I used to love them all as if they were my own."

She goes on to speak of her health and prospects, and in closing says, —

"I hope the Lord will give me strength according to my day, and by His divine assistance, may I and all of you be led on by His grace in the way to everlasting life."

Such was the love and blessing which descended to us from our godly ancestors.

As nearly as I can learn, my grandmother Osler died in 1842, about three years after our coming to America. I well remember my mother's grief when the sad tidings came, and the black dress she wore for some time afterward. Her sisters Julia and Philippa soon returned to the Cape of Good Hope, where their brother and sisters were, and both were married there, but my Aunt Julia only lived a short time, dying soon after the birth of her first child. The sad news came to my mother just before the birth of my sister Julia, and she was named for this dear sister. My mother always loved dear old England with a right loyal affection. She always spoke of it lovingly as "Home," and cherished a longing desire to revisit it at some future day, but she never allowed any feeling of homesickness to interfere with present duty. Her whole heart was given to her family. It was her highest joy to make home bright and happy for her husband and children, though her heart was large enough to take in the church and the neighborhood and every one to whom she might do a kindness. From year to year she toiled patiently and quietly on, with very little to relieve the monotony of her life. Vacations were a thing unheard of in that day, especially for women, and though my father made frequent journeys to various parts of the country on business, it was not thought of as possible that the mother could leave her post. But her life, so far from being dreary or unsatisfying, was bright with the love and confidence of her husband and the affection of her children. These were her "joy and crown," the approval of the Saviour she loved and served was her constant inspiration, and her well-stored mind, and her fondness for good reading furnished pleasant occupation for her leisure hours.

So the years passed quietly and peacefully with little change in the life of the family. Two other children came to bless the home, Ann Jane, named for her two grandmothers, born February 23, 1842, and Julia Osler, born June 14, 1845. I must not fail to make mention of one who played quite an important part in the history of our family at this time. This was a young woman named Lucinda Andrus, who came into the family

April 1, 1843. She had employment in the factory and assisted my mother in such ways as she could for her board. She was a woman of excellent Christian character and great kindness of heart, though possessed of strong peculiarities. She was warmly attached to my mother and the children, and very self-sacrificing in her efforts to assist in every possible way. She was, in this way, a member of our family for many years, passing with us through scenes of joy and sorrow, always identifying her interests with ours and giving the most faithful service and unchanging friendship. She was a woman of shrewd good sense and often quite witty, and her quaint remarks and amusing stories and songs enlivened many an evening for the children. She was somewhat credulous, and had great faith in dreams and omens, which we eagerly drank in, somewhat to the discomfort of our mother, who was singularly free from any trace of superstition, and was the very soul of truth in all her conversation with her children. Lucinda married later in life old Mr. Thomas Morton, who, as she herself allowed after his death, was not always "the best of husbands," though she did think the minister "might have said a little more about him at his funeral." Her married life was burdened with hard work and poverty, but her last years were made quite comfortable by the kindness of many friends who respected her and were glad to assist her. She died in the autumn of 1896. She is remembered by the young people of our family as "Aunt Lucinda."

We come now to the time when the clouds gathered heavily over the happy family, and its sweet light went out in darkness. My mother had not been in her usual good health during the summer, and had been at times a little low-spirited. On Monday, July 19, 1848, my father went on a short business trip to Boston, and returning found my mother quite poorly. On Friday she felt decidedly ill and asked Lucinda to remain at home to assist her, which she gladly did. That evening my father, who was suffering from severe headache, asked my mother to offer prayer at the evening worship, as she often did, and Lucinda, whose recollection of those scenes was very vivid, describes it as one of the most remarkable prayers she ever heard. The mother's whole soul seemed drawn out in special pleading for her children, that God would make them His own, and would care for them if she was taken away from them. On Saturday she was much worse, and on Sunday her condition was very alarming. The disease having developed as malignant erysipelas, one of the most experienced and skilful physicians from Hartford was called, a good nurse put in charge, and all that human skill could do was done to save the life so precious to us all. But all in vain. It became evident during Monday night that the end was near, and toward morning the family were gathered at her bedside for the last farewell. She called each separately, and commended them to God with her dying blessing.

Little Julia, only three years old, was in my father's arms, too young to realize the sad parting. My mother asked, "Where is my little Annie?" My father lifted her and she laid her hand on Annie's head, but could not speak. My brother Joseph, always impulsive and warm-hearted, burst into tears, and begged forgiveness for any trouble he might have caused her. She spoke words of comfort to him and sank back exhausted. My father asked her, "Is all well?" She answered, "All is well. It is well with my soul." And so in the morning of July 27, 1848, at 6 A. M., gently and peacefully passed away one of the purest and sweetest spirits that ever brightened this dark world. Her lifework was finished, and she "entered into the joy of her Lord."

No relatives were near enough to comfort and help the family in this time of trial, but neighbors and friends were unwearied in their kindness and sympathy. One instance worthy of mention was that of a young girl named Delia Foley, who was living with the Phelps family and to whom my mother had shown kindness as a stranger. She volunteered her services in preparing the dear form for burial, which was the more remarkable as the disease was of such a nature that there was great fear of contagion. This fact became known to me by accidentally finding Miss Foley, who was now a gray-haired woman, in the family of Hon. Joshua

Hale of Newburyport, where she had been an honored and trusted servant for nearly forty years. It was a great pleasure to me to meet her, and to express to her, in such ways as I could, our gratitude for the great kindness rendered to the living and to the dead in the years so long gone by. I gladly record this as an instance of unselfish kindness all too rare in a world like this.

It was in the sultry heat of summer that our great loss occurred, and the oppressive weather seemed to increase the burden of our sorrow. I well remember the desolation which settled down over the home on the evening of that first sorrowful day. To add to the gloom, the storm-clouds gathered darkly. The picture is forever printed in my memory. The father and his little motherless flock were alone in the upper chamber. The rain fell in torrents, the thunder crashed, and every flash of lightning lit up the surrounding country and showed the tall row of poplars in the distant lane, standing stiff and straight against the stormy sky. No wonder that my father gave way to the grief he could no longer control, and the children mingled their tears and sobs with his in unutterable sorrow. The funeral service was held in the Methodist Episcopal church, which was filled with friends who loved and honored my mother in life and sincerely mourned her death. A funeral sermon was preached by her pastor, Rev. M. N. Olmstead, from Acts xxvi, 8, — "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" — in which the sorrowing family were led for comfort to the glorious certainty of the resurrection; and afterwards the sad procession took its way to the cemetery on the hillside. The little children with their black bonnets and frocks were a pathetic picture which appealed to the sympathy of every heart. The last solemn words were said, and we left her there to the peaceful rest of those who sleep in Jesus. The inscription on the stone above her resting-place — "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord" — was never more fitly applied.

The months passed on, and life resumed its usual course, but the painful vacancy was sadly felt in the family. A housekeeper was obtained who did what she could to fill the dreadful void, and our faithful Lucinda remained at her post. But there was no real harmony, and the children began to show the need of a mother's care and love. In this dilemma my father's thoughts were turned, as was natural, towards some one who might fill the important place, and in February, 1849, he married Mrs. Sarah G. H. Merritt. She was the daughter of one of the old and excellent families of the town, and had been for years a friend of my father and mother, and belonged to the same church. She was married when quite young to Mr. James Merritt, a young man of much promise, and went with him to Spring Hill, Alabama, where they were both engaged in teaching. In little more than a year he died, leaving her a widow before the birth of her first child, which occurred soon after. Her adopted sister had married Mr. Rush Tuller, a merchant in good business at Spring Hill, and with them she found a home and all needed sympathy and help in this time of trial. She was a woman of strong character and most indomitable energy, and rising above her sorrow, she bravely set herself to the task of earning a support for herself and her child. She remained in her position as teacher till her son was old enough to be left, and then coming north she left him in the care of her mother and grandmother, and returned to take up her work. She was a woman of very attractive personality and pleasant manners, vivacious and entertaining in conversation, and though she had not been without opportunities to change her situation, she remained a widow about ten years. Such was the person whom my father brought to us as our new mother, and to make us happy again. There were no relatives to interfere or to make unpleasant comparisons, and we received her with love and confidence, gladly yielding to her the respect and obedience we had been accustomed to give to our own mother, and so the family life flowed on harmoniously. It was no light task she had undertaken, to train a family of five children, and she addressed herself to it with her accustomed energy and courage. She identified herself fully with the family, and made our interests her own. She endeavored faithfully to improve our manners, to teach us to have confidence in ourselves, and to develop the best that was in us, and in every way to promote the best interests of us all.

She brought with her as members of our family, her son, a boy of nine years, and her mother. It might have been a question whether the new elements would mingle harmoniously with the old, but in this case they certainly did. We were delighted with the idea of a new brother, and he and my brother Joseph, who was near his age, became and always continued real brothers in heart. They were devotedly attached to each other, and were inseparable till my brother's death. Her mother, Mrs. D. G. Humphrey, was a lady of refinement and intelligence. Though delicate in health and nervously weak, she bore with commendable patience the noise of children, and the rushing life of such a large family, which was a great contrast to the quietness of her former life. We rejoiced in the acquisition of a grandma, as we had no remembrance of our own. She was an honored member of our family for many years, and as many of her tastes and sentiments were similar to my own, we were much together and enjoyed each other's society.

The schools in our town were very unsatisfactory, and when I reached the age of fifteen it was thought that some better advantages should be given me. Accordingly, I was sent to Wilbraham Academy, one of the oldest and best schools under Methodist auspices in all that region. I was to room with my friend, Miss Mary Weston, of Simsbury, but as she was not quite ready when the term began, I had to begin my experience alone. I was taken by my father and mother in a carriage to Wilbraham, a distance of about thirty miles. I was full of anticipation, and all was well as long as they were with me, but I shall never forget the heart-sinking which overwhelmed me when they left me the next day. When I settled down at evening in my little bare room alone, I could not keep the tears from falling as I thought of the pleasant home circle, and heartily wished myself among them. The school buildings were in sharp contrast to the beautiful and nicely adapted appointments of most of the schools and colleges of to-day. They were plain to severity, and some of them showed marks of years of hard usage. The halls and rooms of our dormitory were uncarpeted. Each little room was furnished with a bed with dark chintz spread, a small study table, two wooden chairs, a little box stove for burning wood, and a triangular board fastened in the corner, with a white muslin curtain, for a wash-stand, with a small bookcase above it. These, with a small mirror, completed the furniture, and dreary enough it looked to me on that sad evening. But with the young, though "weeping may endure for a night, joy cometh in the morning," and as my room-mate soon came, and I began to be acquainted with the students and interested in my studies, I was very happy. The two years I spent there were among the happiest and most profitable of my life. My sister Susan joined me there the second year, and afterward my brother Joseph. He was also sent later to a school for boys in Norwich, Connecticut, and Susan afterwards attended a private school in Milford, Connecticut. My sisters Annie and Julia were educated in the Hartford schools. Annie also studied music at Music Vale Seminary, Connecticut. Brother James Merritt studied with a private tutor, Mr. T. G. Grassie, of Amherst College.

It was the wish of my father that Joseph should have a college education, but though he had a very bright mind, and was very literary in his tastes, and himself a good writer, his choice was strongly for a mechanical training. Accordingly, he was placed with the firm of Lincoln Bros. of Hartford to learn the business of a machinist, and afterwards worked with Woodruff & Beach of the same city. He became an expert in the business, and some of the finest work was entrusted to him.

I should mention here the birth of two other children who were most welcome additions to the family circle — George Bickford Davey, named for the business partners, who was born March 18, 1852, and Sarah Jennette, born October 26, 1857.

The year 1857 was one of severe financial crisis. Business of all kinds was almost at a stand-still, and hundreds of workmen were everywhere discharged. The younger men of course were the first to go, and both Joseph and James, being unemployed, resolved to set off for the West and take any chance that offered. After a short experience as farmers' help, they both obtained schools in Illinois. This, however, continued but a short time, as business revived, and Joseph came home and took a position as machinist in the factory. James remained West, and was with his uncle Humphrey's family in Quincy most of the time till he settled later on a farm of his own.

That year was also marked by deep and extensive religious interest, and both brothers became Christians during that year. So all of our family were united in their religious life, as in all other things. In December, 1859, a sad accident cast its dark shadow over us. My father's factory was destroyed by fire. It was about 8 A. M. My father was preparing to go to Hartford, and I was standing by him near a window, when suddenly a sheet of flame shot from beneath the eaves of the factory, lifting the roof, and instantly the wooden building was enveloped in flames. The alarm and excitement were intense. A crowd soon collected, and every effort was made to check the fire and to save those in danger. But the explosion had done its deadly work, and eight of the girls employed were instantly killed, while others were rescued with great difficulty and were badly burned. My brother Joseph, who was at that time employed in the machine department, found himself almost without warning buried beneath a mass of falling timbers, while flames and smoke poured in all about him. He managed to extricate himself, and made a brave dash for his life. Carrying the window with him, he plunged into the race-way of the water-wheel, and so escaped, though terribly burned. The sad occurrence shrouded the town in gloom. The funeral of the eight unfortunate girls was an event long to be remembered. The company did everything in its power to care for the sufferers, and to help the afflicted families, bearing all expenses and erecting a monument to the dead.

My brother lingered through months of terrible suffering. For some time his life was despaired of, but at last, by the blessing of God on the efforts of the most skilful physicians, and with good nursing, he slowly recovered. His nervous system, however, had received a shock from which he never fully recovered. As mother was not at all well at that time, most of the day nursing fell to me, while kind friends freely offered their services for the nights. It was a long and trying experience and was followed for me with quite a serious illness, but I always rejoiced in the privilege of ministering to him in this time of greatest need.

In the autumn of 1860 occurred the exciting political campaign which resulted in the election of Abraham Lincoln as President of the United States. I need not describe here the gathering of the clouds nor the bursting of the storm of civil war, whose mutterings had long been heard in the distance. My brother was elected a member of the Connecticut Legislature for 1861, and, though the youngest member, he was very popular and made a fine record as a speaker on the floor of the House. The war was the absorbing topic of the time. Energetic measures were used to raise troops in response to the call of the President. A committee of the legislature, of which my brother was one, was appointed for this purpose. He threw himself into the cause of his country with all the ardor of his nature. As he labored to induce others to enlist, the conviction grew upon him that he must go himself, or he could not ask others to do so, and when the news of the disaster at Bull Run filled the country with dismay, the question was settled for him. Duty called and he must go. The company of young men he had raised chose him for its Captain, and in November, 1861, leaving his home and promising business prospects, he with his company, Co. H, joined the Twelfth Connecticut regiment, which was soon encamped at Hartford for drill. His health was far from strong, and our family physician declared he should never have consented to his going, but he passed the examination and was accepted. He was very popular with his men, and they were ready to do and dare anything with him.

The regiment was encamped at Hartford for the most of the winter, and in the spring was ordered to join Gen. Butler in his expedition against New Orleans. Before the departure, my brother was presented with a beautiful sword and sash by his fellow-townsmen, as a testimonial of their appreciation of his bravery. They left Hartford Feb. 26, 1862. The ship was greatly crowded, and the voyage was made with many discomforts, but on March 8 they reached Ship Island, where they were encamped for some weeks. They were not ordered up to New Orleans until just after the taking of the city, much to the disappointment of the young Captain, who was ambitious to see a little of actual warfare. They were stationed at Carrollton just above the city. The situation was low and unhealthy, and my brother, who was greatly weakened by an attack of dysentery while at Ship Island, was poorly able to resist the malaria of the region. He felt his danger, and wrote home that if he felt it would be honorable, he should be tempted to resign and come home. But as the young men he had influenced to enlist had not the privilege of resigning, he could not feel that he ought to leave them. He was attacked by typhoid fever soon after the hot weather became intense. He was ill a few days in his tent, but as he grew worse, he was removed to the regimental hospital, a large house near the camp, where he had comfortable quarters and excellent care. Kind comrades stood about his bed, anticipating with brotherly kindness his every want. But the most skilful surgeons and faithful nurses were powerless to save him. His system was too much weakened to resist the disease, and after a short illness he passed quietly away on the afternoon of Saturday, June 21, exchanging the scenes of strife for the land of everlasting peace.

The sad news was flashed over the wires, carrying the deepest sorrow to the home he had so lately left. The family gathered and waited in silent grief for further particulars. A letter from his friend and First Lieutenant, George H. Hanks of Hartford, soon told the sad story. He gave full particulars of his Captain's last hours, and spoke of a conversation they had just before his sickness, in which they mutually promised that in case of the death of either, the survivor should take charge of his effects and inform his friends, and said that he had requested that if he should fall, his body should be sent home to Simsbury. Lieut. Hanks says, "I promised, and to the extent of my ability I have carried out his request, assisted by some of his townsmen and personal friends who were at his bedside at the last hour. The body is sent by steamer McLellan, in a cask of spirits, carefully fastened in a sitting posture, dressed in full military uniform, and when it was adjusted he looked so natural, one might imagine it was our dear Captain sitting asleep in his chair, with his hands folded across his lap. But alas! it is the long, silent sleep of death. Dear afflicted friends, it is the saddest duty of my life, thus to return to you him who a few months since took leave of you so buoyant and hopeful, and many a tear have I shed while performing it. Possessing but few faults and many virtues, generous to a fault, and honorable to the extreme, he was universally esteemed and beloved by the entire regiment."

On arriving at New York, the body was transferred to a metallic casket and sent to Simsbury. It was met at Plainville by a delegation of the citizens, who with saddened hearts received him who had recently gone out from them brave and bright and hopeful. The sad home-coming was almost overwhelming to the family. They gathered sorrowfully to mingle their tears for his early death. The body was taken to the Methodist Episcopal church, but the public service was held in the Congregational church, as the other was too small to accommodate the numbers who wished to attend. The large church was filled with a throng of citizens of our own and neighboring towns. Comrades, friends, companions, the Masonic fraternity, all came to mingle their tears and sympathies with the family and relatives, for the brave young life so early sacrificed, and to do honor to him whom they all loved and lamented so sincerely. The funeral discourse was given by the former pastor and dear friend of the family, Rev. Ichabod Simmons of New Haven, from the text, II Timothy iv: 3 — "A good soldier." It was a beautiful and appropriate tribute to the departed, with words of hope and comfort for those who mourned him so truly. After the service he was borne tenderly from the Methodist church to his last rest in the hillside cemetery where he had requested to be laid beside his beloved mother. The solemn burial service of the Masonic order closed the services, and so the second great sorrow settled down upon our home.

My brother was a young man of fine natural endowment and a most genial disposition. He was greatly beloved at home, and popular everywhere, especially among the young people, with whom he was always a leader. Mr. Simmons said of him at his funeral: "It is a part of my mission to-day to say that a young man of promise has fallen. An earnest and close debater, a great reader of history, with a good memory, and an imagination sparkling with poetry and beauty, he would have stood high among the men of his day. He was a close thinker and reasoner, but never anchored outside the clear, deep waters of the Bible. He was keenly sensitive to the ridiculous, and on occasions could be very sarcastic, yet his tenderness of feeling prevented his wit from wounding the most sensitive. His nature was cast in a merry mould, his wit was original, and in the social circle he was the happy pivot on which the pleasant moments swung. The death of our friend is a general loss to this community. He was a representative spirit among you. As a citizen you had already learned to rank him high in your esteem. His large circle of young friends are especially called to mourn. A bright light has gone out among you."

The affliction fell with crushing force upon my father. His heart was almost broken, and it was years before he recovered from the blow.

The events which now came into our family life were of a more cheerful nature. The first break in the home circle was occasioned by my marriage to Rev. John W. Dodge of Newburyport, Massachusetts, which occurred November 7, 1860. Mr. Dodge was a graduate of Amherst and Andover, and had at that time accepted a call to be pastor of the Congregational church of Gardiner, Maine. Our acquaintance began by his coming to Simsbury, in November, 1855, to teach a select school. His friend, Mr. T. G. Grassie of Amherst, had taught it the year before with great acceptance and was engaged to return, and as our family were greatly interested in him, my mother had promised to take him as a boarder. He was taken very ill during the fall term of college, and being unable to fulfil his engagement, he sent his friend as substitute. So apparently trivial events often change the whole current of our lives. We became engaged during that winter, which was Mr. Dodge's junior year in college. I attended his graduation in August, 1857, accompanied by my cousin, Sarah Jane Tuller, and visited his home in Newburyport in the summer of 1859. Though hampered by delicate health and small means, he completed his theological course at Andover in 1860, and our marriage took place as soon as he secured a suitable parish.

The first wedding in the family was a great event, and no pains were spared to make it a delightful occasion. It was an evening

wedding, with about fifty guests. My sister Susan was bridesmaid, and was attended by my husband's brother Austin as best man. Our dresses were similar, of figured grey silk, mine being trimmed with white silk and lace, and I wore a bunch of white Japonicas. The ceremony was performed by our friend and pastor, Rev. I. Simmons, assisted by Rev. Allen McLean, the blind pastor of the Congregational church, to whom I was much attached.[1] A wedding supper was served, followed by a pleasant social evening. Mr. Dodge's mother and brother were the only friends of his who could be present. The good-byes were said early the next day and we set our faces toward our new home. After several pleasant days in Boston, we went to Newburyport, only to be met by the sad tidings that Mr. Dodge's father had died suddenly on the very day of our marriage, and that they were delaying the funeral till our arrival. It was a sad home-coming and clouded the brightness of those first days. We remained in Newburyport several weeks, and Mr. Dodge prepared his first sermon as pastor, in the study of his old friend and minister, Dr. Dimmick, who had recently died.

We were most kindly received by the people at Gardiner. Mr. Dodge was ordained December sixth, 1860. The sermon was preached by Dr. Chickering of Portland, and the ordaining prayer was offered by the venerable David Thurston. We found a pleasant home for ourselves, and my father and mother and Mother Dodge came to assist in our going to housekeeping. Our outfit would seem simple indeed to the young people of this day, but love and content abode with us, and we were happy. Our first great sorrow and disappointment came in the loss of a little one to whose coming we had looked forward with joy. This was followed by months of weakness and ill-health for me. My husband's health also gave way in the spring, making necessary a long summer vacation. Six months of this were spent in tenting on Salisbury beach, which resulted in great gain to us both. Our three years' pastorate in Gardiner was pleasant and successful, but a second break in health, in the fall of 1863, made a resignation necessary, and we came to Newburyport to spend the winter with Mother Dodge. In December, through the kindness of his friend, Captain Robert Bayley, my husband was offered a voyage in one of his vessels to the West Indies. He sailed for Porto Rico in the Edward Lameyer, commanded by Captain Charles Bayley, and received much benefit and enjoyment from the six weeks' trip.

After coming home he supplied for some time at Northboro, Massachusetts, and in the autumn he received a call to Gardner, Massachusetts, which he did not accept. Later, however, he went to Yarmouth, Massachusetts, where he supplied for six months for Rev. J. B. Clark, who was with the Christian Commission in the Army of Virginia. We found a pleasant home with Mr. Clark's mother in the parsonage, and greatly enjoyed this experience, and as it proved it prepared the way for our chief life work. On the return of Mr. Clark, in July, 1865, we went to Hampton, New Hampshire, where my husband was immediately called to the vacant pulpit of the Congregational church. A pleasant pastorate of three years there was followed in 1868 by a call to succeed Mr. Clark, who had resigned as pastor of the Yarmouth church. During our second year in Hampton we had adopted a little girl, whom we called Mary Webster. She was at this time nearly three years old.

We broke up our Hampton home in the cold, dark, December days, and I shall never forget how delightful the change seemed to the warmth and cheer of the cosy Yarmouth parsonage, where we spent so many happy years. A pastorate of twenty-three years followed. The union between pastor and people was remarkable. Nothing occurred to ruffle the harmony during all those years. The best of our life work was done in Yarmouth, and it was amply rewarded by the love and confidence of our people. A new church edifice was built the year after our coming; and though the strain of feeling was very great in consequence of a change of location, and threatened at one time to divide the society entirely, the crisis was safely passed with the loss of only two or three families, and the attachment of all to the pastor who had led them safely through the conflict remained unshaken.

In the summer of 1871 we adopted a boy of nine months. He was a sweet and pleasant child, and for several years was a source of much comfort. But as he grew older seeds of evil all unsuspected began to spring up, and resulted later in bitter disappointment.

On the fourteenth of November, 1875, our dear daughter, Susan Webster, was born. It was a boon we had not dared to hope for. Our home was radiant with joy. The people showered congratulations, and gifts poured in to attest the general joy at the advent of the parsonage baby. Our Thanksgiving Day that year was one to be remembered.

This happy year was followed by one of severe trial. My husband's health, never very strong, broke down entirely, and a long season of complete nervous prostration followed. He kept his bed for months, and at last rallied very slowly, appearing again in his pulpit after an interval of nine months. The love of our people stood the trying test bravely. They continued the salary and supplied the pulpit, and were unwearied in their kindness and sympathy.

In the spring of 1882 we had the long-desired privilege of a journey to Europe. Our people granted us a vacation of six months, and the means were furnished by my father. We left our little Susie with my sister Susan, the other children remaining with friends in Yarmouth. It was a season of great enjoyment and profit. We visited England, Scotland, France, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, and Italy. Returning, we spent some pleasant weeks with friends in London and Cornwall, and came home greatly benefited in mind and body.

On the 22d of April, 1884, Mother Dodge passed to the heavenly rest. Her home had been with us for many years. She had been failing perceptibly for some time, and disease of the heart developed, which caused her death, after an illness of a few days. Her funeral was attended in Yarmouth by Rev.

Bernard Paine of Sandwich, and afterward she was taken to her old home in Newburyport, and a service was held at the North Church, conducted by Rev. Mr. Mills. She was then laid to rest in Highland Cemetery, by the side of her husband. She was a woman of strong character and large heart, and her life was full of devotion and self-sacrifice for her family, as well as usefulness in the church.

In the spring of 1889 we took a very delightful trip to California, visiting the famed Yosemite valley, and spending some time very pleasantly with my brother James's family in Oakland. Soon after our return I was seized with a very severe nervous illness which centered in my head, causing terrible attacks of vertigo. It resulted in shattering my health completely, and was followed by ten years of invalidism. The next year my husband again suffered a serious breakdown, followed by another long season of nervous prostration. It was the result, in part, of over-exertion in revival services, joined with unusual labors in connection with the quarter-millennial celebration of the town of Yarmouth. As his strength slowly returned, he attempted to take up his work again, with the aid of an assistant; but it soon became evident that he was unequal to the task, and he was reluctantly obliged to resign the office of pastor. He was dismissed October 20, 1891. We removed to Newburyport November 7 of the same year, and made a home for ourselves there on land previously purchased, adjoining my husband's old home. We occupied our new house for the first time June 2, 1892. It has proved a comfort and joy to us, and we have both greatly improved in health.

I cannot close this chapter of our history without making special mention of our dear friends, Dr. and Mrs. Eldridge of Yarmouth, who played such an important part in our life there, whose friendship and sympathy were so constant and helpful during all the years, and whose frequent and well-chosen gifts added so much to the brightness of our home life, especially of the great kindness of Dr. Eldridge in providing a night nurse at his own expense all through my husband's first long illness. They have both passed to their reward, but their memory is a treasure to us. Our people also manifested their love and appreciation by numerous and valuable gifts. A full china dinner and tea service were given us at our china wedding, and an elegant set of silver forks and a fine cake-basket at our silver anniversary. A costly and beautiful silver loving-cup was their parting gift to my husband. It was appropriately inscribed with the text of his last sermon, "God is Love," significant of the character of his whole life work. The girls of my mission circle also presented a silver tray and tea service to me. These, and innumerable tokens of love scattered all along the way, form a chain of adamant to bind our hearts to the dear friends of those happy days, many of whom have gone before us to the heavenly home.

In April, 1896, Susie having left Wellesley College, her father took her abroad. They were accompanied by her friend and classmate, Miss Effie A. Work, of Akron, Ohio. My husband's illness on the way obliged them to cut short their trip and return home, and another long illness followed. He has now recovered, and my own health having greatly improved, we now gladly "thank God and take courage."

After an interval of some years, caused by returning ill-health, I take up again the story of our family life. Sadly enough, the first record must be of the great sorrow which came to us in the years 1903 and 1904. On the morning of August 8, 1903, my husband was taken very suddenly ill with an attack of congestion of the brain, while standing by his library table. He passed a day of great suffering and semi-unconsciousness, and at night was carried up to his bed, from which he only arose after months of utter prostration. He rallied at last very slowly, after an alarming relapse, and so far recovered as to be able to come down-stairs and walk about the house and mingle with the family at the table and otherwise socially. He was able to read a little and join in conversation, and greatly enjoyed his daily drives. On the evening of June 14 he was suddenly seized with a hemorrhage of the brain as he was retiring for the night, and became entirely unconscious. Every possible effort was made to arouse him, but all was unavailing. He lingered unconscious until the evening of June 17, when he passed quietly away, and entered into the "rest that remaineth for the people of God." My daughter Susan was absent from home, having gone to Simsbury, to act as bridesmaid at the wedding of her cousin, Susie Alice Ensign. She returned as speedily as possible, only to find that her father was unable to recognize her. She was with him at the last, holding his hand in hers as he passed over the dark river. The funeral services were held in the North Church on Tuesday, June 21. Prayer was offered at the house by Rev. Doctor Cutler of Ipswich, a lifelong friend. The procession entering the church was led by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Newcomb, reading the selections beginning, "I am the resurrection and the life." The music was by the Temple Male Quartet, who sang the hymns, "Rock of Ages" and "Abide with Me." Remarks followed by Rev. Dr. Cutler and Rev. Bartlett Weston, both intimate friends, also a few appropriate remarks by the pastor. The burial was at Oak Hill, the committal service being read by Dr. Hovey, and our dear one was laid to rest in a quiet, beautiful spot overlooking the meadows and hills he had loved so well. A granite monument in the form of a St. Martin's cross, bearing the inscriptions, "Resurgam," and "I am the resurrection and the life," marks his resting-place. Beautiful flowers in profusion were sent by relatives and friends and by different organizations in the city in which he had been prominent in token of the love and esteem in which he was held. The Yarmouth church, where most of his life work was done, sent two representatives, and an elegant wreath of ferns and orchids.

The second marriage in the family was that of my sister Susan. She was married July 21, 1863, to Ralph H. Ensign, a son of one of the oldest and best families of the town. Their friendship began in early youth, and was fitly crowned by this most happy marriage. The wedding took place in the Methodist Episcopal church in Simsbury, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Arza Hill, then pastor of the church. It was in the early days of the Civil War, not long after the death of my brother Joseph. The family were in mourning at the time, and the bride made no change, but was married in a gown of white crêpe. The reception at the home consisted only of the two families, and as it was a time of alarms, the men of the family had been called in different directions, so that only the two fathers were present. The wedding was followed by a bridal trip to Niagara.

Mr. and Mrs. Ensign made their home in Simsbury, occupying the house on the hill now occupied by their daughter, Mrs. Robert Darling. Mr. Ensign was in the fuse business with my father, and soon became a member of the firm. He has been its head ever since my father's death, and it has steadily prospered under his leadership. Their present home, "Trevarno," was built in 1881, and they have lived there since that time. They have travelled a great deal, especially in England and France. Their children: Sarah Isabel, who died at the age of four years, Joseph Ralph, Susan Alice, Julia Whiting, and Edward William, who died at the age of three. They also reared to manhood a child, Ralph Newbert, whom they took into their family shortly after the death of their youngest child, Edward.

Next in order was my sister Julia, who was married on May 29, 1886, to Rev. Charles H. Buck of Neponset, Massachusetts, at that time pastor of the Simsbury Methodist church. He was a graduate of Wesleyan University and a young man of much promise, which has been abundantly fulfilled in his ministerial career. They were married in the Methodist church by my father and Rev. Mr. Simmons, and left at once on their wedding journey. On their return they removed to Westville, Connecticut, where Mr. Buck had just been appointed pastor. Since then, Mr. Buck has filled many of the most important appointments in the New York East Conference, serving large churches in Brooklyn, Stamford, Bristol, New Britain, and others. He has always been greatly beloved and appreciated by his people and urged to return to them, particularly at Bristol, where he had three pastorates. When he retired from the active ministry in 1900, he was presented by his people there with a magnificent loving cup, as well as other tokens of their affection. Mr. Buck had previously been given the degree of D. D., and he was Treasurer of Wesleyan University for a number of years after his retirement, besides holding other prominent positions. The Bucks have always been great travellers, both in this country and abroad, and spent a year travelling in the far East, in 1900–01, before settling in a home of their own. On their return, Dr. Buck was for a time Presiding Elder in the New York East Conference and also pastor of a large church in Brooklyn. In 1903 they built a beautiful Colonial house at Yonkers, New York, on land overlooking the Hudson River, where they now live, having their daughter and her interesting family near them.

They adopted two children: William Henry and Sarah Humphrey.

On the 19th of October, 1866, my sister Annie was married to L. Stoughton Ellsworth of Windsor, Connecticut. He came of the straitest of Puritan stock, including the historic Ellsworths and Edwardses of Windsor, and has most creditably borne up the reputation of those families. The ceremony took place in the Methodist church and was performed by his brother-in-law, Rev. C. H. Buck, who was assisted by Rev. J. W. Dodge. They resided for a short time in Windsor, Connecticut, after which they removed in April, 1867, to Oakland, California, where Mr. Ellsworth had charge of a branch of the fuse business, which had been established there. They remained there only a few years. Two children were born to them there, but both died very young, which hastened their return to Connecticut, in the autumn of 1871. They settled on a fine farm in East Weatogue, but in 1889 they built and occupied their present residence in Hopmeadow, and Mr. Ellsworth also became a member of my father's firm. Their children: Lucy Stoughton, George Toy, Annie Stoughton, Henry Edwards, John Stoughton.

My brother George was married October 6, 1875, to Mary Seymour of Granby. They he had three pastorates. When he retired from the active ministry in 1909, he was presented by his people there with a magnificent loving cup, as well as other tokens of their affection. Mr. Buck had previously been given the degree of D. D., and he was Treasurer of Wesleyan University for a number of years after his retirement, besides holding other prominent positions. The Bucks have always been great travellers, both in this country and abroad, and spent a year travelling in the far East, in 1900-01, before settling in a home of their own. My brother George was married October 6, 1875, to Mary Seymour of Granby. They were married at the bride's home by Rev. C. H. Buck, and took a wedding trip to Canada. They lived afterwards in my father's family, as George was associated in the business. There were no living children.

My sister Jennie was married April 19, 1876, to Mr. Charles E. Curtiss of Simsbury. They lived for a short time with Mr. Curtiss' parents, and then removed to Westfield, Massachusetts. Mr. Curtiss was afterwards taken into my father's business, and they lived in the house adjoining his on the hill. Their children: Joseph Toy and Grace Gilbert.

Having been divorced from Mr. Curtiss, my sister Jennie married Mr. Charles A. Ensign, December 2, 1890. They settled in a very pleasant home in Tariffville, where they have since lived, with the exception of a short residence in Ottawa, Canada.[1] No children.

On November 7, 1873, our grandmother, Mrs. D. G. Humphrey, who had long been an honored and valued member of our family, died at the age of 81. She was a very intelligent, and interesting woman, and was loved and mourned by us all.

My brother George died March 25, 1881, after a long and trying illness, which eventually weakened him in mind as well as body.

My stepmother, Sarah G. H. Toy, died September 24, 1881. She had a long illness, resulting from a shock of apoplexy which partially paralyzed her and ended in softening of the brain. I was with her when she passed away, and closed her eyes for the last long sleep. She was a brilliant and interesting woman, a devoted wife, and a kind mother to the children whose care she undertook.

After her death my father married Mary Seymour Toy, April 11, 1882. One child was born to them, Josephine Seymour, born January 19, 1884. They continued to live in the house on the hill until some years after my father's death, which occurred when Josephine was three years old. As she grew older and the question of a suitable education for her arose, Mrs. Toy removed to

Hartford, and the old house was closed. It was later divided into two parts; the back portion was moved away and used as a small tenement for the employees of the factory, while the rest was rented as it stood. Later, in 1904, it also was removed to its present position just back of the old site, where Mr. Joseph Ensign's house now stands. Mrs. Toy and Josephine settled in a very pleasant home in Hartford, and the latter attended Miss Barbour's school, and later went for two years to Miss Porter's school in Farmington. On June 5, 1907, she was married to Mr. Frederick Starr Collins, a son of one of the old and prominent families of Hartford. The marriage was a very happy one, especially as Josephine and her husband still remained with her mother.[1]

On the second of April, 1887, my father

[1] On July 20, 1909, five months after my mother's death, Josephine Toy Collins died very suddenly at her home in Hartford, leaving a baby daughter, little Josephine Toy, only two weeks old. Her early death was a terrible blow to her young husband and to her mother, to whom she had always been a close companion. Her short life was sweet and lovely, and a host of sorrowing friends mourned its early close.—S. W. D.

entered into rest. He had been growing rather more feeble for some time. He was very ill during most of the winter, and was confined to his bed a great part of the time. His trouble was of such a nature that it was impossible for him to lie down, which was very distressing, but he bore his sufferings with great fortitude and patience. He improved as the spring came on, and was able to walk about the house, and had even been out of doors once or twice. I had not been able to go to see him during the winter, but on the last of March I went to Simsbury. He was occupied by business on the first day of April, so that I did not see him, but on the morning of the second, I went in a driving snowstorm to see him. He was just coming out of his room as I came in. I was greatly struck by his altered and feeble appearance, but he received me cheerfully, and we talked pleasantly together for an hour. His physician, Dr. R. A. White, came in at that time, and suggested that he be given a little liquid nourishment. As he attempted to swallow it, there was a struggle, and he threw back his head, groaning heavily. I took his head in my arms, and in an instant he had passed away. We laid him quietly down, and even amid our tears, it was a relief to see him lying peacefully after his winter's sufferings. The funeral took place in the Methodist church. His pastor, Rev. C. W. Lyon, officiated, assisted by Rev. C. P. Croft. The procession passed up the aisle, preceded by the pastor reading the beautiful words of the burial service, "I am the resurrection and the life." The choir sang "Servant of God, well done," and "It is well with my soul." Mr. Lyon preached from the text, "I have fought a good fight . . . I have kept the faith," and the choir sang, "Thy will be done."

Two wreaths were laid upon the casket, one of white callas, and in the center was a sheaf of wheat. The church was thronged with friends and neighbors who came to pay their last tribute of love and respect. Over one hundred of the employees of the firm were present. The bearers were S. C. Eno, D. B. McLean, A. G. Case, Erwin Chase, J. N. Race, and A. S. Chapman. So he was carried forth from the church of which he had so long been a pillar, and laid to rest on the hillside, in the midst of his family who had gone before. So closed a long, honored and useful life. "The memory of the just is blessed."

THE STORY OF THE TOYS

I WISH to preface this memorial by a little sketch of Cornwall, especially those parts of it most nearly connected with our family history. I have gathered the materials for it from a little book on Cornwall, by Mr. Tregellas.

The long coast-line of Cornwall, the most southern and western county of England, has been, like Italy, compared in shape to a Wellington boot, the iron heel of which is the mass of serpentine rock which forms the southern point of the Lizard, and the foot that part which lies between Mounts Bay and Land's End. The instep is at St. Ives Bay, and the body of the boot constitutes the main portion of the county, the highest part toward the eastern end forming the Bodmin moors. Along the northern coast, the mural cliffs, against which the Atlantic rollers forever break, are in marked contrast to the tamer and more sylvan scenery of the south and west shores; while across the low-lying lands between St. Ives and Mounts Bay the sea often threaten to meet in the spring tides.

The climate of Cornwall, owing to its situation, is so remarkable as to deserve notice. The month of January at Penzance is as warm as at Florence or Madrid, and July is as cool as at St. Petersburg. There is scarcely a country in the world with a climate so mild and equable.

The people are "ardent and vivacious, self-reliant and versatile." It is no uncommon thing for a Cornishman to build his own house, make his own shoes, be both fisherman and miner, and, possibly, small shopkeeper besides; and wherever the Cornish miner emigrates, he is pretty sure to take the lead in enterprise and danger.

Wilkie Collins says: "As a body of men they are industrious, intelligent, sober, and orderly, neither soured by hard work, nor depressed by harsher privations"; and the old poet Taylor, in 1649, writes: "Cornwall is the compleate and repleate Home of Abundance, for high, churlish hills and affable, courteous people. The country hath its share of huge stones, mighty rocks, noble

Many curious old customs linger in Cornwall, among them the ceremony of "cutting the neck," or last few ears of corn at harvest time, the lighting of bonfires on the hills at St. John's Eve, and the "furry" or Flora dance at Helston, on the eighth of May. Among the peculiar dishes of the Cornish cuisine, prominent is the pasty, the almost universal dinner of the working class. It is a savory compound of meat and potatoes, inclosed in a crescent-shaped crust; but one must be a Cornishman to appreciate this dish thoroughly. The variety of pies is truly marvelous. It has been said that the devil himself would be put into a pie if he were caught in Cornwall. Most of them are richly saturated with clotted cream, a real Cornish dainty, which is very popular, as are also Cornish seed-cakes.

From time immemorial Cornwall has had a leading part in the mineral industries of England. Mines of tin, copper, lead, and zinc abound, and have been the chief source of revenue to the county. They give abundant employment to the laboring class, and men, women, and even children are freely employed in various ways about the mines. Since 1870 the mining industries have declined; the mines have been less productive, and the great discoveries of ore in this and other countries have greatly reduced prices and scattered the Cornish miners over the world.

The fisheries of Cornwall have been another very important industry, especially the mackerel and pilchard fishing. The pilchard is a very delicious fish, similar to a herring, and is found almost exclusively on the Cornish coast.

Cornwall abounds in interesting antiquities, and many of these are claimed to be almost as old as the granite rocks and cliffs of which they are composed. They are relics of the early Britons, — remains of villages, various sorts of sepulchral and memorial stones, and also some that were associated with ancient religious rites. Some of these, such as the "holed stones," have given rise to many superstitions among the common folk, who have been in the habit of dragging invalids through the orifices in the hope of curing them. There are also "cliff castles," especially at Land's End and at other points on the coast, — retreats of the native tribes from enemies, — and also earth-work forts on elevated sites throughout the country. The early Christian antiquities include churches and priories and the oratories or small chapels, frequently associated with a Baptistery or holy well. Some of these are as early as the fifth century. There is also an unusual number of crosses. As to their uses an ancient manuscript says: "For this reason ben crosses by ye way, that when folk passynge see ye croysses they shoulde thynke on Hym that deyed on ye croysse, and worshyppe Hym above althyng." They were also sometimes erected to guide and guard the way to the church, and sometimes for the beautiful custom of leaving alms on the crosses for poor wayfarers. The crosses were formerly far more numerous than now, but recently some of them have been rescued from doing duty as gate-posts and the like, to be re-erected in the churchyards. There are also inscribed stones, such as the Camborne altar-slab, and others.

Of the towns of Cornwall, almost all have some interest, ancient or modern. Truro has recently become the episcopal town of the county; a fine cathedral has been built, and the Bishop has his residence there. Falmouth, at the mouth of the Fal, is a comparatively modern town, beautifully situated. Its magnificent and famous harbor has given it considerable commercial importance in former times. One of its chief attractions is Pendennis Castle. It stands on a bold promontory two hundred feet high, on the western side of the harbor. It was one of the works of defense undertaken by Henry VIII, but the enclosure is of the time of Elizabeth. It is an interesting example of the military architecture of the period. During the Civil War, Pendennis Castle played a prominent and interesting part, and was the last but one of the old castles that held out for the King's cause.

A picturesque spot of much interest on the coast is the jutting headland of the Lizard. The serpentine rock of which it is composed is very beautiful when polished. The best time to visit this spot is at low tide on a summer day, after a storm. Its soft yellow sandy beach, its emerald waves, deep rock-pools and gorgeous serpentine cliffs, of green, purple, crimson, and black, are then of astonishing beauty. Passing eastward along the coast, we come to the little town of Marazion, in front of which rises from the strand the far-famed St. Michael's Mount — an isolated, rugged pyramid of granite, about a mile in circumference and two hundred and thirty feet high at the chapel platform. Several Sir John St. Aubyns have successively inherited it since 1860, the date on which they acquired it from a Bassett of Tehidy. The chapel and the hall are the portions most worthy of examination. A few steps below the chapel is a recess called the dungeon; near it, a narrow winding stair leads to the tower. Near the platform are the remains of a stone cresset called St. Michael's Chair, which is supposed to bring good fortune to those that sit in it.

The town of Penzance, "the Holy Headland," is the place of approach to the Land's End — a bold promontory standing out into the sea at the southwestern extremity of England. Its granite cliff-scenery is the finest in Cornwall. The tempest-scarred cliffs, the furious onset of the waves in stormy weather, and the gorgeous sunsets, so frequent at that point, invest Land's End with a deep and almost melancholy grandeur. It is said that Wesley stood upon this point when he wrote the hymn,

> "Lo! on a narrow neck of land
> 'T wixt two unbounded seas I stand."

But the chief interest of Cornwall for our present purpose lies in the town of Camborne on the Cam, or "crooked river." It is one of the great mining centres, and has numerous rich mines, of which the principal is Dolcoath, one of the deepest and most ancient in Cornwall. It is a busy town, built mostly of stone, with nothing of note in the way of architecture. The plain parish church, with its three sharp gables, contains nothing of special interest. It stands in the midst of the churchyard, in which are found many monuments and inscriptions to attract the attention of those who love to recall the past. About three miles to the north is Tehidy, the seat of the Bassetts, with its fine park and gallery containing pictures by Gainsborough, Sir Joshua Reynolds, and Vandyke. In driving to the high bluffs on the north shore it is easy to visit Carn Brea, a rocky headland seven hundred feet above the sea, with picturesque granite blocks piled upon its summit. Here, it is said, was the chief scene of Druid worship; here was the sacrificial rock, in the hollows of which the victim was laid; and here were the granite basins hollowed out to receive his blood. The castle, of Norman origin, was built by Ralph De Pomeroy, and was occupied by a Bassett in the time of Edward IV. There are also here the remains of ancient British earthworks, and "hut circles," and a tall monument to Lord De Dunstanville of Tehidy, erected in 1836.

A point of great interest to us is that Mr. Samuel Davey, the inventor of the safety fuse for blasting and mining, was a native of Camborne, and had his residence there, as did also his partner in business, George Smith, LL.D. Mr. Smith was a man of high character, and great ability as a scholar and writer, and the author of many works of theology and biblical history. Among these are "The Hebrew People" and "The Gentile Nations," which have been accepted as text-books in some theological courses. The other member of the firm was Major John S. Bickford, a man of wealth and influence, and the title of the firm became "Bickford, Smith and Davey." The manufactory was located at Tuckingmill, a village a little distance from Camborne. The business, at first small, has grown and become very successful, and has branches in many parts of Europe and America. The original firm, as represented by its successors, still carries on the business in Tuckingmill.

One of the noteworthy features of the town life is the Saturday market-day. On this day are gathered the people from all the outlying country, with varied products of farm, garden and dairy, as well as wares of all kinds, which are offered for sale in the great market-house of the town.

"Camborne Feast" is a harvest festival answering to our Thanksgiving. It occurs on November 13.

BIRTHPLACE OF JOSEPH TOY

In the little hamlet of Roskear, an outlying village of Camborne, my father, Joseph Toy, was born. The long, low stone cottage, with small windows and overhanging roof, still stands. A narrow drive runs in from the village street, and a low stone wall separates it from the plain yard in front adorned with here and there a shrub or climbing vine. The house is little changed since the large family of children were sheltered under its eaves and played about the yard, and the dear mother spread the simple food on the white table, and sanded the well-scoured floor. My father was born in April, 1808. He was the son of Robert and Ann Hosking Toy. He was the youngest of eight children: John, Robert, Nicholas, William, James, Joseph, and his sisters Mary Ann (Mrs. Sims), and Nanny (Mrs. Granville). His parents were honest, God-fearing people, training their children to a life of industry and integrity, and early leading them into the ways of piety and obedience. Joseph, being a bright, attractive child, and possessing an affectionate nature, was very naturally the pet and darling of the family. While he was quite young his father died suddenly, and as the elder children were mostly married, the home was broken up, and he, with his widowed mother, was received into the family of his brother John, a man of much energy and ability, who afterwards became captain of the West Seaton mine. In a few years his mother, too, entered into rest, leaving her beloved Joseph to the care of his elder brother, and well did that brother and his estimable wife fulfill their trust. The home was full of love and sunshine, and the most tender affection was lavished upon the young brother. My uncle scarcely ever came home without the inquiry, "Where is the dear boy?"

Mrs. Jane Gilbert, my Uncle John's youngest daughter, writes thus of the family. "Their father died when Joseph was a lad, but he was always a great pet with his brothers. I have heard my father tell how when he was going courting Joseph had cried to go with him, and he has taken him many a time. Their mother died when your father was young, and he came to him at our house and continued to live with us until his marriage. So my sisters looked upon him more as a brother than an uncle. I can remember that when the letter came to father announcing your dear mother's death, he wept aloud and said, 'Poor little Joe!' Their mother's maiden name was Ann Davey, and she was born at Nans Nuke Illogan. She was a grand old Christian, a splendid character and handsome. I have always heard her children speak of her with reverence and love. Our grandfather's mother's name was Andrews, and she was born in the parish of Newlyn East."

The circumstances of the family made it necessary that all should share in its support, and, as soon as he was thought capable, my father was put — as were other children of his age — to do such work at the mine as was then almost the only employment open to children. They were set at picking up the ore for wheeling from the opening, and other light work suited to their age, the labor and responsibility being increased as they grew older. The advantages of education for the children of the working classes were few indeed at that day, and where so many mouths were to be fed, but little could be spared for books or schooling. My father early developed a fondness for reading which grew into an earnest thirst for knowledge, leading him to devote much of the time spent by other boys in play to the search for it as for hid treasure.

There was considerable natural musical talent in the family, and, as my father had a sweet voice, he was early taken into the surpliced boy-choir of the parish church, to which one or two of his brothers belonged, though his family were devoted members of the Wesleyan church of Camborne. The beautiful ritual of the church and its impressive services had a refining influence upon the sensitive boy, and the musical training he there received was of much value to him, and gave him much enjoyment in after life. He used to speak with enthusiasm of this experience, and I have often heard him tell of the delight with which the boys would go forth in the frosty air of the Christmas morning to sing carols under the windows of their friends, and how eagerly they would catch the pennies which were thrown from the windows in response to their greeting. The drinking habit of those days was universal, and total abstinence was a thing unknown; and I have heard him say that the good rector, Parson Rogers, would often pat the boys affectionately when they had done particularly well, and say, "You have done well, boys. Now come with me and have a little drop of something warm." His connection with the parish choir was also the means of attracting the notice of some people of influence who were afterwards of much assistance to him.

As he grew older, his interest in education increased greatly, and produced a distaste for the drudgery of his life at the mine. The conviction grew upon him that he was fitted for something better, and while he patiently bided his time, he was diligently improving every opportunity for study. Kind friends soon noticed the boy's struggles, and began to encourage him by lending him books, assisting him in evening studies, and giving him help in every possible way. Prominent

Foreword

This work comprises (with numerous additions) a series of articles originally printed in The Pennsylvania Magazine of History and Biography, volumes II-VII, issued by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania during the years 1878–1883. For the first six generations included in it, it is, genealogically, as complete as the author, with his present knowledge, can make it. Members of later generations are mentioned in footnotes in such numbers, it is believed, as will enable others to trace their lineage from the first progenitor with little difficulty. It is published not merely as the record of a particular family but also as a striking example of the wide diffusion of the blood of an early Swedish settler on the Delaware through descendants of other surnames and other races residing both in the United States and Europe. No attempt has been made to introduce into the text information to be gathered from the recent publication of the Swedish Colonial Society, the most scholarly and comprehensive history of the Swedish settlements on the Delaware written by Dr. Amandus Johnson, to which, therefore, the reader is referred for further enlightenment on that subject.

Philadelphia, St. Olaf's Day, 1913. G. B. K.

THE DESCENDANTS OF JÖRAN KYN, OF NEW SWEDEN.

Jöran Kyn,* one of the earliest European residents upon the river Delaware, and for more than a quarter of a century the chief proprietor of land at Upland, New Sweden, afterwards Chester, Pennsylvania, was born in Sweden about A. D. 1620.† He came to America in company with Governor John Printz, in the ship Fama, which "sailed from Stockholm," narrates Magister John Campanius Holm,‡ a fellow-passenger in the same vessel, "on the 16th of August, 1642," and, after stopping at Dahlehamn, Copenhagen, and Helsingör, left Gottenburg Castle for the "Spanish Sea" (as the Atlantic Ocean was at one time called) "on the 1st of November, at noon." The route pursued by them upon their journey was a long one, adopted, says Acrelius, when "the watery way to the West was not yet well discovered, for fear of the sand banks off Newfoundland." They coasted along Portugal and

* This (under the form of Kijn) is the earliest spelling of the surname met with, and dates from 1668. The older generations of the West New Jersey branches of the family employed the form of Kijhn. Other methods, numbering a dozen, Dutch and English, are mere attempts to render in those languages the sound of the Swedish original. Keen is the first English spelling of the name recorded, occurring as early as 1665, and is the mode adopted by the family to-day. It has the merit of representing a close approach to the ancient sound, besides being of cognate derivation, and yielding a translation of the obsolete old Swedish word. This is more nearly reproduced in sound and meaning by the German Kühn. The Christian name of Jören (or Göran) was frequently written after the Dutch style of Jurian: it was sometimes strangely corrupted, but was never properly anglicized as George.

† Probably not earlier than 1617, or his name should not appear in the list of "Tydable Persons" residing at Upland in 1677 (which excluded those over sixty years of age), nor later than 1628, considering the date of his eldest grandchild's birth.

‡ See Thomas Campanius Holm's Description of New Sweden, translated by Peter S. Du Ponceau, LL.D., and published by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Chapter VI., where quite a detailed account of the voyage is given. The Fama was accompanied by another ship named Svanen, the Swan.

Barbary, and, passing far to the south of the Canary Islands, landed at Antigua, inhabited at that time "by Englishmen and negroes, with some Indians," where they "spent their Christmas holydays, and were well entertained," says Campanius, "at the Governor's house." After quitting this seat of "perpetual summer" (as the same gentleman depicts it) they encountered "a severe storm," accompanied at the last "with snow," which "continued above fourteen days," by which they "lost three large anchors, a spritsail, and their mainmast, and the ship was run aground; but on the 15th of February, 1643, by God's grace, came up to Fort Christina, in New Sweden, Virginia," in the precise phrases of the historian, "at two o'clock in the afternoon." Here the first three Swedish expeditions had established their chief settlement under Minuit and Ridder,[*] and here remained a short time, also, this fourth and greatest of the colonies, enjoying friendly intercourse with fellow-countrymen most glad to welcome them, and happily reposing from the distresses of their long and perilous voyage. The encroachments of the neighbouring Dutch and the recent repairing of their little Fort Nassau determined the new Governor to remove, however, to the more commanding post of Tutæænungh or Tini-

[*] Peter Minuit and the first colony sailed from Gottenburg on the ship-of-war Kalmar Nyckel, accompanied by a smaller vessel called Gripen, the Griffin, towards the close of December, 1637, and reached the river Delaware in March, or, at the latest, the beginning of April, 1638. The second colony, under Peter Hollender Ridder, sailed from Gottenburg in the same Kalmar Nyckel, or Key of Kalmar, leaving the Texel on the 7th of February, 1640, and, after a quick passage for those days, landed at Christina on the 17th of April following. And the third colony sailed from Gottenburg in the same well-tried vessel, accompanied by the ship Charitas, fitted out at Stockholm, and leaving that place for Gottenburg May 8, 1641. Besides these one other expedition had preceded Governor Printz in settling on the Delaware, a colony of Dutchmen with Jost van Bogardt, who emigrated under the auspices of the Swedish Crown in the ship Freedenburg, arriving in New Sweden on the 2d of November, 1640, and who occupied land three or four Swedish miles below Christina (Statements based, in great part, on the authority of MSS. Records relating to New Sweden in the Royal Archives at Stockholm. Acrelius, who is, in general, remarkably trustworthy and accurate, confounds the colony of 1641 with Printz's expedition, and makes but cursory mention of that of Ridder.)

cum, where he erected a "new fort provided with considerable armament," named by him Nya Götheborg, and "also caused to be built a mansion, for himself and family, which was very handsome," says Campanius, surrounded by "a fine orchard, a pleasure house, and other conveniences," and called by the proprietor Printzhof.[*] At this place, likewise, according to the same authority, "the principal inhabitants had their dwellings and plantations," and here resided Jöran Kyn. In a "Rulla" dated by Printz at "Kihrstina, June 20, 1644," preserved in the Royal Archives at Stockholm,[†] he is mentioned (under his appellation of Snöhuitt)[‡] as a soldier in the Governor's life-guard,[§] and in a "List of Persons living in New Sweden, March 1, 1648," is once more similarly described. It was not long before the small island in the Delaware, where these early colonists had their first homes in the New World, had ceased to afford sufficient scope for their fast growing families, and was abandoned by many of them for other

[*] "The dilapidated remains of what was said to be the chimney of this 'mansion,'" says Dr. George Smith in his excellent History of Delaware County, Pennsylvania, "were standing within the recollection of the author, and up to this time one of the small foreign-made bricks, of a pale yellow colour, of which it was partly constructed, may be occasionally picked up in the vicinity. Its site was a short distance above the present Tinicum hotel, and on the opposite side of the road." Benjamin Ferris, in his History of the Original Settlements on the Delaware, says: "This Hall stood more than 160 years, and was at last burnt down by accident, since the commencement of the present century."

[†] Printed (together with Governor Printz's second official report of the condition of the young Swedish colony, of the same date) at the end of an interesting little sketch of this earliest period of our annals, entitled "Kolonien Nya Sveriges Grundläggning, 1637–1642," written by the learned historian Professor C. T. Odhner on the occasion of the Centennial Exhibition recently held in Philadelphia, a translation of which is given in The Penna. Magazine of History and Biography, vol. iii. pp. 269–284, and 395–411.

[‡] In the "List" referred to immediately afterwards (written in German) the name is given as Schneeweiss, which means the same, of course, snow-white, and was applied to him, possibly, in consequence of some physical peculiarity, such as the lightness of his complexion. Designations of the sort were very common in the early Swedish colony.

residences on the main river shore. The site which proved attractive to the eyes of Jöran Kyn was Upland, and we cannot wonder at his choice of this abode. Not only did the place enjoy the privilege of close proximity to the seat of government (which still remained at Tinicum), but it was also favoured in the possession of great natural advantages (among the rest in being at the mouth of a navigable stream), and was, moreover, already in a good state of cultivation, having been occupied by farm-servants, in the employment of the Swedish Company who organized the colony, as a tobacco-plantation, as early as 1644.* The tract of land which he acquired was unusually large, even for those days of liberal grants, extending along a great part of the eastern bank of Upland Kill, now Chester Creek, for a mile and a half above its mouth—at the northwestern portion, upon which the Crozer Theological Seminary is situated at present, three-quarters of a mile in width—and reaching to the east along the Delaware as far as Ridley Creek.† It was about the period, probably, of the departure for "old Sweden"‡ of his friend and fellow-sol-

* See the "Relation" and "Rulla" already referred to. These contain the first mention of the name of Upland as yet discovered, preceding by four years that presumed to be the earliest at the time of the publication, by the Historical Society, of the "Record of Upland Court." "The name might seem rather English than Swedish," says Mr. Edward Armstrong, "were it not known that many of the emigrants came from Upland, a province in Middle Sweden on the Baltic, to which the natural features of the new region bore some resemblance." The Indian name of the country bordering on Upland Creek was, according to the Royal Swedish Engineer, Peter Lindström, Meskopenachan.

† The boundaries of this estate may, in a measure, be discerned even in the remnants of it still accredited to him in a drawing of Chester, without date, but made some time after the arrival of the English settlers, inserted in Dr. George Smith's well-known History of Delaware County, Pennsylvania. The identification of them in the text has been confirmed for me, very kindly, by John Hill Martin, Esq., author of the interesting book on Chester.

dier* Governor Printz that he resigned his military functions, and gave himself more unreservedly to the pursuits of agriculture; and these, with the care of his youthful family, continued to be his chief engagements, and detained him ever at Upland, during the rest of his long life. It is to be regretted that we can glean so little information, comparatively, about the settlers on our river at this remotest period of our history, but that they were men of more than ordinary energy, savouring of the spirit of bold Viking ancestry, seems plainly indicated by the fact of their so early embarkation for our wild and distant shores. That Jöran Kyn was likewise noted for singular gentleness of disposition, and great excellence of character—qualities not always accompanying the former trait—we have more positive testimony. The Dutch Commissary Huygen, in a letter to his "cousin," Vice-Director Beekman, dated "Tinnackunk, 29th M'ch, 1663," alluding to a violent assault upon him by a certain "miscreant" of Upland a few days before, speaks of him as "the pious Jurriaen Snewit, a man who has never irritated a child even."† And the very

Holland by the new year, and arrived in Sweden in April, 1654. (See the admirable Akademisk Afhandling, entitled Kolonien Nya Sveriges Historia, by Carl K. S. Sprinchorn, Stockholm, 1878, a translation of which appears in The Penna. Magazine of History and Biography, vol. VII, pp. 395–419, and vol. VIII, pp. 17–44, 129–159, and 241–254.)

* It will be remembered that Printz was himself a soldier, and before his appointment to the Governorship of New Sweden Lieutenant-Colonel of the West Götha Cavalry, and after his return to his native country promoted to the rank of General. Whether the intimacy of his relations with Jöran Kyn can best be accounted for by the supposition of a companionship in arms on European battle-fields is matter for conjecture.

† "Den vromen Jurriaen Snewit, een mensch die geen kind oijt heft vertoornt." I am indebted for the expressions (in the very language in which they were written by Commissary Huygen) to the kind courtesy of the late accomplished Mr. B. Fernow, Keeper of the Historical Records in the Office of the Secretary of State at Albany, and editor of the last volume of Documents relating to the Colonial History of the State of New York, comprising "Documents relating to the History of the Dutch and Swedish Settlements on the Delaware River." He says that the original letter is still in existence at Albany, having been kept by Vice-Director Beekman among his official correspondence, or sent by him to Governor Peter Stuyvesant. Mr. Samuel Hazard refers to the circumstance related in it in his Annals of Pennsylvania, p. 345, copying from the translation full report in the "Court Minutes kept at Fort Altena" of the trial of the offender on the 7th and 16th of April, following, quite corroborates his judgment.* In conformity with the order of the Court of Assizes at New York, he obtained, August 1, 1665, a renewal, by the English authorities, of his patent for land at Upland, and again, August 4, 1668, a confirmation to him of "three lots of land in his possession," described in the Abstract of Patents still preserved in the Office of the Secretary of State at Albany.† He was one of the seventeen "Tydable Persons" residing at Upland in 1677, and one of "the responsible housekeepers" named in the "Census" of 1680. At a court held at Chester the "3d day in the 1st week of the 10th month, 1686," he

of the learned, but unfortunately dim-sighted, and, therefore, frequently inaccurate, Dr. Adriaen van der Kemp. The latter gives both names of Kyn and Snewit, writing the first, by reason of his infirmity, Kuyp (printed by Mr. Hazard Kuys), and the second Sneart. The marginal account of the matter given in the Annals seems to indicate that the excellent author of that work was not aware of Jöran Kyn's having survived the dastardly assault, and having brought the criminal to punishment. Both the trial of the scoundrel, and the letter quoted from, are to be seen at large in Mr. Fernow's invaluable contribution to our early history, on pages 424–6. The letter, at least, though not the trial, has been reprinted from this work in the VIIth Volume of the Second Series of Pennsylvania Archives, at page 699.

* The process is headed "Jurriaen Kijn, plaint., against Evert Hendrickson, the Finn, deft." It appears from Jöran Kyn's "remonstrance" that the man had once before assaulted him, threatening his life, the previous autumn. "This, however, was settled, but it was under the condition that, if he made trouble afterwards, the complaint about it should be repeated. The plaintiff said further, that defendant was an unruly man, who troubled the place at Upland's Kil." Judging from the rest of the testimony elicited, the Finn seems, indeed, to have been a sort of desperado: he was banished from Upland for his ill behaviour, and removed to the vicinity of New Castle. The trial is of special interest to the antiquarian, as indicating the names of several residents of Upland not elsewhere mentioned as living there. Among others occurs that of Dr. Tymon Stidden, the surgeon appointed for the colony by the City of Amsterdam, and the original grantee of a great part of the land upon which the city of Wilmington, Delaware, is situated. Of all the persons who then dwelt there Jöran Kyn was the only one who remained at Upland to connect the history of these very early inhabitants with the times of William Penn.

† A copy of this patent is also to be seen in the Surveyor-General's Office at Harrisburg.

reclaimed a fugitive servant. At another, held the "3d day in the 2d week of the 2d month, 1687," he "made over a deed for a parcell of land lying and being in Chester with all the appurtenances and lotts, dated the 18th day of the 11th month, 1686, to James Saunderlaine and his Heirs forever"—the estate referred to, probably, in the action of the Court on the "3d day in the 1st week of the 10th month" following, when "James Saunderlaine was attested constable for the township and Liberty of Chester, or that he see the office duly executed until another be attested in his Roome, which service is upon the account of his father-in-law Urin Keens farme which the said James purchased"—a curious entry, certainly, and one seeming to indicate the recognition in those days of an obligation on the part of large proprietors to maintain the peace of their respective neighbourhoods. Finally, at a court held "the 6th day of the 1st month, 1687,"* he made over a deed dated "the 1st day" of the same month, conveying a lot in Chester, adjoining his "lot or Garding" (and where, probably, his so-called "town-house" was situated†), to certain persons, in trust, "to the use and behoof of the said Chester meeting of the people of God called Quakers and their successors forever," upon which ground the First Meeting-house of Friends at Chester was built. This is the latest mention, it is believed, of Jöran Kyn, as living, and since his name does not appear in Charles Springer's list of Swedes who were residing on the Delaware in May, 1693, it seems reasonable to infer that he died during the interval of time. He was, of course, a Swedish Lutheran in religion, and, no doubt, was buried either in the cemetery of his fellow-countrymen at Chester or in the older one at Tinicum.‡ He was married, but his wife's name has not come down to us. And he is the ancestor of eleven generations of descendants born on American soil—a number probably not surpassed by other European colonists of the United States. He had at least three children, bearing the following names:

2. HANS, m. Willemka.
3. JONAS, m.
4. ANNA, m. 1st, James Sandelands; and 2dly, Peter Baynton.

2. HANS KYN OR KEEN,[2] son of Jöran Kyn, born, it may be, in America, was brought up by his father at Upland, and endowed, at least as early as 1668, with two hundred acres of land, a part of the original paternal grant. Here he resided for several years, having his estate confirmed to him as "one of ye six* Inhabitants of Upland Towne." In the list of "Tydables" of 1677 he appears among the persons living at "Taokanink,"† and at a court at Upland, March 12, 1677–8, we find him acknowledging a deed of sale of the Upland property. He seems to have shared the impulse which led so many of the Swedish settlers, about this time, to move higher up the Delaware, to the

"The site of the burying place, and doubtless that of the church also," says Dr. Smith, "was close on the margin of the river, and is now occupied by a part of its bed between the Lazaretto and Tinicum Hotel, but nearer the latter. It is not many years since human bones were seen protruding from the undermined and receding bank of the river."

* The others were, probably, his father, Jöran Kyn, his brother-in-law, James Sandelands, the Rev. Lawrence Charles Lock, Capt. Israel Helm (a native of Sweden, formerly Collector of the Customs at "Passayung," member of Capt. Carre's Council, and Justice of Upland Court, frequently interpreter with the Indians), and either Jost Danielsen or Niels Matson (whose wife Margaret is noted as the only person ever tried for witchcraft in Pennsylvania), or else Niels Laerson, at whose house—a kind of hostelry—the early courts of Upland held their sessions. Some of the residents at Upland at this time may have been tenants of, or purchasers from, the six principal proprietors.

neighbourhood of the "Sissowokissinck" (now called Wissinoming) and the Pennipack. On both of these creeks he purchased land, as well as in the intermediate region. With two* of the tracts he is accredited on Thomas Holme's and John Harris's Maps of Pennsylvania, and the deed for them, dated April 26, 1679, entered on the back of a grant from Governor Andros, March 25, 1676, has been in the possession of his descendants ever since.† In it he is described as "husbandman." He was married and his wife's Christian name was Willemka: her surname we are not acquainted with. Her name occurs, instead of his, among the chief subscribers to the salary of the Lutheran pastor Jacobus Fabritius, August 10, 1684, indicating, apparently, that he had died before that date. In May, 1693, she is mentioned as his relict, living with her four younger sons, with whom she continued to reside at least until the close of 1697. After so long a widowhood she became the second wife of Caspar Fisck, of Gloucester Co., West New Jersey,‡ one of the more prominent of the early colonists upon the Delaware, and trustee, vestryman, and warden of the Lutheran congregation at Wicacoa. She was alive at the time he made his will, January 5, 1707–8, and may have survived him also.§ She had five children by her first husband, all of them sons:

This ground, "bounded wth Pemibackes Creeke, & ye fast Land of Taokanink," now belongs to the City of Philadelphia, and is occupied, at present, by the "House of Correction." "Pimypacka" is spoken of by Campanius as an "Indian settlement, very rich and fruitful."

† Although paper merely, not parchment, it is still in good condition. A copy of the patent is preserved in the Office of the Secretary of State at Albany; and one of both grant and deed, in the Surveyor-General's Office at Harrisburg. The last of the land passed out of the ownership of the family April 10, 1855; a mortgage on a portion of it was alone retained.

After his marriage he occupied for a time his brother's land, on which he built a "new Blocq house,"[†] but by 1677 abandoned this home and followed Hans Keen to "Taokanink." We find no trace of him then upon the west bank of the Delaware, but in 1680 his name occurs among those of "y^{e} freeholders & Inhabitants within [the jurisdiction] of the Court at Burlington," entered in a book of "Burlington Records" in the Office of the Secretary of State at Trenton. The same book also records, and gives a drawing of, the "earmark" by which he used to designate his cattle. It likewise mentions, under date of a Court, September 6, 1680, from whom he claimed to hold his land. "Revel's Book of Surveys," preserved in the same Office, contains surveys to him, August 4, 1682, of two "plantations," one of a hundred acres, in the second tenth of Samuel Jenings, "at or near a place called Pempissinck," conveyed to him November 2, of that year, and another, of five hundred acres, adjoining it and to the south, "within ye second Tenn properties," purchased by him (jointly with two neighbours) of Thomas Budd and Thomas Gardner, December 20, 1683.

showing that he took a lively interest in the welfare of the parish. He lived for several years after 1754. It is not certainly known whether he left posterity.

6. ERICK KEEN,[3] son of Hans and Willemka Keen, was born at Upland, and removed with his father's family up the Delaware, where he grew to manhood, and married Catharine, daughter of Jan Claassen, younger sister of his brother Matthias Keen's wife. Through her he inherited fifty acres of land in Bristol Township, Bucks Co., Pa., part of his father-in-law's estate. He purchased, March 4, 1702–3, from his cousin Maons Keen three acres of land and meadow in Chester Township, Burlington Co., N. J., but whether he ever resided there cannot now be ascertained. On the 25th of January, 1706–7, his mother and brothers deeded to him a hundred acres acquired by Matthias Keen from Erick Möllicka, originally one of his father Hans Keen's tracts (the lower one of the two ascribed to "Enock and Keene" upon Holme's Map), situated on the Delaware River, at the mouth and along the eastern side of Wissinoming Creek. Erick Keen was already in possession of it, and he continued to dwell on it, engaged in agricultural pursuits, the rest of his life. His name appears in Pastor Andrew Rudman's list of the Lutheran congregation of Wicacoa in 1697–8, and in the first list of pewholders in Gloria Dei Church in 1705, and among contributors to the salaries of the Swedish clergy at sundry times. He subscribed to the erection of the present Church edifice in 1700, and lived to contribute to the repair of it in 1738, and aided in 1717 in building the parsonage at Passyunk, and was for many years Vestryman and Warden of the Congregation of Wicacoa. He was one of the gentlemen who made the present of American fur to Mr. Secretary Lilljeblad, spoken of in the account of Matthias Keen, and signed the petition, also there referred to, addressed to the General Assembly of the Province on occasion of certain grievances inflicted on the Swedes by the Proprietary Government. After the death of his first wife he married Brigitta (her surname unknown to us), who survived him. His will is dated January 7, 1741–2, and was admitted to probate on the 28th of the same month. He was, without doubt, buried in Gloria Dei

By his first wife he had five children:

25. Hans, m. Mary Laican.
26. Peter, b. February 26, 1703; m., 1st, Margaret; 2dly, Ann.
27. John.
28. Matthias, m. Sarah Harper.
29. Catharine, m. Robert Glen.

By his second wife he had three children:

30. Daniel, b. 1722–3; m. Elizabeth McCarty.
31. Jonas, b. 1725–6, resided on his father's farm in Oxford Township (bequeathed to his brother Daniel Keen and him) at least until the spring of 1753. He married (his wife's name not known), and had issue living in 1765, and was killed by a stroke of lightning.[*]
32. Mary, in her father's will directed "to be brought up by her mother and brothers," Daniel and Jonas, "till of age or married."

[*] It is probable that one of his children was a certain Elizabeth Keen, b. in Frankford, Philadelphia County, Pa., April 16, 1763, unless she were a daughter of his elder brother Daniel Keen. She m., 1st, Daniel Hartung, who came from Dantzig, Prussia, to Philadelphia, and pursued the trade of a furrier. He had acquaintance and correspondence with John Jacob Astor, progenitor of the Astor family of New York, and, according to family tradition, suggested to Astor engaging in the fur trade, and, afterwards, advised him to invest his profits in real estate. He purchased skins of Astor in New York City. He prospered in business and acquired various tracts of land in Pennsylvania and Virginia. He d. in Philadelphia, October 4, 1798. His wife survived him and m., 2dly, in New Castle, Del., June 30, 1805, Richard Phepoe, of New York. She d. in Philadelphia, and was buried (First Reformed Church Register) January 27, 1807. One only of the children of Daniel and Elizabeth Hartung married and left issue, viz: Elizabeth, who became the wife of George Wheaton Fobes, of Norton, Mass. They had three sons, Thomas, George, and Albert, none of whom had issue, and four daughters: Ellen, who m. Thomas Earp, parents of Charles, William, Elizabeth, who m. Louis T. Tilge, and Ellen Louise, who m. Frederic S. Groves; Louise, who m. William A. Newbold, parents of George Newbold, who d. unm., Albert Newbold, father of William Newbold, M.D., and Thomas Earp Newbold, of "Brookedale," Chesterfield Township, Burlington Co., N. Two portraits of Mrs. Hartung are in the possession of the family.

Erick at Tacony at least until 1697. About this time he m. Frances, "sole daughter and heir of Francis Walker," whose name occurs in the list of "Tydables" residing at Taokanink in 1677, and who owned a plantation at "Passayuncke" as well as one, indicated on Holme's Map, situated on the west bank of Neshaminy Creek, rather more than a mile above its mouth, granted to him by a patent from Governor Andros, dated March 25, 1676. To the latter tract, containing about 225 acres, "called Point Pleasant," in Bensalem Township, Bucks Co., Pa., (his wife's heritage,) Jonas Keen had already removed by 1699, and he resided on it at least until October, 1716, when he purchased a farm of 68 acres, in the same Township, where he probably dwelt until his sale of it in February, 1739–40. This is the last notice of him met with: his wife was still alive. He is described as "yeoman" in legal documents. He is mentioned as contributing to the salary of the Swedish pastor Andrew Rudman in 1697, and as subscribing towards the erection, in 1700, of the Lutheran Church at Wicacoa (his name also occurring in the first list of pewholders), besides making a similar donation to the congregation in 1704, and aiding in rebuilding the parsonage at Passyunk in 1717. Two children only have been identified:

33. A child (the name not given) baptized (Gloria Dei Church Records) in 1699.
34. CHRISTINA, m. Robert Brodnax.

10. MÅNS OR MOUNCE KYN OR KEEN,^{3} "son and heir of Jonas Keen," was born at Upland, October, 1664,* and in his youth removed with his father to West Jersey, where he lived on the banks of the river Delaware, at the mouth of Pompession Creek. After his father's death he sold this land, and in one of the deeds for it, dated December 24, 1719, is styled "of Pittsgrove Precinct, Co. Salem." He was one of the most active Vestrymen and Wardens of the Swedish Lutheran Church on Raccoon Creek (now Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church, Swedesboro, N. J.), and, doubtless, one of the contributors to the first building of it, in 1703–4, as he certainly was to the purchase of the pastor's dwelling some years afterwards. With regard to the latter, Acrelius* says: "The congregation deliberated about this for eight years, and it was discussed in every parish meeting, until Mr. Jesper Svedberg† and Måns Kyn took it upon themselves to go from house to house, and urge the people to unite and bind themselves for the purchase of a suitable parsonage. † He was the son of Dr. Jesper Svedberg, the Bishop of Skara (who had jurisdiction over the Swedish Lutheran Congregations on the Delaware), and brother to the noted heresiarch Emmanuel Swedenborg. He was at this time acting as teacher of the school near Raccoon Church, a post he filled for over a year.

‡ The Göran Kyn, or George Keen, here referred to, was a Warden of the Lutheran Congregation at Raccoon, and either a brother, or a cousin-german of Maons Keen—in the latter case, of course, the person elsewhere mentioned as the son of Hans and Willemka Keen. He m., 1st, October OK 30, 1705, Anna or Annika, second child of Nils and Maria Gästenberg, of Lower Dublin Township, Philadelphia Co., Pa., and granddaughter of Olof Nilsson Gästenberg, an early settler on the Delaware, b. 1683, d. 1706 163 (leaving one child, Annika, who m. Andrew Toy, son, doubtless, of Elias Toy, of Senamensing, New Jersey); and, 2dly, November, 1706, Helena, daughter of Erick Pålsson Möllicka, a native of Mora Parish, in the Province of Helsingland, Sweden, an early emigrant to our river, by his wife Ingeborg, daughter of Captain Israel Helm, of Sweden (by whom he had several children, most of whom died in infancy). According to a note made fully fifty years afterwards by the Rev. Nicholas Collin to an entry in the Parish Register, he d. in April, 1736, and was buried the 10th in Raccoon Swedish Cemetery. Perhaps, however, this was his son, of the same name, b. October 14, 1717, and he may, possibly, be the person whose marriage (in that case his third one) is thus described in "Abraham Reincke's private record of official acts in the Brethren's mission of New Jersey" (see Appendix to Acrelius's "History," p. 444): "Married, June 8, 1745, George Kyn, a widower, aged 64, to Margaret Justis, a widow, aged 58, after the banns had been thrice published—first in Raccoon, next in Penn's Neck, and for the last time in Maurice River. The ceremony was performed in the groom's house on Maurice River, in the presence of the entire Swedish Congregation of said neighbourhood." This George Keen had land surveyed to him on the east side of Maurice River, July 14, 1737; and purchased, September 20, the same year, ninety acres of land in Gloucester County, on the east side of Oldman's Creek. He left a son Erick, styled in 1750 his "only surviving heir-at-law," who m. (Raccoon Swedish Church Register) November 17, 1736, Catharine Denny, with issue several children, who intermarried with the families of Lippincott, Hick-

this purpose, at the distance of about a Swedish mile from Raccoon, and a mile and a half from Pennsneck. It lies in Pilesgrove township, consists of one hundred and seventeen acres of land, and cost £145. The purchase was made on the 21st of March, 1720. A fine building was erected upon it, with sleeping-rooms in the upper part and more land for grain was cleared." Mr. Keen appears to have retained his knowledge of the Swedish language, in spite of the gradually encroaching influences of English settlers on the Delaware, for in the following spring he is spoken of in the Parish Records as receiving from Sweden two Bibles, three Hymn-books, and a Catechism. On the return to Europe of the Reverend Samuel Hesselius, pastor of the congregation at Christina,* he signed an address, in company with Peter Rambo, as members of the Church Council of Raccoon, October 31, 1731, commending that clergyman to the consideration of King Frederick, of Sweden. He was visited by Peter Kalm during the prolonged sojourn of the celebrated botanist in the neighbourhood of Raccoon Creek, and some of their conversations are recorded in the interesting journal of the great naturalist's Travels into North America.† He is personally referred to by Professor Kalm, (ibid.), December 11, 1784, Samuel Cabb, of Maurice River, a son, doubtless, or grandson of William Cabb or Cobb, of Amasland, Pa., an owner of the old Swedes' mill erected by Governor Printz upon the creek which bears Cobb's name, and one of the four Wardens, who, in 1703, received conveyance of the ground on which Raccoon Swedish Lutheran Church was built.

* Successor to his brother, Provost Andreas Hesselius. He arrived in this country December 3, 1719, and officiated in the beginning as Pastor Extraordinary to the Congregation of Wicacao, with special charge of the people who resided at Neshaminy, Manathanim, and Matzong (the present Conshohocken). He married, first (Christina Swedish Lutheran Church Register), June 9, 1720, Brita Laican, and, secondly, Gertrude Stille, both relatives of descendants of Jöran Kyn. The latter wife, according to Acrelius, "died upon the voyage between America and England, and was buried in the ocean. The children, who returned home, were Andrew, Christina. Sarah, and Samuel."

December 7, 1748, in the following terms: "Maons Keen, one of the Swedes in Raccoon, was now near seventy years old: he had many children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren; so that, of those who were yet alive, he could muster up forty-five persons. Besides them, several of his children and grandchildren died young, and some in a mature age. He was, therefore, uncommonly blessed." In 1751 Mr. Keen acted as sponsor for a son of the Reverend Erick and Maria Unander, in company with "Provost Israel Acrelius, Pastor Olof Parlin, Herr Adolph Benzel, Elizabeth Parlin, Madam Sarah Porter, and Helena Van Neeman." Mr. Keen's first wife was Magdalena Hoppman or Hoffman.[] She died October 19, 1721, and was buried in the Swedish Lutheran Cemetery on Raccoon Creek. He married, secondly, August 15, 1722, Elizabeth, daughter of Nils Laican or Lycon, eldest son of Peter Nilsson Laykan, a native, it is presumed, of Sweden,[†] whose name is given in the Raccoon Church Register as Elizabeth Georgen, from whence we may infer that at the time of her nuptials with Maons Keen she was a widow. Mrs. Keen inherited from her father an interest in certain land in the Northern Liberties, Philadelphia Co., Pa., known as "Poor Island" (surveyed to her grandfather by virtue of a warrant dated March 10, 1679–80), which she conveyed, December 21, 1744, to her stepsons, John and Nicholas Keen. She is mentioned in the Records of Raccoon Parish as godparent, in 1730, with Colonel Rolf, Captain Vining, and Mrs. Hollbrook, for a daughter of the Reverend Peter and Anna Catharina Tranberg, and she was still living during the pastorate of the Reverend John Wicksell, who gives her name in the list of communicants of that church. The latter thus records her husband's death: "Moses Keen, Senior, died June 3, 1770, in a kind of pleurisie,† about 105 years old, and was buried, June 5, at Raccoon." Less accurate as to the date of death, but more precise as to the age, The Pennsylvania Gazette for October 11, 1770, prints the following obituary

The extract in the text occurs in volume ii. page 4. The phrase "near seventy years old" is to be explained or corrected in accordance with the first of the previously mentioned passages, where Mr. Keen is described as "a Swede above seventy years old."

[*] Daughter of Andrew Hoppman, and granddaughter, probably, of Sergeant Hans Hopman, a resident on the river Delaware at least as early as 1656, and one of the "Tydables" of the "Eastern Shore" in 1677, whose son, Frederick Hopman, was one of the four Wardens of Raccoon Swedish Lutheran Church referred to in a former note.

* This name was probably given him in his old age by English neighbours, fancying it to be the equivalent of the Swedish Måns, which is, of course, but a shortened form of the Latin Magnus, the name of several old Scandinavian kings and prelates, and in popular use in Sweden to-day. It was first assumed, it is said, by a pagan sovereign of Sweden at the time of his baptism, the bishop who conferred the sacrament replying to his query "Who was the greatest monarch of Christendom?" "Carolus Magnus."

† An interesting account of this malady is given by Kalm in the work already cited, vol. 1. pp. 376–9. "The pleurisy," he says, "is a disease which the people of this country are much subject to. The Swedes in this province call it stitches and burning (stick och brånna). Many people die every year of it. In the autumn of the year 1728 it swept away many at Penn's Neck. Almost all the Swedes there died of it, though they were very numerous. The autumn of the year 1748 it began to make dreadful havock, and every week six or ten of the old people died. The disease was so violent that, when it attacked a person, he seldom lived above two or three days; and of those who were taken ill with it very few recovered. It was a true pleurisy, but it had a peculiarity with it, for it commonly began with a great swelling under the throat and in the neck, and with a difficulty of swallowing. Some people looked upon it as contagious. The physicians did not know what to make of it, nor how to remedy it." It is, probably, the disease referred to in the Parish Register by Pastor Wicksell, who, after giving a list of the "permanent communicants" in his time (1762–74), explains—"these few, owing to great sickness taking off so many of the old Swedes."

notice of the long-lived gentleman: "The beginning of August last departed this Life at Pilesgrove, in West New Jersey, Mr. Mounce Keen, aged 105 Years, and 8 Months. He was born of Swedish Parents, at Chester, in Pennsylvania, and always enjoyed his Health and Understanding well till within the few last Years of his Life. About three Years before his Death, he rode alone three Miles, and home again." He is, it is believed, the only centenarian descendant of Jöran Kyn, although there are several nonagenarian descendants, and offspring of at least four centenarians* have intermarried with the family.

* Nicolas de la Plaine, aged 105 years (see Rev. Timothy Alden's Collection of American Epitaphs, pentade i. vol. v. pp. 174-5); Mrs. Hannah Milner, aged 100 years and 10 months (The Pennsylvania Gazette, July 13, 1769); Arthur Strangeways, aged 101 years (Watson's Annals of Philadelphia, 1st ed. p. 511); and John Strangeways Hutton, aged 108 years and 4 months (ibid. pp. 510-11, and The Inscriptions in St. Peter's Church Yard, Philadelphia, p. 313).

† Another child, most probably, was Christina Keen, who m. (Raccoon Swedish Church Register), December 2, 1724, Peter Rambo, of Gloucester County, N. J. (b. January 6, 1694; d. April-May, 1753), a Warden of the Church on Raccoon Creek (at whose house Professor Kalm on one occasion (Travels, vol. i. p. 334) "staid the night"), son of John Rambo, described in The Breviate, Penn v. Lord Baltimore, f. 103, in 1740, as "of New Jersey, Farmer, aged 79, born in the Place now called Pensilvania, near where the City of Philadelphia now stands, where he resided for above the first 20 Years of his Life, and since resided in the Jerseys." The latter was one of the Proprietors of West New Jersey, being the youngest brother of Gunnar and Peter Rambo, Members of the Assembly of the Province of Pennsylvania for Philadelphia County, and the son of Peter Gunnarsson Rambo, of Sweden (who came to America with Minuit or Ridder), a Magistrate of the Swedish Colony, appointed Commissary by Gov. Stuyvesant, Member of Captain Carr's Council by Gov. Lovelace, and finally, by Gov. Andros, one of the "Justices for the River." Peter Rambo's mother was Brita Cock, sister of Capt. Lawrence Cock, Justice of Upland Court, and Member of Gov. Markham's and subsequent Provincial Councils, and of the Assembly of Pennsylvania for Philadelphia County, Penn's first Interpreter with the Indians, and daughter of Peter Larsson Kock (by his wife Margaret), who was sent out from Sweden in 1641, in the service of the West India Company, and settled on a tobacco plantation on the Schuylkill, but some years afterwards received his freedom, and occupied the same offices as are above accredited to Peter Gun-

By his second wife he had at least five children, born in Salem County, New Jersey:

38. Peter, b. March 21, 1723; m. 1st, Elizabeth Basset; 2dly, Catharine.
39. Mary, b. April 6, 1727; m. Jonas Henricson.

12. Catharine Sandelands,[3] daughter of James and Ann (Keen) Sandelands, was born at Upland, January 26, 1670–1. She married, first, Alexander Creker, who died, however, probably without issue, not long afterwards, letters of administration on his estate being granted March 16, 1690–1 (with her consent) to Mr. Sandelands, "his principal creditor." Hereupon Mrs. Creker married, secondly, Jasper Yeates, of Philadelphia County, a native of Yorkshire, England, a gentleman of considerable intelligence and force of character, who emigrated to the West Indies, and afterwards settled as a marchant on the Delaware.* Mr.

Peter and Christina (Keen) Rambo had seven children: of whom two sons, John (b. November, 1725), and Benjamin (b. March 3, 1732), each married twice, and left numerous descendants; and a daughter, Elizabeth (b. January 2, 1728), m. Thomas Denny, Sheriff of Gloucester Co., N. J., whose daughter, Rachel (b. October 30, 1749), m., March 25, 1772, Robert Brown, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel of the First Battalion of Gloucester County Militia, and of Colonel Nicholas Stilwell's Regiment of New Jersey State Troops, in the War of the Revolution, and chief contributor to, and trustee of, the fund for building the present Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church in Swedesboro, N. J.

Another child may, possibly, have been Annika Keen, who m. (Raccoon Swedish Church Register), December 7, 1728, Gustaf Gustafsson (or Justis), of West New Jersey (d. July 15, 1762, aged 65 years), grandson, doubtless, of Jöns Göstafsson Illack, of Sweden, who "bought a piece of ground," says the aged son of the latter, Nils Gustafsson, in the course of a long conversation with Professor Kalm on the customs of the early Swedish settlers on our river (Kalm's Travels, vol. ii. p. 118), "from the Indians in New Jersey." They had several children, who intermarried with the families of Dahlbo, String, and Cox, and left posterity.

He d. not long after, letters of administration on his estate being granted August 16, 1738. Mrs. Maddock m., 2dly, William Smith, described in April, 1749, as "of the City of Philadelphia, tanner," appointed guardian for his wife's niece, Elizabeth Venables, in 1757, and still living in Philadelphia in 1758. He recrossed the ocean, and on his second arrival here, March 30, 1702, produced a certificate from Newton Meeting, in Cheshire, dated "9th mo. 7, 1701." April 5, 1703, he received a certificate to return to England, at which time he does not appear to have had a wife. Once more, however, he came back to this country, bringing with him his wife, Sarah Maddock, followed by a certificate from Friends of Nottingham Monthly Meeting, in England, dated "1st mo. 2, 1726–7." Mrs. Maddock died soon after, and Mordecai Maddock married, at Springfield Meeting, November 8, 1733, Dorothy, widow of Philip Roman, of Chichester, with witnesses Henry, John, Benjamin, James, and Elizabeth Maddock, probably his children. In 1736, as the only surviving trustee of the Meeting property acquired from Jöran Kyn, he signed a deed conveying the same to Edward Russell, the Meeting being removed to another site. After that year nothing more is heard of him. (Facts for most of which I am indebted to the civility of Mr. Gilbert Cope, of West Chester.)

He married in November, 1713, Susannah, eldest daughter, and second child, of James Steelman, of Great Egg Harbor, Gloucester Co., New Jersey, "Gentleman," by his first wife, Susannah, daughter of Christina Toy,[†] born in 1694. Her father is mentioned in Springer's list of Swedes who resided on the Delaware in May, 1693, and among the members of the Swedish Lutheran Congregation of Wicacoa during the pastorate of the Rev. Mr. Rudman. He owned the ground now occupied by Atlantic City,[‡] and in his will, dated August 2, 1734, preserved in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton, bequeaths "slaves & servants, lands, cedar swamps & Beaches, houses, Barnes, mills, and orchards," situated in the present Atlantic County, N. J. To his "daughter Susannah" he leaves a token of remembrance, with the explanation, "the reason that I give her no more is because I have given her many valuable things already." Like his father, Matthias Keen, John Keen signed a petition to the General Assembly of the Province, relating to encroachment on lands held by the Swedes before the advent of the Quaker Proprietor. "Penn's Commissioners," says Acrelius,[§] "continued to question the Swedish titles through the Duke of York, to clip off pieces from their lands, to put on higher rents, and to withhold their old deeds. He inherited through her a fifth part of "Poor Island," already spoken of, and in 1727, in conjunction with his younger brother, Peter Keen, purchased two additional fifths of the same land, and resided (probably upon that farm) in Shackamaxon, in the Northern Liberties, until his death. Letters of administration on his estate were granted to his father November 24, 1737. He had two children:

83. REBECCA, m. (Gloria Dei Church Register), November 1, 1753, George Breintnall, styled, September 18, 1755, "of the City of Philadelphia, printer."
84. WILLIAM, m. Anne Shillingsforth.

26. PETER KEEN,[4] son of Erick and Catharine (Claassen) Keen, was born in Oxford Township, Philadelphia Co., Pa., February 26, 1703, but removed by 1727 to the city of Philadelphia, where he resided, at least, until the close of 1733.

Settlements on the Delaware. On these is built a great part of the city of Wilmington. Dr. Stidden's will was signed February 1, and admitted to probate April 24, 1686. The Doctor was married twice (his second wife being "Christina Gel's daughter"), and had several children, with numerous descendants, residing, for the most part, in Delaware, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey. One of his posterity still preserves the metal case, in which he carried his surgical instruments on visits to his patients of the early Swedish Colony, interestingly authenticated by bearing his name and title engraved upon it.

* Possibly, the "little son of Erick Keen," whose baptism is recorded in Gloria Dei Church Account-Book for 1699.

In November of the latter year he purchased four acres of land in Wicacoa, Philadelphia Co., and lived there in November, 1735, when he added to this lot four acres of ground adjoining it. In 1747 he again dwelt in the city, where he remained, at least, until September, 1755. During that month he bought the only interest in "Poor Island" (before referred to) not already held by him, and between this date and 1758 removed to that plantation, which comprised about three hundred acres of land, situated in Kensington, Philadelphia Co., a mile and a half from the river Delaware, on the north side of Tumanaramaming, or Gunners Run, above the mouth of a small branch which formed its eastern boundary.* On this fine country-seat Mr. Keen was pleased to spend the last ten years of his life. He was, by occupation, a merchant, though frequently described in deeds as "gentleman." He prospered in his enterprises, owned numerous slaves, and acquired several houses and lots of ground on High (now Market), Arch, Race, and Fifth streets, in Philadelphia, besides some tracts in neighbouring townships. In 1753 he purchased the land on Wissinoming Creek bequeathed by his father to his step-brothers, Daniel and Jonas Keen (conveyed by him December 30, 1758, to Lynford Lardner, Esq., of Philadelphia). His name appears in the list of contributors to the Pennsylvania Hospital in 1754 for the sum of £10. He was a member of the Swedish Lutheran Church of Wicacoa, and was chosen by that congregation, October 24, 1750, one of twelve "Second Trustees" so called. He was married, at least, twice, but the surnames of his wives have not come down to us. His first wife, Margaret, died July 25, 1732, and was buried in Gloria Dei Churchyard. His last wife, Ann, is mentioned as a member of Wicacoa congregation in 1752, and was still living November 22, 1754, when, with her husband, she signed a deed of sale of property in the township of Lower Dublin. Mr. Keen died October 12, 1765, and was buried

28. MATTHIAS KEEN,^{4} son of Erick and Catharine (Claassen) Keen, was born in Oxford Township, Philadelphia Co., Pa. His father bequeathed to him three acres of land and meadow in Chester Township, Burlington, Co., New Jersey, purchased from Maons Keen, which he sold June 13, 1747, when he resided in Lower Dublin Township, Philadelphia Co. He married Sarah, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Harper, of Oxford Township,† born June 12, 1717, and baptized the following August at Trinity Church, Oxford, Philadelphia Co., through whom he acquired land in Oxford Township. They had six children, all baptized at Trinity Church:

* A descendant, it is said, of John Somers, a native of Worcester, England, who emigrated to Pennsylvania among the first settlers under William Penn, and resided in the northern part of Philadelphia County, where he married (Records of Abington Friends' Meeting) in 1685 Susannah Hodgkins. He was one of the signers of the testimony of Philadelphia Quarterly Meeting against George Keith in 1692. Soon after this he removed with his second wife, Hannah Somers, likewise a native of Worcester, to Great Egg Harbour, New Jersey, where he was appointed supervisor of the roads and constable as early as March 20, 1693. In 1695 he purchased from Thomas Budd several tracts of land, amounting to 1500 acres, on Great Egg Harbour River and Patconk Creek. He died at Somers Point in 1723, Mrs. Somers surviving him till 1738. (See History of Little Egg Harbour Township, Burlington County, N. J., by Leah Blackman; and The Friend, vol. xxviii. p. 396, and vol. xxix. p. 404.) A person of the same family name married Mary Steelman, of Great Egg Harbour, niece of Susannah Steelman, wife of John Keen, of Oxford Township, Philadelphia Co., Pa.

86. MARY KEEN,[5] daughter of Peter and Margaret Keen, was born in Philadelphia, Pa., about 1730. She married (license dated September 14, 1763) Joseph Stout, a sea-captain in the merchant service of our city, afterwards and until his death Lieutenant in His Majesty's Navy. Mrs. Stout inherited from her father half a dozen houses and lots in Philadelphia, and £3000 in currency. She died in this city, March 22, 1767, "aged thirty-six years," and was buried in Gloria Dei Churchyard, Wicacoa.† Captain Stout survived his wife six years, and was buried in the same Swedish Lutheran Cemetery, November 20, 1773. He made bequests to the Society for the Relief of Masters of Ships (which he joined in January, 1766), "the Poor of the Hospital of Philadelphia," and the children of his "brother Cornelius Stout," and left the residue of his estate, comprising a house in Spruce Street (doubtless his city residence), and land in Moyamensing, and on Frankford Road, "opposite the Plantation," belonging formerly to Peter Keen, afterwards called "Stouton," with negro slaves, and money at interest, to his only child, whom he appointed with his brother-in-law, Reynold Keen, and William Moore,‡ executors of his last will and testament:
